ASSOCIATIONS formed at Indiana University are often the basic threads which are woven into a full, successful life. Here on this campus a student meets strangers, cultivates friends. Here he learns to accept the opinions of others, and he grows in knowledge no one can find in a textbook.

A favorite instructor can be a dominant thread in the shaping of a student's vocational goals. Instructors are not always men with Ph. D.'s. As a visit to the Commons may renew one's willingness to study, a talk with a person who has a different geographic background can broaden one's perspective. Close friends can often reveal more information about people than can a well-prepared psychology lecturer.

The campus is a classroom, The Indiana Daily Student a blackboard recording the assignments, the lessons, and the mistakes made by students who are eager to take advantage of all educational opportunities. On this campus a student often meets the person who will help him weave his tapestry in life. A date in the Commons or the traditional kiss in the Wellhouse at midnight is as much a part of I. U. as is the carefully planned chemistry experiment. Alone, the student reflects what he has learned in his campus classroom. He sorts his new threads, chooses those which will fit his design, and begins to weave. The friends, the instructors, the activities, the disappointments, the victories are his threads; the I. U. campus, his loom; the tapestry, his future.

A quick cigarette; a breath of spring air, Hoosier style, and ten short minutes between classes give the right inspiration to reiterate a complicated lecture point or plan a week-end picnic at Brown County.

Cheers stop momentarily as all stand to dedicate the result of a long-standing Hoosier dream—the new Stadium.

Attitudes Alter Midst Snow-Covered Campus

Winter finals are approaching; grades fall lower every day; financial problems increase — and just when the world is at its worst, a mystic curtain of snow drapes the campus in wonder and shrouds the troubles of the University's thousands of students. The beauty of winter has a quieting effect on nervous tension created by too many worries. Cars may skid on the streets; students may slip into snowdrifts on their way to class; but the exhilaration which snow injects into the University seems to compensate for minor dangers.

In the midst of a snow storm, a troubled student can walk familiar paths with a different outlook. He remembers the color-splashed walk in the fall, and he can remember the fun he has known in his first semester as well as the headaches and the heartaches. The campus doesn't look quite so cruel with its gentle covering. He wanders, and he wonders. The disappointments and the failures are forgotten as Nature's gentle tranquilizer revives his dreams and his hopes for achievement in the future.

A glaring sun casts deep shadows on Ballantine but leaves its shadows behind students passing from class to class.

Nearly every visitor to Indiana University comments on the beauty of its campus, which is worthy of the artist's brush or the photographer's camera in any season of the year. Big, bold, and beautiful, Ballantine Hall points skyward, reminding the student that attaining a satisfactory education demands pursuing high goals. Shaped of enduring limestone, the buildings on campus are examples of strength and creativity which the student is challenged to match.

Sheltered by oaks and maples and guarded by limestone sentries, the magnificent home of the President stands in the center of campus. The secluded building provides a perfect backdrop for the seasons' different moods. It peeks through fall's brightly hued leaves, spring's faint green shrubs, or summer's brilliant foliage; and the scene in winter might have fallen off a painted Christmas card.

Beauty of Campus Accented Through the Seasons

Deep concentration demands strong will power amidst the new spring attire that recently dressed I. U.'s campus.

As evening approaches, the day is but half over, not only for those in the Union but the campus as well.

Thousands of thoughts and ideas pass over the Jordan daily; some are quite quickly forgotten, others remain to build upon.

The blanket of snow around Kirkwood is stitched into a crazy quilt by thousands of students wading to class.

"While life and voice shall last"

"We're Poor Little Lambs..."

"While life and song shall last" describes part of the restless spirit of college youth fighting to remove the restraining bonds of supervisory forces. Before assuming the responsibilities of mature adulthood, they have the right and the opportunity to be momentarily carefree, to pause in the pursuit of academic studies, and to experience some of the things they have read about in books.

Whether it is during a round of TGIFing, a picnic at Brown County, a quick dip in an off-limits quarry, or a thousand other settings, there appears a never-to-come-again opportunity to know people from a variety of backgrounds on an equal basis. They have their youthful fling, are scoffed at by the short-memoried older generation, and then they pass and are "forgotten like the rest."

"We're poor little lambs who have lost our way . . . and we'll pass and be forgotten like the rest."

Faculty—Incentive for Student Self-Locomotion

Thomas F. Barton, professor of geography, discusses his favorite topic—conservation—in an appropriate setting.

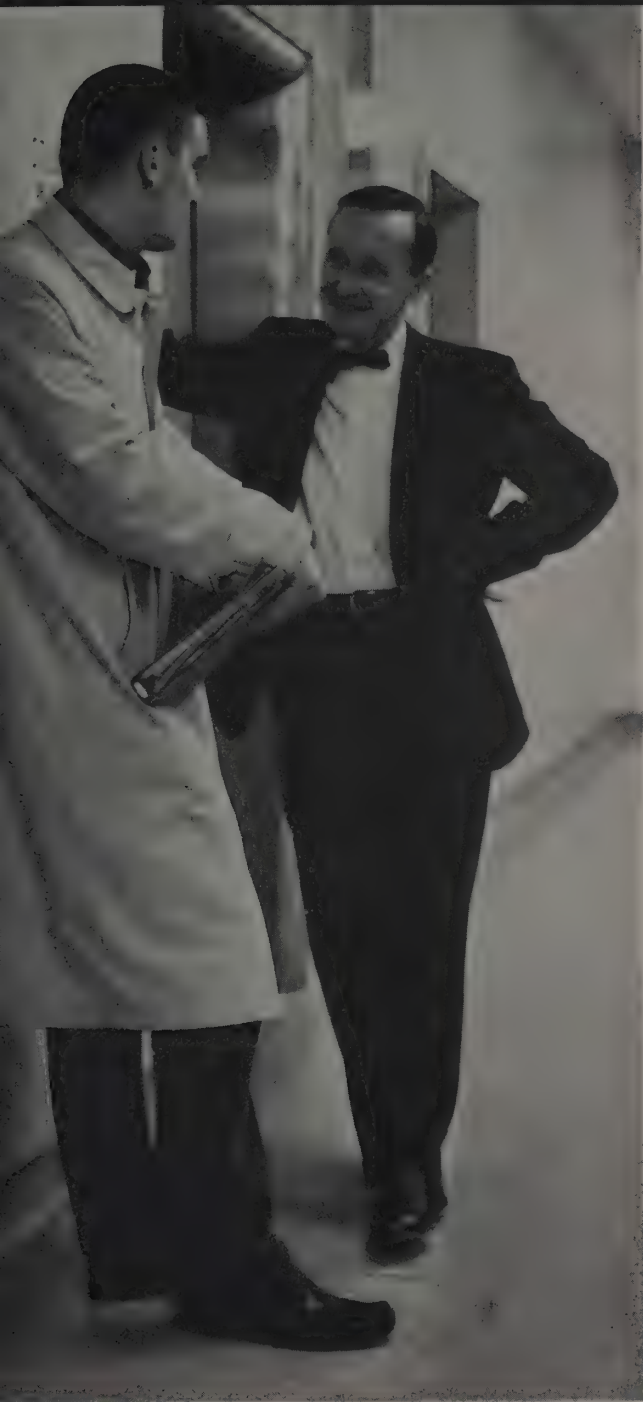

Prominent men stand before lecturns, trying to impart an understanding of ideas to students who have yet to learn about both the subject and its applications. With their greying beards and glasses that slip down to the end of their noses, these men may appear somewhat formidable—especially when they are viewed from hard, wooden seats by students fresh from the sheltered comforts of home.

A smile of recognition, an office conference, an invitation to dinner, a probing chat over a cup of coffee all help to change this impression. The student can discover, if he cares to, that, although these men have distinguished themselves in many areas, they are willing to help the student gain a more mature and adult outlook.

Although they are critical when necessary, their comments are constructive rather than destructive. A small word of encouragement at the right moment is sometimes the incentive necessary for self-locomotion. Leaning back in their chairs, lighting their pipes, they ask thought-provoking questions. The answers remain for the student to discover.

Some Profit From "Classes" Without Grades

Music and theatre formed the basis for the 1960-1961 Celebrity Series, which included tenor, Jan Peerce.

Aside from classes, professors' writing on blackboards, and lecture notes, I. U. offers the student many opportunities to broaden the scope of his mind through intellectual pursuits.

For those who care to participate, education goes beyond the information in a text book. It need not terminate with a class dismissal bell or a grade slip. Colloquiums, convocations, the Auditorium Series, special readings by professors on campus and from other universities, and annual programs sponsored by individual groups or departments of the University can enhance and magnify the students' education.

Among the "professors" who conducted "classes" in noncredit "subjects" were both of Indiana's gubernatorial candidates, Matthew Welsh and Crawford Parker, who appeared for consecutive convocations, and Miriam Makeba, African folksinger.

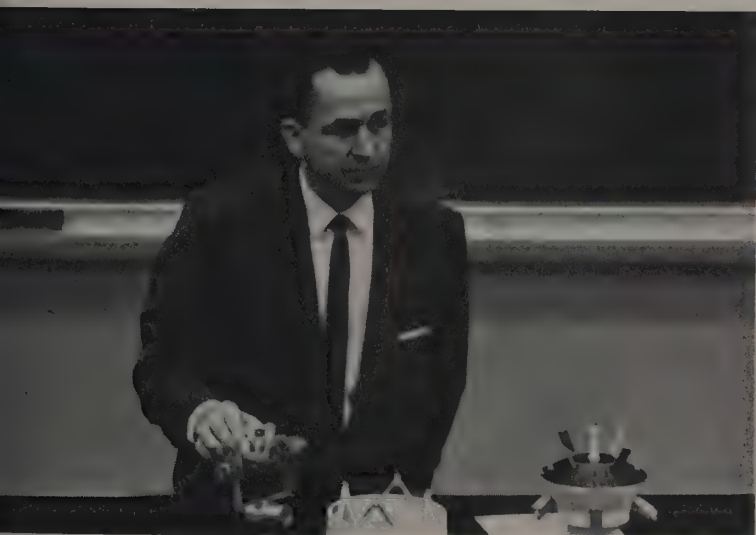

These people and hundreds of others from diversified professions brought with them their own "textbooks" on politics, culture, international relations, current problems, and pure entertainment.

There is no fee for most of these "courses;" the "textbooks" are free. There are no examinations—no grades. And the "prof" doesn't take attendance. The invitation is extended to all students—with only the wise ones graciously accepting.

One Searches for Understanding, for Faith

Past midnight and into the early hours of the morning, a group of students with hushed voices share, discuss, and debate their concepts of faith. One uses his missal to illustrate his views; one explains his church's creed; one describes the Passover; still another with a stack of science books declares, "It cannot be!" Others merely listen. Their minds extend beyond the bounds of the material to the superhuman, the first cause, eternity. Each forms within his own mind many ideas and many questions, but few have the answers.

Later, at his place of worship or over a cup of coffee, each may seek advice from learned men of his faith or of other faiths. He may then understand, or he may be even more bewildered. In silence, he participates in the sacraments of his religion, sometimes meaningfully, sometimes by habit.

One will accept all on blind faith. One accepts nothing; one, only part. Yet the questions are always present, and he continues to search for an understanding, an answer, a faith, a God.

Uncertain, a student turns to an authority, the Reverend Mr. Benjamin Garrison, as he searches for the answers.

The search leads to a house of worship.

Social Barriers Dissolve in I. U.'s Melting Pot

At the University, status barriers are dissolved in the melting pot of social and academic activities. Across the campus, through the Commons, and in the classroom, one encounters people from every phase of the social, economic, and cultural structures of the world.

A common goal, the pursuit of knowledge, erases the antagonism between the millionaire's son and the debtor's son, the Catholic and the Jew, the Oriental and the Caucasian. People are accepted at their own value, not on the basis of their cultural or social backgrounds. In few, if any, other settings will the free flow of ideas between different nationalities and classes be so flexible as it is at the University.

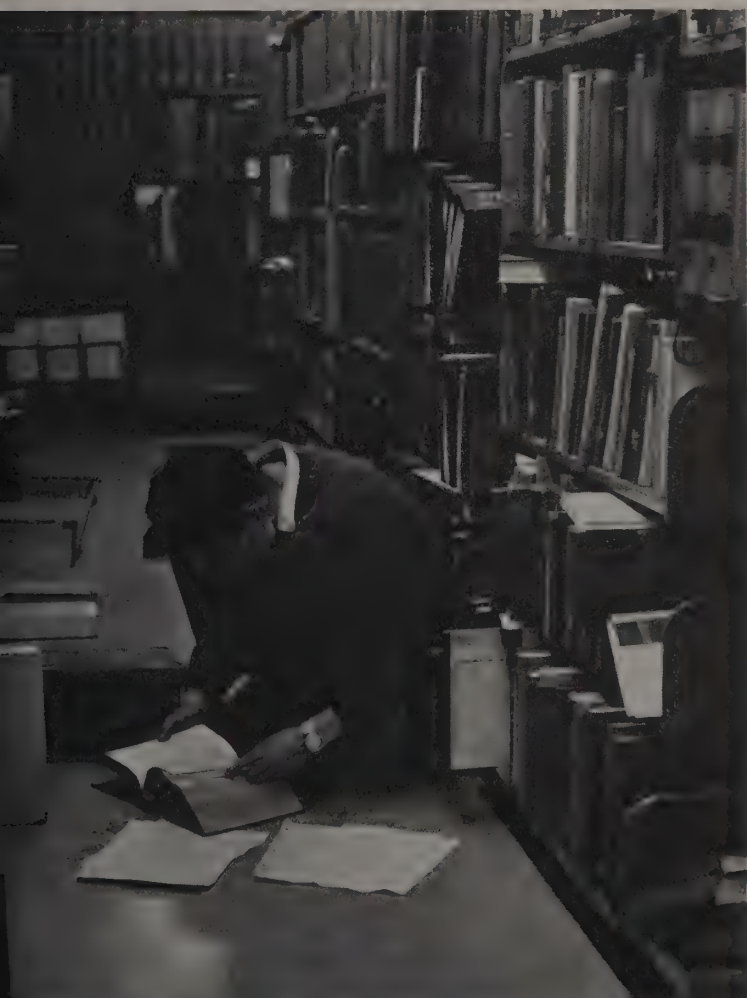

Within the University melting pot are some 600 foreign students from 72 different countries. Their native costumes, different accents, and social values impart a colorful image of the life in various sections of the world. These people come to the University for an education, yet often the knowledge they impart far exceeds that which they take with them.

A book is forgotten
as a budding romance gets more attention.

Cat Catches Mouse—Live Happily Ever After

A blind date with a guy four inches shorter or a girl who could impersonate an Amazon, a coffee date with the blond in history class who turns out to be another Einstein in disguise, a brother-sister relationship that's lasted for years—then, without warning, a chance meeting. The girl jumps with each ring of the telephone; the guy decides to play it cool this time.

The budding romance becomes a grand game of cat and mouse. Half the time they are both playing the role of cat—the other half, both the role of mouse. Sometimes the game ends there. Other times it continues until it is no longer a game.

With each cup of coffee they discover more about each other, their moods, their likes and dislikes, their backgrounds. More serious thoughts enter their minds—sometimes only to be forced out—sometimes to linger awhile. "Is this the one with whom I want to spend the rest of my life—have children, be broke, watch hair grey and wrinkles form? Am I ready to assume the responsibilities required of a devoted spouse?"

If all the answers are yes, perhaps they are merely infatuated. If there are some questions, some doubts, a few misforgivings, then perhaps they are ready to form a union which will last not for just a few short years but rather the rest of their lives.

"Oh, honey, can't we afford the one with the stone in it?"

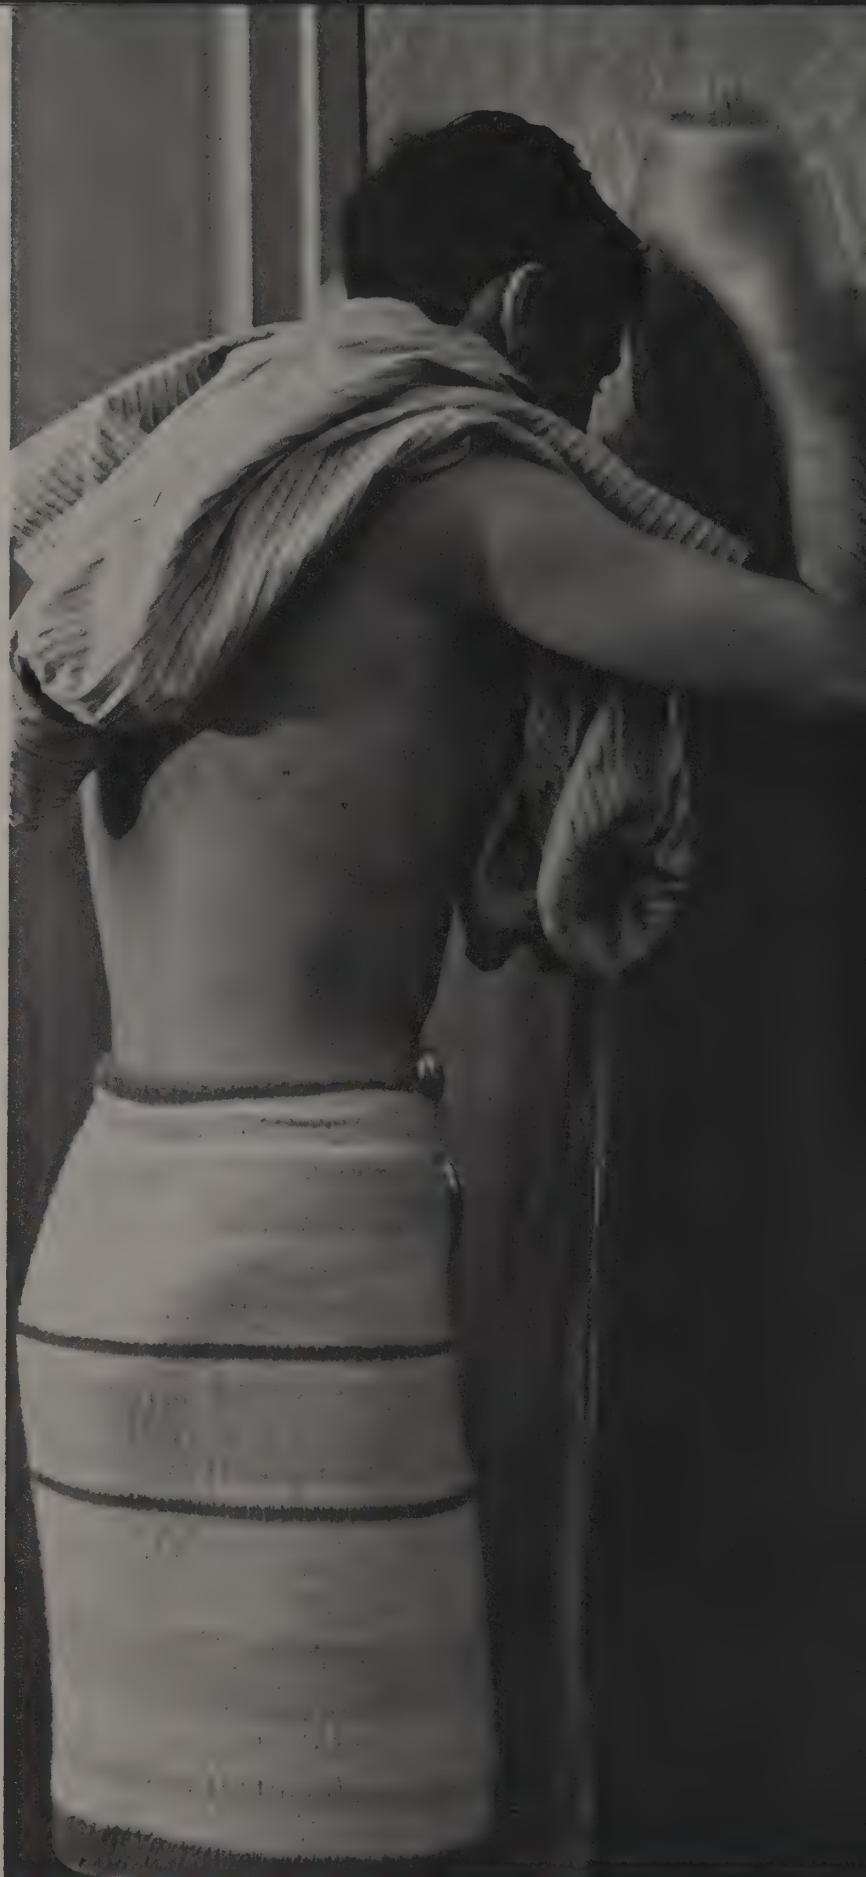

A cozy corner, a lively conversation, a piping hot pizza—there's no need for cat and mouse games tonight.

"Fellows, what can I do about this test?"

"Happy Birthday to you, Happy Birthday . . ."

"All right, Mike, come on and open the door. I'll promise not to ask your girl out again."

"What's a Borrowed Shirt Among Friends?"

Beyond the years of University life, some people will always remain steadfast. These "some people" often include one's friends of his own sex—the bridge-playing buddies, the double-date friends, and the never-to-be-forgotten roommates.

These are the people found during four or more years of college who become one's dearest friends for life. The reunions, in 2, 3, and in 20 years, will recall the joys with a little sentimentalism and the what-seemed-like catastrophes with a chuckle and a hearty laugh.

Who else but one's friend, often his roommate, would put up with borrowing his last white shirt, running a new pair of nylons, or loosing a page of the lecture notes for tomorrow morning's exam? Who else would suffer through the disappointments, rejoice with the accomplishments, and give just a sprinkling of not-always-listened-to advice besides? Who would tolerate those "necessary" trips to the shower, the phone call messages from people who never called, and laugh while he deviously plots a fitting retaliation?

Such is the role of the friend, the roommate—the confidante, companion, love counselor, the someone to share joys and problems as well as the never-big-enough closets and dresser drawers.

A love counselor, a shoulder to cry on—a friend . . .

"Welcome, brother!" was the shout as I. U.'s newest local fraternity, Sigma Sigma, initiated its first members.

Alone, the Student Discovers He Is an Individual

A name on a class admission card, a number on a housebill, a face in a football crowd—this is the freshman at I. U. But after the days of getting adjusted to the new surroundings and pattern of living fade, the student finds time to concentrate on a subject which offers no academic credit. He finds that the name, number, and face are only the title pages to a complex book. They are outward signs of an inner being—an individual—himself.

Alone in his room, his thoughts wander from the book in his lap to what he is gaining from the course and to his entire college career. On a bench in the middle of campus, he ponders his role in life after graduation. Perhaps medicine, law, education should not be his profession. Perhaps some other role would give him greater satisfaction.

Personal values and goals come into a sharper focus as he delves into his inner being; and from this self-searching a more mature and stable person emerges, a person prepared to face the future knowing what he is and what he wants.

A blur at first, personal values gradually come into focus.

"Have I chosen the right field? Will I be satisfied?"

"What does it mean, and where will it take me?"

Fall

A student arrives on the I. U. campus a stranger, alone, still searching for his identity. He searches for a home, a place to strive, to succeed. He searches and he discovers.

Sun-spangled maples and shaded walks offer a background for study, for contemplation, for simple peace of mind and for day-dreaming. The Wellhouse, girded in tradition, in its brilliantly-hued setting, stands as a symbol for the far-flung campus.

The season's classic Saturday afternoon, spent at a football game, offers its individual pride to the stranger. The crowd stands hushed, expectant, awaiting the Marching Hundred; and, with the appearance of the famed band, pride bursts from every Hoosier spectator. This is their band, their stadium, their university, and their season for shouting.

The lonely newcomer shouts with the crowd. He shouts at the game, and a jubilant inner voice also shouts when he strolls the shaded paths. It's Fall. This is his college. He is content. He belongs.

A tug-of-war begins as a battle between freshmen and counselors—but ends in a free-for-all.

Intent freshmen campers get the "lowdown" on campus life from a coed during a session at McCormick's Creek.

I. U. and "I. U.isms" Explained at Freshman Camp

No, "boress" is not a vulgar word. Yes, girls must be initiated before they can be officially termed coeds. And so, for the 200 freshmen who attend Freshman Camp, orientation begins—not only to the material University, but also its traditions and "I. U.isms."

After Freshman Camp followed the traditional welcoming speech by Pressly S. Sikes, Dean of the Junior Division; an almost endless number of placement examinations and aptitude tests; program-planning sessions with faculty advisers; open houses; the President's reception; mixers; and the Freshman Frolic. Although fully convinced that someone should initiate a 30-hour day, most freshman soon fall into the pattern of University life without too much trouble.

Organized Confusion Typifies Enrollment Process

No longer a time of mass confusion, enrollment at I. U. is now a time of organized, smooth-running confusion. The careless student can always lose his I. D., his enrollment card, or his matriculation forms, but these problems have simple remedies. The biggest letdown is the class that is full—or at least that's what the man says.

If arranging a class schedule causes him difficulty, the student has only to head for the nearest "trouble table" where he joins a mass of fellow students who suffer from the same problems.

The real troubles begin when, after finally signing up for classes, separating colored cards, and paying fees, the student begins to plow his way through the long line of solicitors just outside the fieldhouse door. He often emerges not only a student of I. U., but also a subscriber to seven publications and a member of just as many clubs. Although enrollment is efficiently run these days, the students often aren't.

Melon Mess and Delt Dance Alter Street Scenes

Watermelon seeds and rinds carpeted the University parking lot and the sidewalks at Kirkwood and Indiana Avenues, but sticky, seed-spitting students were too busy eating the ripe fruit to notice the mess they were making. Sorority pledges, clad in their Greek-lettered sweatshirts, served almost 750 watermelons to an estimated 5,000 persons, making sure that everyone at the Sigma Chi Melon Mess had plenty to eat.

A melon-eating contest and variety show were included in this mid-September campus-wide event.

Two days later, the Al Cobine Quartet provided music for the 12th annual Delt Street Dance. Restless students, not yet ready to settle down to studies, danced past midnight and wore their shoe soles a little thinner on the brick-paved dance floor in front of the Delta Tau Delta house.

Fraternities Explain Greek System During Rush

A scrapbook mirrors fraternity pride.

The last weeks of high school are hectic for a senior, but each year many boys take time out from proms and pre-graduation events to accept invitations to fraternity rush weekends on the I. U. campus. During these weekends, the prospective pledge lives in a fraternity house and is introduced to the campus and to the Greek system.

The high school senior may pledge at one of these rush functions or at the beginning of each semester during periods specified by the Interfraternity Council. When he returns to the chaos of high school pre-commencement activities, he may already have chosen his close friends for his college career.

... a roommate or two often do it better.

Five minutes before her date is to arrive, and is she ready? Of course not. She just came out of the shower room. Amidst the conglomeration of "tools" on her dresser, she manages to apply her makeup.

Next comes clothing. The occasion is formal, semi-formal, or a skirts and sweaters affair. For events such as this, a roommate often comes in handy. She will lend her crinolines, shoes, Chanel No. 5, and maybe even a coat or dress. She does so uncomplainingly; it's just a part of the game. Who knows? Maybe she'll have a date next weekend.

Five minutes late, but, after hours of preparation and consultation with friends on how she looks, a young lady emerges—a model of femininity. However, her worries aren't over yet. She thinks she looks lovely—but will he?

New Stadium Is Tops in Spectator Convenience

Although the fighting I. U. football Hoosiers won only one game in 1960, they could boast about a beautiful new stadium which was second to none in the nation for spectator comfort and convenience.

The National Collegiate Athletic Association, the Big Ten Conference, and eight opponents combined to make the past season unpleasant for the Hoosiers.

First, the NCAA tagged I. U. with a four-year athletic probation for recruiting violations. The NCAA ruling meant the Hoosiers wouldn't be able to participate in any post-season Bowl games.

The Big Ten followed the NCAA's example, and Commissioner Kenneth L. (Tug) Wilson announced that the Indiana team was on probation with the conference for one year. I. U.'s games were not to count in the conference standings.

Belted with these two knockout blows to their hopes for a successful season in their new stadium, the Hoosiers could bounce off the floor only once, defeating Marquette, 34-8.

Extreme optimists can claim that Phil Dickens didn't really suffer his first losing season as a head coach—that he split with Marquette and Oregon State. The other games didn't count, according to the Big Ten. But the Hoosiers' loyal fans who suffered through the 1-8 season differ somewhat.

Coach Dickens changed the light blue jerseys back to Indiana's traditional red, or crimson. This worked against Marquette but not against anyone else. A startling abandonment of Dickens' treasured single-wing offense for the more conventional wing-T threw Northwestern off for a half, but the Wildcats came back for a 21-3 victory over the battling Hoosiers.

For the entire season, the I. U. gridmen were outscored 243-69. The most severe blow of all came when arch rival Purdue retained the Old Oaken Bucket for the 13th consecutive year with a 35-6 victory.

Diversity Is Key to Auditorium Series Success

Complete silence swept over the Auditorium for a single moment. Izler Solomon had just finished directing the Indianapolis Symphony Orchestra. Then a resounding ovation arose from the audience.

Jonathan Winters stepped backward, bowing his head, as he dropped his hands to his sides and completed his characterization of Granny Pritchertt. The fans demanded more.

The diversity in performances at the Auditorium and Celebrity Series, Pop Concerts, and other shows on campus was as great as the difference between a symphony orchestra and a comedian.

The rich tradition of entertainment at I. U. was maintained by varied and outstanding presentations by artists such as soprano Birgit Nilsson, pianist Artur Rubenstein, and tenor Jan Peerce. J. B., the celebrated drama by Archibald MacLeish, was presented under the direction of Elia Kazan, and a most receptive crowd eagerly awaited every remark by satirist Shelley Berman. Later in the year, the Chicago Symphony Orchestra provided an evening of education and top entertainment. A major production in the spring was the annual appearance of the Metropolitan Opera Company.

Pantomimist Marcel Marceau provided a change in pace, a lighter touch, as did the gay musical comedy starring Buster Keaton and Dody Goodman, Once Upon A Mattress.

The performances were varied, providing enjoyable entertainment to people of all interests. But whether the productions were comic or dramatic, theatergoers who attended left with the feeling that they had been enriched in some way.

Fall Carnival Raises Dust as Well as Funds

Fall Carnival, the helping hand, receives a hand.

Shelley Berman calls them kleeneces—millions of kleeneces.

Amid the dust stirred up by the trampling, milling crowd, five finalists in the Bachelor of the Year contest smiled and charmed prospective voters. These men, stars in the gigantic production for charity known as Fall Carnival, were Ward Miller, Vance Foster, Terry Duncan, Steve Heckman, and the winner, Mac Crosbie.

While the Bachelor candidates worked to win votes, campus organizations presented dance shows, movies, games of chance, skits, and a horror show in the booths which ringed the inside of the Fieldhouse. Judges selected as the best show "The Hungry 'i'" produced by Smithwood IV and Delta Chi. The Pi Beta Phi and the Phi Delta Thetas won first place in the best booth category with their "Playboy's Penthouse."

The Ball ended at dawn with a breakfast in the Union sponsored by the Junior Class.

Equally regal was the Opening of Formal in December. The evening began with dinner in the Frangipani Room at which time a baby orchid was given to each coed. Orchids also adorned pillars flanking the entrance to Alumni Hall, transforming it into a swirl of lavender and deep purple. The music of Peter Palmer and his orchestra helped to make the event an evening "Too Marvelous for Words."

In March Ralph Marterie and his band played for the Military Ball in the Wright Quad dining room. Included in the intermission program was the crowning of the Military Ball Queen by Natalie Burnham, queen of the 1960 Mil Ball.

Hoosiers Hand McCracken His 400th Victory

It's a bird; it's a plane. No, it's Jerry Bass as he "flies" in for a bucket against awe-stricken Indiana State.

Coach Branch McCracken's 1960-1961 edition of the Hurrin' Hoosiers helped him pass two landmarks in his coaching career during the past season. The tall and talented team scored I. U. victory No. 300 and lifetime victory No. 400 for him.

Ranked as high as third in preseason polls, the Hoosiers compiled a highly respectable but slightly disappointing 15-9 season record and finished in fourth place in the Big Ten Conference standings.

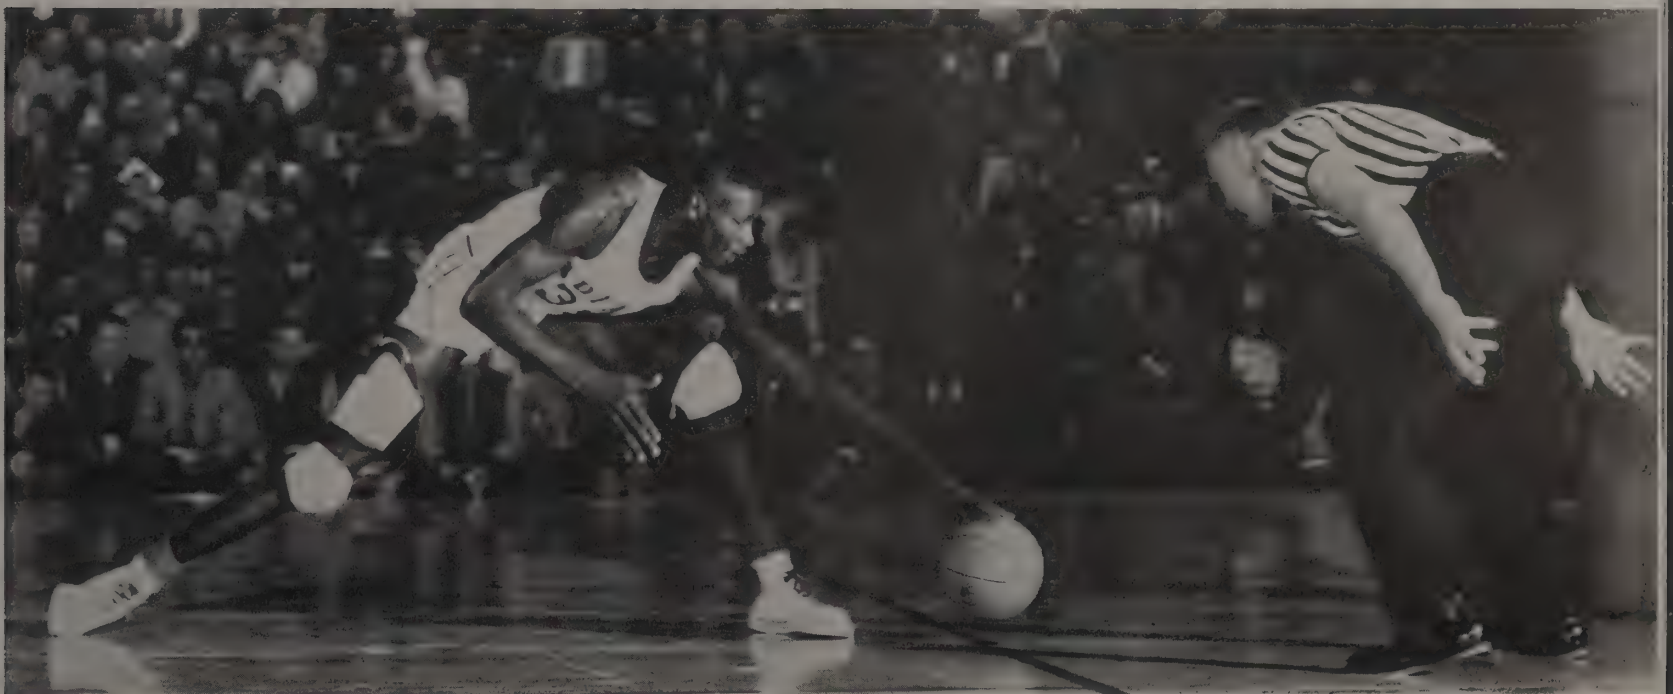

Nevertheless the Hoosiers on occasion showed flashes of brilliance. Early in the season they thrashed tough Kansas State and later upset highly ranked Iowa.

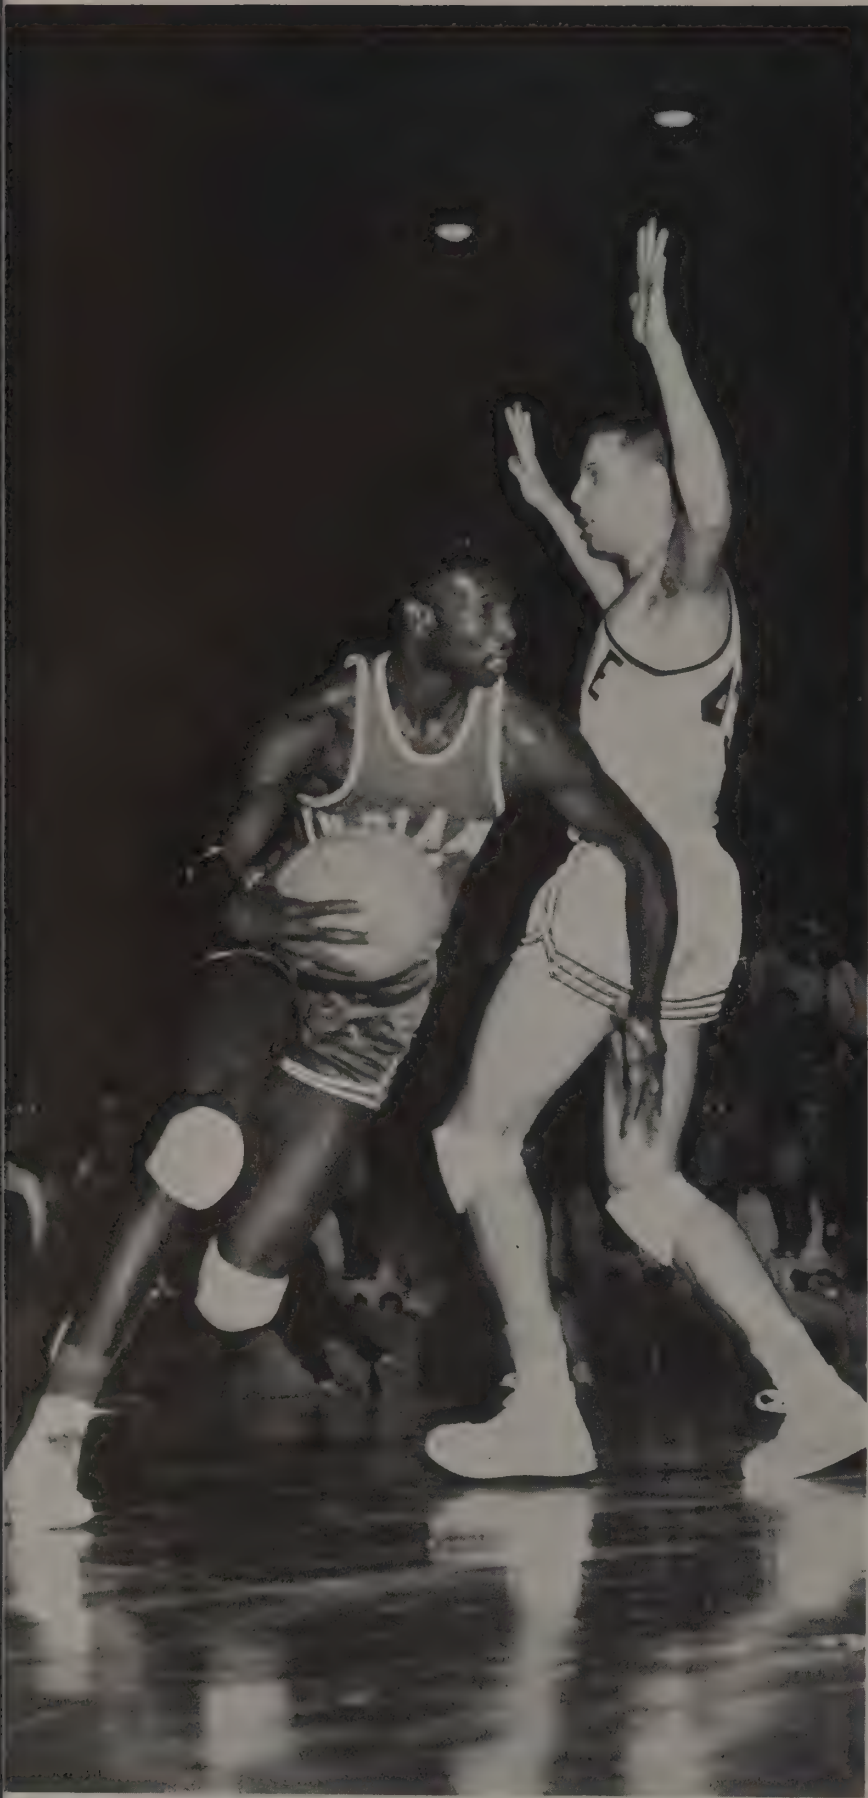

Returning fresh from the Olympics, all-American Walt Bellamy broke the I. U. individual rebounding record, led the Big Ten in rebounding, and placed fourth in scoring in the Conference. Tom Bolyard, the Hoosiers' second best scorer with an average of 15.5 points a game, was ranked eighth among the loop's leading scorers with a 15.9 average in Conference play. Guard Gary Long turned in a good season with steady scoring and an outstanding floor game in his last year with the Hoosiers.

Winter

The temptation to pause, to gaze, to think has an added appeal when winter has lavishly covered the campus with white disguises for familiar objects. The turmoil of Christmas activities and headaches of the approaching final week can be forgotten for a few seconds while the pensive student dreams of fall filled with fun and gaiety, of the coming spring promising new adventures, or of the present season with its quiet hours spent in a library pursuing an education.

Winter is more than a time for thought and dreaming. When icy winds herd the students inside, study desks greet friends who formerly were kept away by the temptations of fall. The student studies, plans, dreams, learns. This is his season to accomplish.

A kiss from Santa Wells became one of the prized gifts of Judy McCorkel, Queen of Indiana University.

Campus Assumes Festive Air at Christmas

"I'm dreaming of a White Christmas . . ." and a few days off from classes to enjoy a long-awaited vacation. Such was the theme of life at I. U. for two or three weeks preceding Christmas vacation.

Visible signs of the coming holiday were found over the doors of the Auditorium, on the tower of the Union Building, and in the windows of the various housing units on campus. One could hear the faint trace of singing "after hours" as groups went caroling from housing unit to housing unit. Musical entertainment came from the Madrigal Singers and the YWCA-YMCA-sponsored "Chimes of Christmas."

The climax of the weeks preceding vacation was the all-campus dance, Christmas Eve on Campus, at which time Santa Claus Wells made his annual appearance. This year, for the first time, Santa Wells crowned the Arbutus Queen, Judy McCorkel.

The long trek in the snow from class to class is about to be terminated—temporarily at least.

Sophomore Karin Grimsley from Evanston, Illinois, is an English literature major and a member of Pi Beta Phi social sorority.

Linda Klepper

A member of Delta Zeta social sorority, Linda Klepper from Lawrenceburg is a junior majoring in elementary education.

"I Will Be Ready for Finals" Is Annual Vow

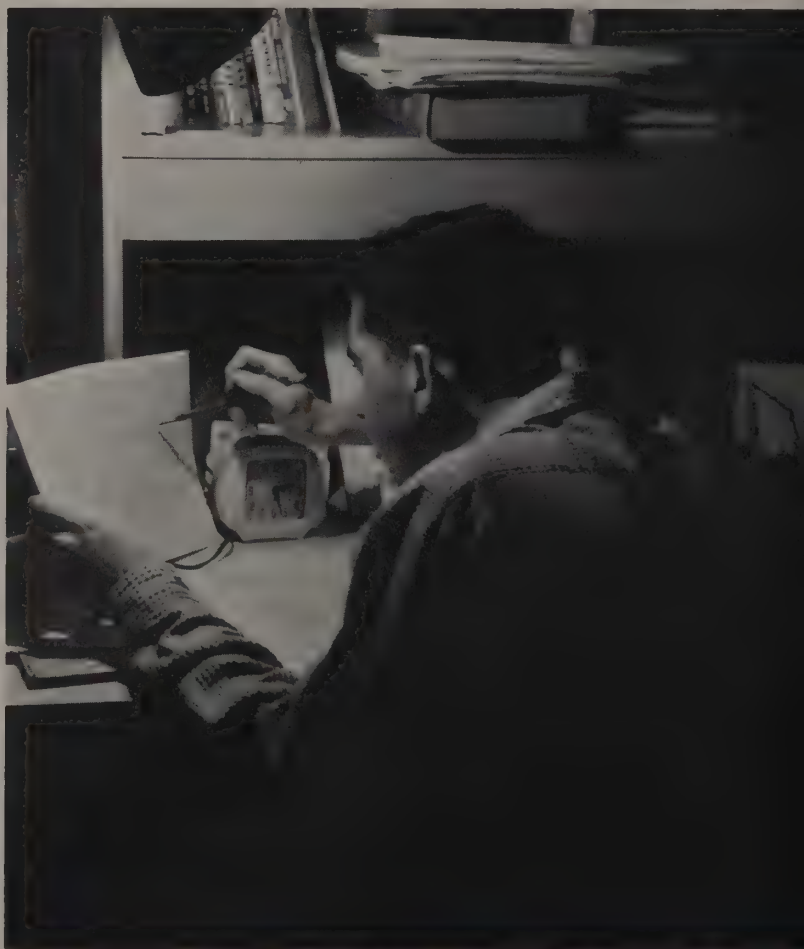

Ideas from 687 pages, two term papers, and three outside reading books intertwine into a brief 12-page blue book.

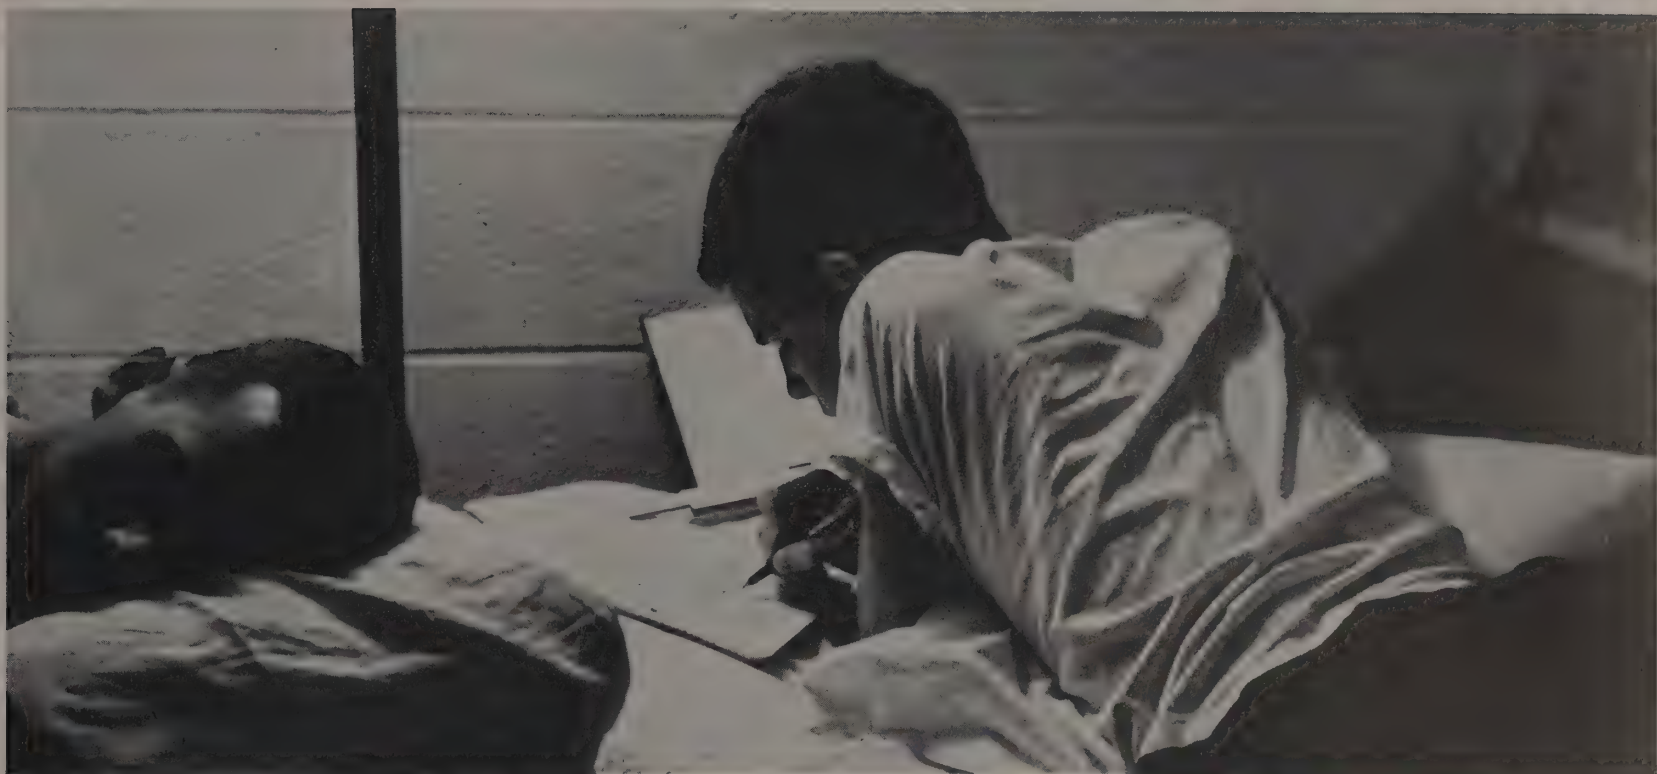

Coffee, dexedrine, cigarettes—all become synonymous with finals. Although the average student vows each and every semester to organize his studying so that he will not have to cram for finals, he usually throws his good intentions to the winds. And so final week finds him, in a complete state of panic, confronted with stacks of books and reams of cold lecture notes.

Even the essential moments of relaxation—a fifteen-minute nap, a quick game of bridge, or a walk down the hall to the drinking fountain—do not relieve the mounting pressure.

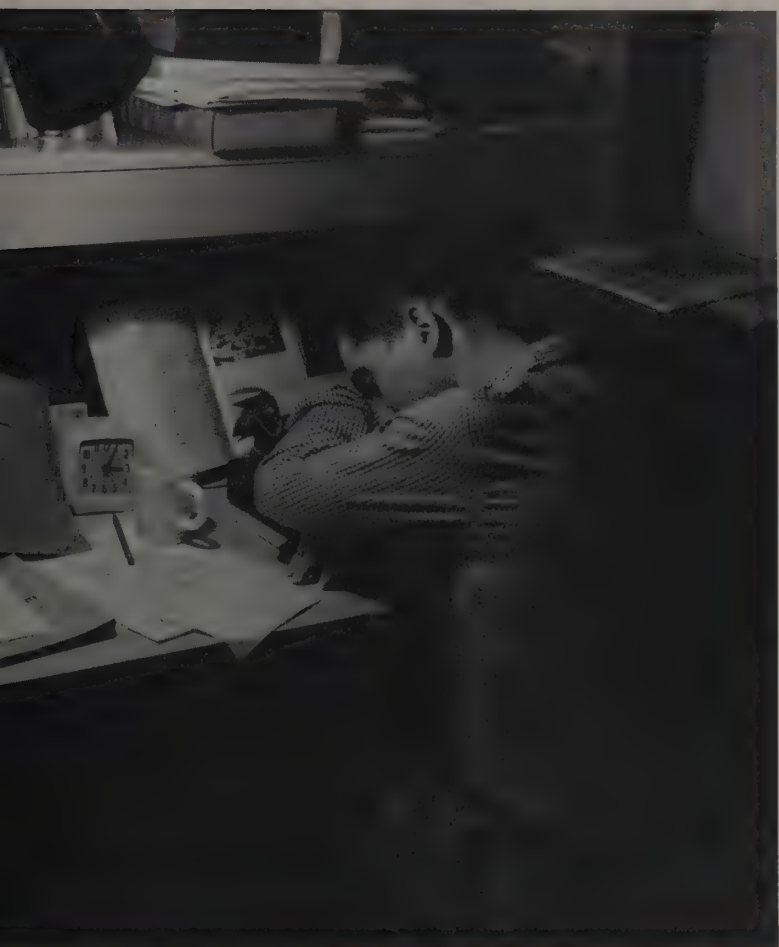

Lighting another cigarette, heating another cup of coffee, and picking up another book, he thinks to himself, "After this, I've just got to get organized."

Perspective grows as idea blends with idea until one . . .

The final punishment of a poorly organized semester is to stay up all night studying near a roommate who "hit the sack" at 11 p.m.

1,536 Girls Don Sunday-Best to Brave Rush Teas

Cold January winds greeted 1,536 nervous, Sunday-best clad rushees for the beginning of an exciting, tense, systematic sorority rush. Buses whisked rushees over the long distances; girls tried to remember to leave their name cards; and sorority members introduced roommates to each other.

Coke parties, each with a theme and refreshments, preceded rush week and provided a chance for sorority women and rushees to get acquainted.

After the semester break, girls rushed back to campus, anxious about invitations to the first round of rush parties. Wearing favorite skirts and sweaters, the rushees tramped nervously to their six chosen houses to see skits, have refreshments, and learn more about sorority living. The number of invitations that were returned to the rushees dwindled steadily, and rushees began to make important decisions as they returned for the second and third round of parties. Cocktail dresses and hopes went to the fourth and last round of parties. Tears and shouts of joy broke the tension as final decisions were announced and a new class of girls was pledged.

The name-hometown-major routine is quickly dispensed with.

Towers A Quiz Bowl Team Emerges Victorious

Excitement ran high on the campus as the field of contestants was narrowed to a small group in the 1961 Campus Quiz Bowl.

When the intellectually bloody battle was over, the Towers Quad A team was victorious after defeating Sigma Alpha Epsilon social fraternity in the final round.

Also victorious were four members selected from all the participating teams who represented I. U. at the General Electric College Quiz Bowl in New York. The men were chosen on the basis of their outstanding performance and show of knowledge in many fields in the campus contest.

The members of the team underwent a two weeks' training period with their coach, Prof. Donald Crosby, before leaving for New York where they won their first match against Fairleigh Dickinson, four-week winner. They lost their second match. For their efforts the University received a total of $2,000 from General Electric to be used for scholarships.

The Campus Quiz Bowl was made up of teams from the housing units on campus. The matches were patterned after the General Electric Quiz Bowl with toss-up and bonus questions.

Preliminary matches were in Whittenberger Auditorium, and the semifinals and finals were televised.

Alpha Gamma Deltas and Towers Best in Sings

Towers Center won the 1960 Sing with their act, "WACDOAT," or "We all couldn't decide on a title."

Second place for men's choral in the 1961 I. U. Sing went to Lambda Chi Alpha for their barber shop singing.

Alpha Gamma Delta proved Dogpatch was "Where the Songs Are" when they won first in production and best over-all group in the 1961 I. U. Sing. In 1960 the Towers Singers captured the only best over-all trophy ever awarded to an independent housing group with their presentation of "WACDOAT."

To avoid conflicts with late spring activities, the YMCA and YWCA set the 1961 Sing in March.

Kappa Delta took a "Barber's Journey" to win first in the women's choral division of the 1961 Sing while Alpha Omicron Pi won second place. The Lambda Chi Alphas captured first in men's vocal with variations of "Tiger Rag." Foley Hall was second. Second place in production went to Alpha Chi Omega. "Vaudeville" gave Delta Delta Delta and Sigma Alpha Epsilon first in mixed choral, and Towers was second. Small group awards went to Kappa Delta Rho and Alpha Phi.

In addition to Towers, 1960 winners were Delta Gamma; Beta Theta Pi; Kappa Delta Rho and Alpha Gamma Delta, and Smithwood Wing II.

"Castro" Appears at Seventh Annual LUNA

"But this is in the best interest of your country, too."

With the arrival of the Cuban delegate emblematically sporting a beard and wearing fatigues, the Little United Nations Assembly convened March 8 for its seventh annual session. This year approximately 250 delegates from 30 colleges represented 70 nations in the simulated United Nation activities.

For four days delegates engaged in lively discussions as they defended the interests of the countries they represented. LUNA tackled genuine world-wide problems such as the Congolese and Laotian situations and the recent dispute over U. S. ownership of a Cuban military base. A résumé of accomplishments was sent to each of the participating colleges.

Arkansas' Senator William Fulbright spoke on some aspects of United States' foreign policy at a public convocation which was presented in conjunction with the LUNA activities.

Four days of group activities for the delegates were climaxed by the lengthy General Assembly.

Mortar Board Taps 25 at AWS Mass Meeting

Bonnita Richards, AWS president, presided at the Association of Women Students' Mass Meeting in March.

A chanting senior in a flowing black robe walked sedately down the aisles of the Auditorium. Her steps quickened, and she suddenly plucked the black mortar board from her own head and plopped it on an unsuspecting junior seated in the audience. Shouts of "Congratulations," screams of surprise from friends, and a welcoming hug from the senior announced a new tappee of Mortar Board.

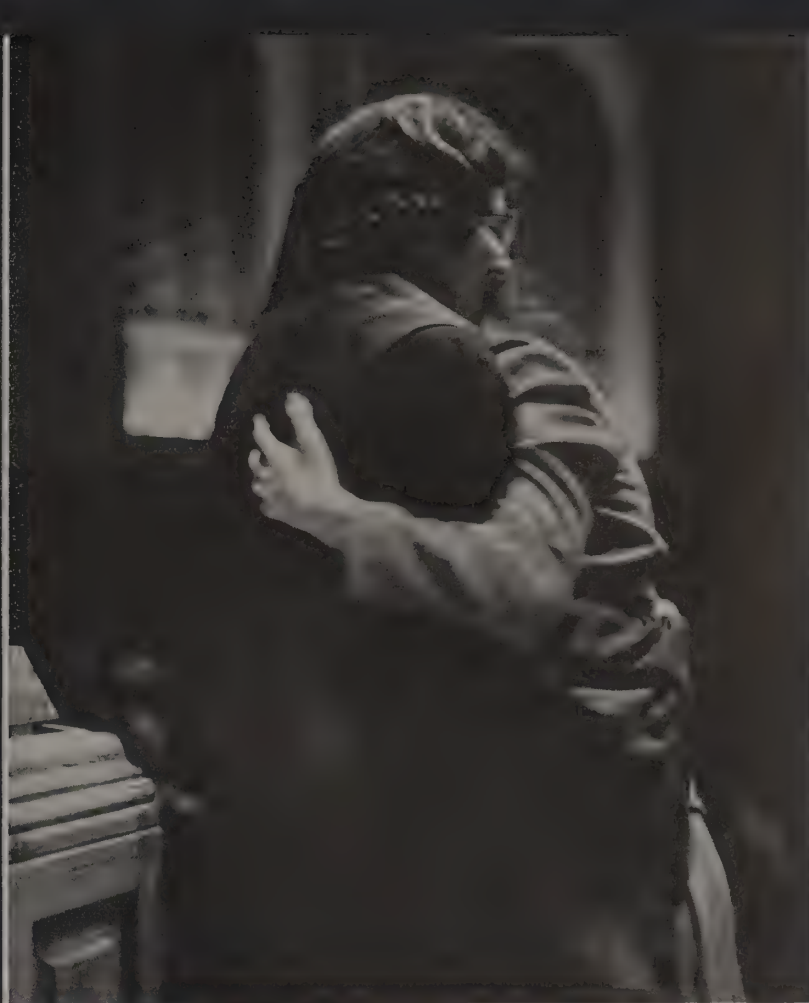

Twenty-five junior women were tapped for the national honorary for senior women at the Association of Women Students' Mass Meeting March 21. Approximately 300 coeds were named to four other scholastic and activities honoraries—Alpha Lambda Delta, Enomone, Pleiades, and Pamarada—and the fall pledges of Phi Beta Kappa were announced.

AWS, YWCA, and WRA elections for 1961-1962 officers also took place at the Mass Meeting.

Spring

Ballantine towers against a brilliantly blue sky to remind students that classes must go on even though spring has come to campus. Students usually find that the usual ten-minute walk to class stretches to fifteen . . . and more, for Nature's outdoor classroom has much to offer the winter-weary scholar.

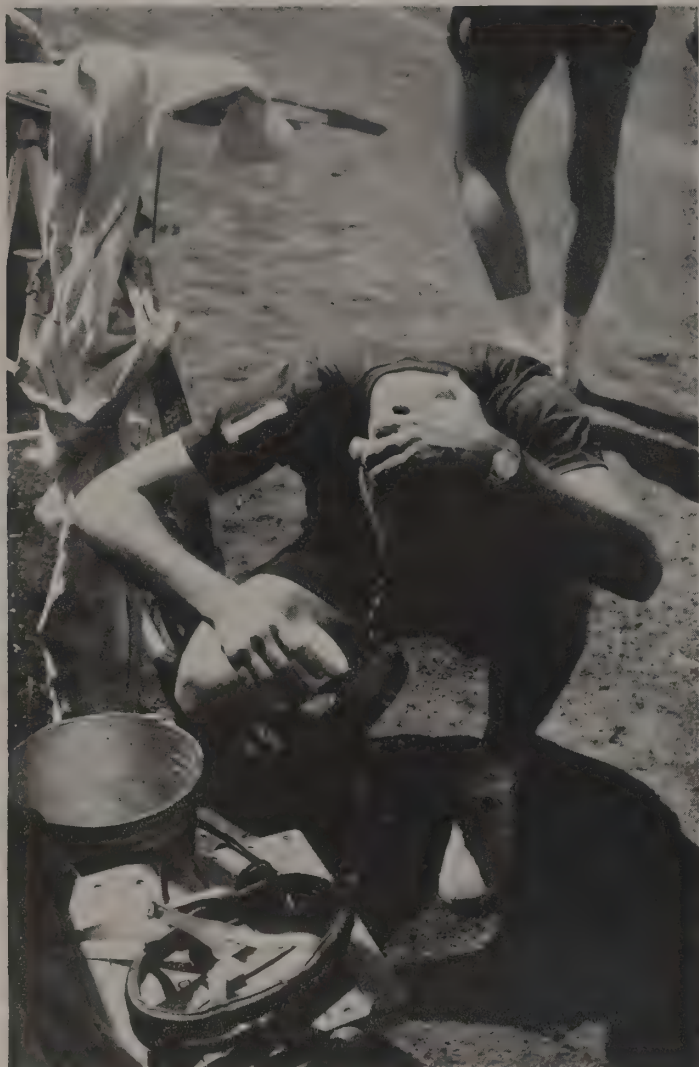

Everyone has a special smile for a friend—and a stranger—when he meets him on a bridge over the Jordan or any other place on campus. There is a lilt in the voice and a swing to the step of I. U.'s buzzing horde, and the hum of a lawnmower lends a pleasant tone to the ever-brightening scene.

Impromptu study sessions occur on the banks of the Jordan, on park benches, in some grassy spot, anywhere, next to Nature. The excitement of spring—visions of graduation for seniors, daydreams about spring formals, plans for a trip to Ft. Lauderdale, thoughts of summer vacation—is a heady nectar that must not be sipped too often. In spring the diligent student doesn't forget his daily fare of study which strengthens him for the week when he will be fed spring's cup of hemlock, final exams.

Phi Kappa Psi Pedal to Third Straight "500" Win

Ice water gives the Little 500 rider
a cool head on the hot cinder track.

Phi Kappa Psi gained a unique distinction last year at the Little 500 bicycle race. They did what previously had been only a dream—they won the race for the third consecutive year.

The Phi Psi team, composed of sophomores John Odusch and Don Leedy, junior Dave Atha, and senior Lew Cook, kept the cinders hot as they sped around the track at an average speed of 21.16 miles an hour. They completed the race with an elapsed time of 2:21:47, the third fastest time in the history of the race.

As a result of winning pole position in the April qualifications, the Phi Psi began at the front. However, they lacked enough steam until the tenth lap to take over the coveted first place position. From then on, the race was theirs. Finishing closely behind the winners were the Sigma Alpha Epsilon, Lambda Chi Alpha, Sigma Nu, and Phi Gamma Delta bicycle teams.

All the bicycles were new. They were delivered the Saturday preceding the race so that they would be in top running order. The many months of practice—with riders struggling to master quick changes and to overcome leg cramps—were climaxed by victory for the Phi Psi team.

The rewards for this victory included a plaque, jackets, a television set—and a kiss from Miss America, Mary Ann Mobley, the Sweetheart of the Little 500 weekend. The exciting race, applauded by 16,000 enthusiastic spectators was the focal point of "The World's Greatest College Weekend."

Jubilant fans and a Daily Student proclaim that the Phi Psis have captured their third straight Little 500 victory.

Commandment number one reads: "Thou shalt fall off gracefully—if thou must fall."

Little 500 Activities Raise Funds for Scholarships

The idea is to ride on the tricycle—not behind it.

From the November day when Student Foundation Committee members are chosen until the night almost a year later when 150 I. U. Foundation scholarships are awarded, "The World's Greatest College Weekend" is planned, worried about, practiced for, and anticipated by nearly everyone on campus.

Guided by J. A. Franklin, Vice-President and Treasurer, and William S. Armstrong, Executive Director of the I. U. Foundation, Little 500 has grown from an event applauded by 7,000 people in 1951 to a whole weekend crammed with activities for everyone.

The excitement really begins on the night before the race when costumed girls urged their teams of trike pedalers around tiny racetracks at the Miniature 500. After the Minny comes the Extravaganza, a variety show with professional entertainment.

The next morning, alumni and students finish the last round of the Golf Jamboree—and then the race begins. Little 500 riders ride new bikes and wear brightly colored uniforms, both donated by business firms. Cheered on by their partner housing units, the cyclists spin around the track, finishing the laps in time for the variety show that night.

Tricycle changes require speed and synchronization.

Will it? Or won't it?

Rapid, well-performed exchanges between riders are vital because seconds gained or lost in this act may determine the victors.

Mary Ann Mobley charms the crowd.

A bicycle built for two is useful only for decoration at the Little 500.

Riders take a practice lap around the track before the gun sounds for the main event of "The World's Greatest College Weekend."

"C'mon, let's go" shout Minnie supporters who use almost as much energy as if they were the ones who were racing around the track.

"The faster they go, the harder they fall" is the lesson learned by cyclists who have tumbled head over wheels.

President Wells Leads Founders' Day Pilgrimage

I. U.'s first president is honored by President Wells.

President Herman B Wells led the annual pilgrimage to the grave of Dr. Andrew Wylie, the first president of Indiana University, on Founders' Day May 3. Placing a wreath on the grave, President Wells honored the founders in behalf of the faculty, students, parents, and alumni, thus commemorating the 141st anniversary of the University.

In the morning, students, parents, faculty, and administrative officials gathered in the Auditorium to hear an address by Dean Ralph L. Collins entitled "The Faculty." Recognition was given by Dean John W. Ashton to students on the Deans' List, students who were named to honorary scholastic organizations, and to the recipient of the Frederich Bache Lieber Award for distinguished teaching.

The Deans' Reception for honor students and their parents was given in the evening.

Dean John W. Ashton recognized the honor students and members of honorary organizations.

After the convocation, President Wells greeted parents.

Spring Brings a Challenge of Fun Versus Study

A last last-minute review helps conquer "final fright."

Spring is that time of the year when a student's fancy often turns to thoughts of convertibles, Brown County, sun decks, and, in addition, a monstrous pile of books.

Spring is filled with many things, and those things occasionally fight for precedence over finals. Gazing out the window, with the pages of his history book fluttering in the breeze, a student thinks of General Sherman fighting for the Nation, or does he think of himself conquering the high dive from the peaks of the quarries?

Of course, there's always the studious fellow who goes to the Commons. He concentrates, calculates, and clutches—before he bids five diamonds.

Most of the students soon learn, however, that the time to study has come. No longer can they procrastinate with thoughts of bridge games and trips to Brown County. No longer can they dream while the pages of a book are blown by a breeze. Final examination time has come. History, literature, and a host of other subjects soon win the tug of war between studies and fun for those who plan to return the following semester.

Spring affects each student and his final exams in a different way, with the outcome being that spring may be successful or unsuccessful, gay and exciting or calm—and perhaps even a little bit romantic. Always, however, the end of the spring semester is filled with activity, study, and, inevitably, those final examinations.

Spring finals are put aside while a student composes a letter of application for a summer job.

I. U.'s oft sketched panorama of beauty becomes the subject for a final project in an art class.

Concentration creates a study session anywhere.

A crowded sundeck is a coed's favorite place for relaxing between exams and attempting to study.

Graduates Consider Past as Well as Future

The place is Memorial Stadium and the month is June. A. B., M. A., M. D., L. L. D., M. R. S.—what comes next? A job? Graduate School? Or marriage and a family? A few brave ones tackle all three at the same time.

During the ceremony minds of these soon-to-be alumni sometimes wander—not only to thoughts of the future but of the past college years as well. There are so many things which remain undone, so many which might have been done better, so many people unseen, so many corners unexplored. Yet if each student were given the opportunity to do things over differently, how many would? Probably only a handful, for no matter how good the intentions, there are only 24 hours in a day—no more. These past four years have been crammed full of happiness, heartaches, and hard work.

Waiting for the class to dismiss permanently, each recalls finals, football games, finals, boresses, finals . . .

The more education one receives the more he discovers how proportionately less he knows.

With the close of another chapter, one reflects upon the events and their relation to the story's end.

Tempo of Campus Life Changes in Summer

A storm that was designated as the worst one to hit Southern Indiana in 50 years forced summer students to vacate temporarily the most frequented summer library on campus. The library, adopted unofficially by the University from late spring through early fall, is the out-of-doors which is equipped with shaded lighting, comfortable seats, and untold inspiration for all students. The summer flood caused pedestrians to avoid paths through the low, wooded areas on campus until the swollen Jordan River receded.

Water also influenced the lives of summer students in a more pleasant way. After a long day of classes, many students found relaxation in a swim in an abandoned quarry, a water-ski journey around Lake Lemon, a leisurely bicycle ride around the campus, or a chat with friends on a shady hillside.

The tempo of life on campus in the summer is somewhat slower than the hurried pace of the regular college year. Classes have a more relaxed atmosphere; there is less pressure on the student; the daytime uniform is bermuda shorts; there is more time for making friends. The students themselves are here for various reasons—to earn graduate degrees, to attain extra credit hours, to attend clinics, institutes, or conventions. The students come to study, but they do not sacrifice normal summer fun.

Traveling troubadours on the trim riverboat "Majestic" gave performances afloat for audiences along the Ohio.

Bermuda shorts, balmy breezes, and the shade of a sycamore set the scholastic scene at I. U.'s Summer Session.

A sultry summer's afternoon causes a weary cyclist to pause, rest, and renew campus acquaintances near peaceful Beck Chapel.

High winds bent an arching weeping willow in late June as "the worst storm in 50 years" swept southern Indiana.

Although students have access to modern pools, many still favor the Hoosier version of the "Ole Swimmin' Hole."

purpose can sub-
due all distractions.

A grassy spot on the University's verdant campus is a favorite haven for relaxing during Summer Session.

President Herman B Wells to Retire in July 1962

Dr. Wells began his academic career in the Jamestown, Indiana, schools.

"I'm not retiring, I'm just changing jobs," states Herman B. Wells, in discussing his decision to retire as President of Indiana University. President Wells will continue to direct the affairs of I. U., as he has done for the last 25 years, until July 1962.

In his customarily efficient manner, Dr. Wells feels there should be no decline in University activity. He plans to facilitate a smooth transition of administration by immediately introducing his successor to the wide variety of responsibilities of the post.

When the President leaves his office, he will step into the position of active President of the Indiana University Foundation. In addition to the duties of his new position, Dr. Wells will give special attention to contract research work and bequest programs.

President Wells has remarked that he is looking forward, toward the University's future, not backward, into its past. According to him, "The best lies just ahead."

The appointment of Herman B. Wells in 1937 as the 11th president of Indiana University was another step in his series of associations with the school. After attending the public schools of Jamestown, Indiana, where he was born, he was graduated from the Lebanon, Indiana, high school. He transferred to I. U. after attending the University of Illinois for one year.

As an undergraduate studying commerce, Dr. Wells was a member and business manager of the Indiana University Band and a member of Sigma Nu social fraternity, Blue Key, and other campus groups.

Dr. Wells received the B. S. degree in commerce from I. U. in 1924 and the M. A. degree in 1927. After graduate study at the University of Wisconsin, he was made field secretary of the Indiana Bankers' Association. In 1931 he joined the I. U. faculty as an instructor in economics.

Dr. Wells was named Dean of the School of Business in 1935 after teaching as assistant professor and professor. In his new capacity, he introduced many courses and services, such as the personnel and placement bureau.

After serving as acting president for a year proceeding President William Lowe Bryan's retirement, Dr. Wells was elected President of Indiana University in 1937 by the Board of Trustees. At his election, he was 35 and the youngest president of an American state university.

At I. U., Dr. Wells (middle) was business manager of the University band.

As President of Indiana University, Dr. Wells has been continually concerned with the welfare of students and the quality of their education. He instituted the University's thorough counseling and guidance program and has supervised the establishment of a student health and hospital program and the student employment service.

President Wells has guided the building of the University's residence hall system, which is second among Big Ten universities in proportion of the student body it accommodates. With the assistance of the late Vice-President Ward G. Biddle, Dr. Wells inaugurated both the Auditorium and the Celebrity Series.

President Wells is proud of the strong humanities program which the University offers. He also takes pride in the increasingly distinguished reputation which I. U. has attained nationally and internationally. Research activity of the University, another major interest of Dr. Wells, has expanded to an annual total of grants for research of more than $3,500,000.

His interest and ability in educational administration have led Dr. Wells to serve in many areas for various organizations and governments. President Eisenhower, in 1957, appointed him as one of the five American delegates to the 12th General Assembly of the United Nations. In the summer of 1958, Dr. Wells visited the USSR as a member of the delegation of 10 university presidents to study Russian higher education. In 1960 he represented American universities at the SEATO Conference on Higher Education in Southeast Asia.

Despite the many demands made upon his time, President Wells still finds time for personal contact with I. U.'s many students. For several years, the President has set aside specific days when any student may drop in for a visit or conference. "Hermie," as he is often called, believes that the present student body has maintained its same solidarity despite the constant growth in number.

After 25 years President Wells still feels as close to students as he did during his undergraduate instructor days and takes great pride in students' academic competence, energy, and enthusiasm.

President Wells and Dean Collins discuss University problems with the directors of the various I. U. centers.

Replacing Dr. Wells Puzzles Board Of Trustees

The Board of Trustees must approve construction programs such as the new graduate dormitory described by Dr. Wells.

One issue currently facing the Indiana University Board of Trustees is the selection of a man to succeed Dr. Herman B Wells as President of the University. The selection, which must be made before July 1962, involves a great deal of time-consuming study. A committee of faculty personnel is assisting the Trustees in the task of selecting candidates.

In June 1960, the Board approved the final draft of the revised University admission policy which increases requirements for admission. In order to give state high schools an opportunity to adjust their programs to meet the new admission standards, the change will not go into effect before 1964.

The appointments of one associate professor and nine visiting professors were approved by the Board in September. Other matters of concern to the Board of Trustees include the buying and selling of real estate, decisions on rules necessary for student and faculty safety, and the appointment of nonacademic personnel.

The Board of Trustees, the chief governing body of Indiana University, is composed of eight members elected for 3-year terms.

Three members are elected by the University alumni and five are selected by the State Board of Education with the approval of the Governor.

Faculty Council Reviews Admission Standards

Changes in admission standards, the inclusion of a reading day before final week of the second semester, and a proposed smoking lounge in the Main Library were some of the issues reviewed in the past year by the Faculty Council, the legislative body representing the faculty.

The Faculty Council meets on alternate Tuesdays during the school year and may call special sessions. The group serves as a sounding board in predicting the attitude of the total faculty on new proposals.

Although the Faculty Council has no executive power, it makes decisions on matters presented before it and sends recommendations to the Board of Trustees.

The Faculty Council is composed of 33 members. President Wells, the University's four Vice-Presidents, and the Deans of the various schools are the 13 permanent members of the Council. The remaining 20 members are elected for 2-year terms by the general faculty from the Bloomington campus, the Medical Center, and the University centers.

The Faculty Council voted to include a reading day before the second-semester final week.

Faculty's Activities Increase I. U.'s Prestige

Indiana University faculty members have added to the school's educational prestige by attaining national and international prominence in many fields.

The American Dental Association's first recognition of a commercial dentifrice, Crest, as an effective tooth decay preventive was primarily a result of research conducted by Professor Joseph C. Muhler. Dr. Muhler, Research Professor of Basic Sciences in the Indiana University School of Dentistry, studied the effectiveness of stannous fluoride solution in controlling tooth decay.

In October Tracy M. Sonneborn, Distinguished Service Professor of Zoology, announced the discovery of a type of cell inheritance controlled by the structural organization of the cell itself. Professor Sonneborn was elected president of the American Institute of Biological Science in August 1960.

British-born George H. T. Kimble, chairman of the Department of Geography, is the author of Tropical Africa, which was published in October 1960. Research for the two-volume book was financed by the Twentieth Century Fund of New York. Professor Kimble collected information for his book over a period of seven years. He made five trips to Africa and traveled over 250,000 miles.

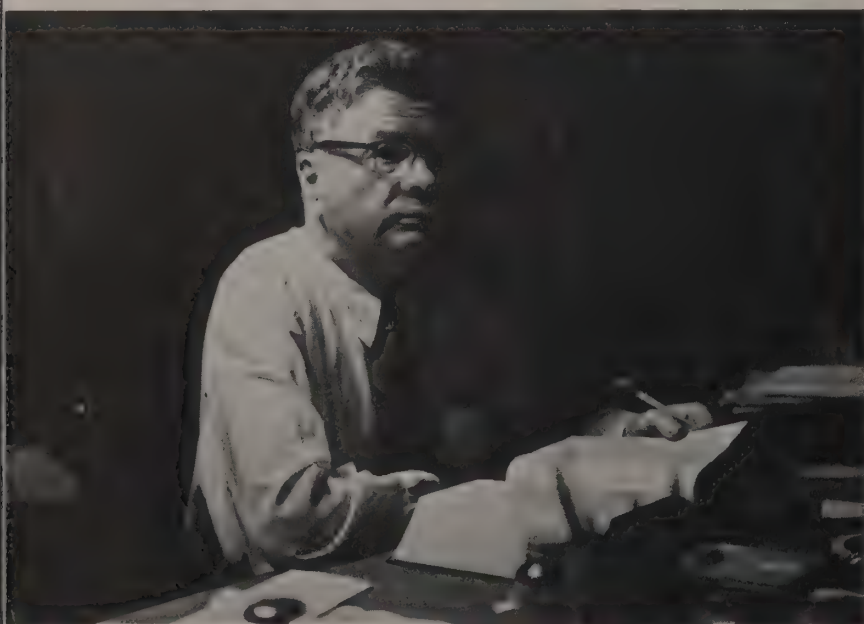

Thomas A. Sebeok, chairman of the Research Center in Anthropology, Folklore, and Linguistics, was named a fellow for a 12-month period at the Center for Advanced Study in Behavioral Sciences at Palo Alto, California. In August Professor Sebeok will go to Poland as the guest of the Institute of Literary Research of the Polish Academy of Sciences.

Chairman of the Department of Psychology, Roger W. Russell was elected secretary-general of the International Union of Scientific Psychology at the International Congress of Psychology in Bonn, Germany, last fall. In May 1960 he became the youngest person ever elected an honorary fellow of the British Psychological Society.

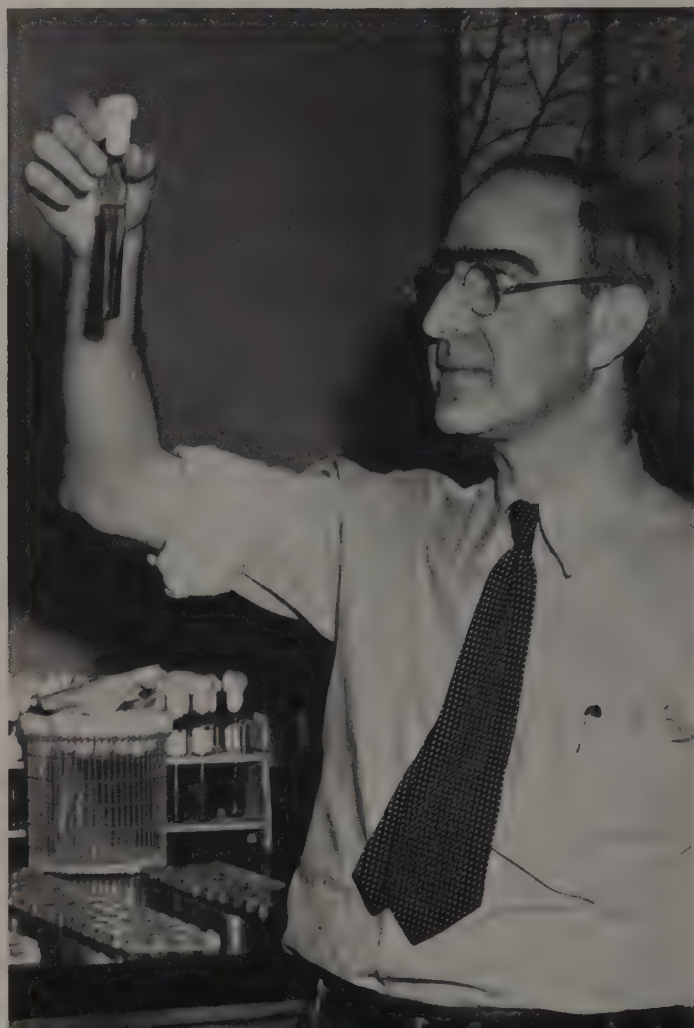

On September 9, 1960, Charles S. Hyneman, professor of government, was elected president of the 7,000-member American Political Science Association. Dr. Hyneman served as president of the association during the school year 1960-1961.

The premier performance of Symphony No. Four by S. Thomas Beversdorf, assistant professor of music, was given on December 7, 1960. The symphony, in four movements, was dedicated to Tibor Kozma and the Indiana Philharmonic Orchestra, who gave the first performance of Professor Beversdorf's score.

Professor Charles S. Hyneman is president of the 7,000-member American Political Science Association.

Professor Tracy M. Sonneborn discovered a type of cell inheritance controlled by the cell's structure.

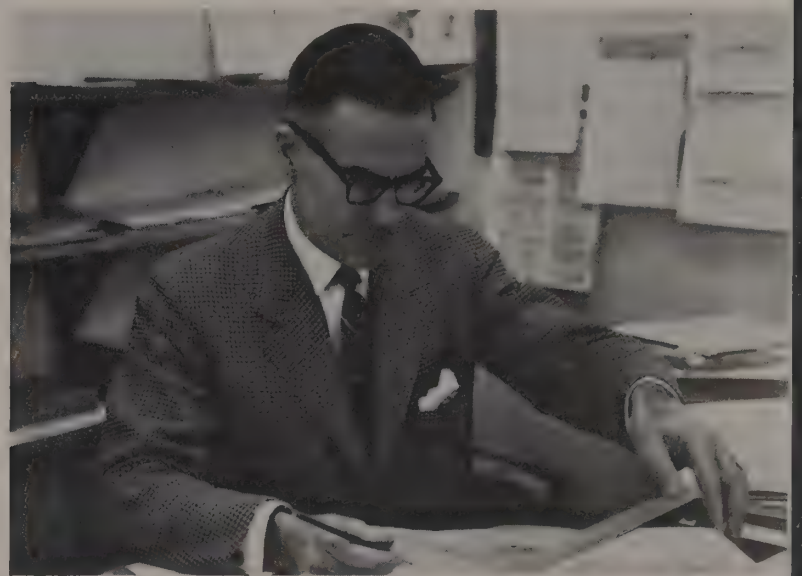

Secretary-general of the International Union of Scientific Psychology is I. U.'s Professor Roger W. Russell.

The American Dental Association recognized Crest toothpaste as a decay preventive as a result of Dr. Joseph C. Muhler's research.

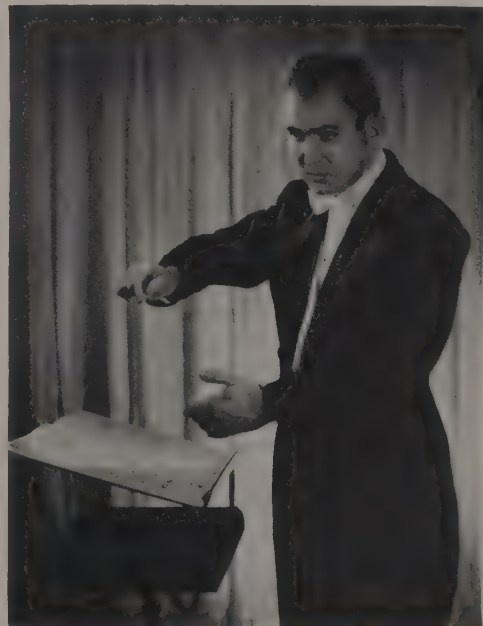

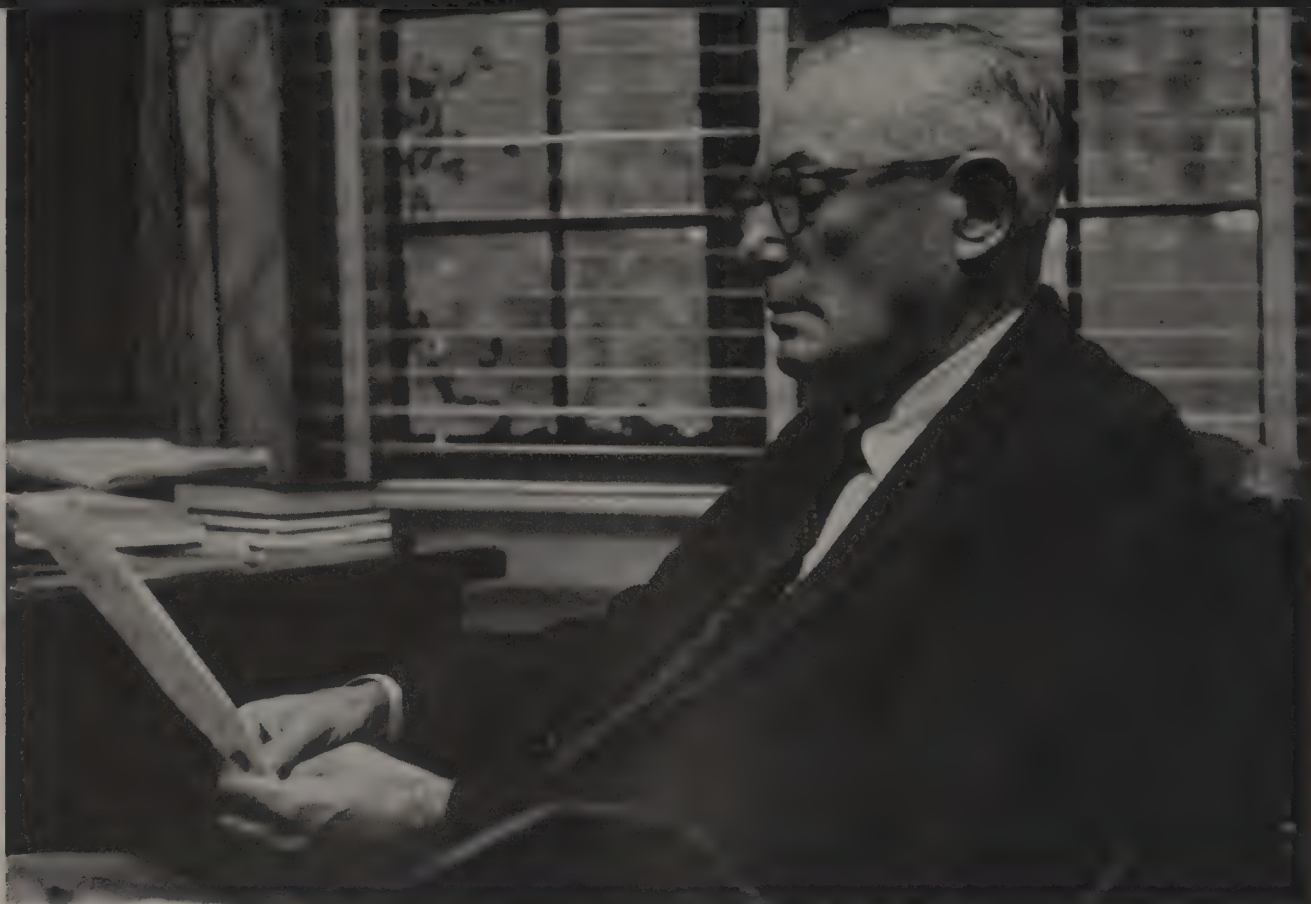

Professor Thomas A. Sebeok has been appointed a fellow at the Center for Advanced Study in Behavioral Sciences.

Tropical Africa, published in October 1960, is the result of seven years of study by Prof. George H. T. Kimble.

Herman T. Briscoe, former Vice-President and Dean of the Faculties

Five Administrators and Faculty Members Die

Five distinguished administrators and faculty members of the University died within the past year.

Clare W. Barker, a member of the I. U. faculty since 1927, was chairman of the Department of Marketing since the time of its addition to the School of Business. He received his A. B. degree from Simpson College and his M. B. A. degree from Northwestern University. The recipient of both the silver award of Alpha Kappa Psi, business fraternity, and the "Traveling Brief Case Award" as the outstanding professor of business, Mr. Barker was also the coauthor of two well-known business textbooks.

Receiving his A. B., A. M., and Ph. D. degrees from Indiana University, Professor Herman T. Briscoe was a former Vice-President and Dean of the Faculties. Before attaining this office, Professor Briscoe was chairman of the Department of Chemistry from 1938-1941 and acting Dean of the School of Business during World War II. He received both the Leather Medal and the Brown Derby Award from Sigma Delta Chi, professional journalistic fraternity.

Roland C. Davis, professor of psychology, was a native of Cambridge, Massachusetts. A graduate of Harvard College, Dr. Davis received his Ph. D. from the same institution. He was research associate at the University of Virginia before coming to Indiana University. From 1958-1959, Dr. Davis was acting chairman of the Department of Psychology. He was also the author of Ability in Social and Racial Classes and a former president of the I. U. chapter of the American Psychological Association.

Prescott W. Townsend was described by a colleague in the Department of History as "a man who inspired students with an interest in his field and encouraged their own intellectual explorations." Dr. Townsend was a scholar of ancient history and a member of the history faculty for 40 years before his retirement in 1959. Receiving both his bachelor's and master's degrees from Cornell University, he gained his Ph. D. from Yale University, where he was a Sterling Memorial Fellow. Dr. Townsend was a member of Phi Beta Kappa and the Society for the Promotion of Roman Studies.

Chairman of the Department of English since 1951, Professor James A. Work was a leader in the drive to improve English composition in Indiana and was an authority on Chaucer and 18th Century literature. Before joining the University faculty, he taught at Stanford, Northwestern, Wayne, and Brown Universities. A member of Phi Beta Kappa, Professor Work received his A. B. degree from Grinnell College and his Ph. D. degree from Yale University, where he was both a Yale scholar and fellow. He was the coauthor of several books.

Treasurer's Office Uses Mechanized Accounting

Mechanized accounting, made possible through the use of IBM machines, is now being used for the second year by the Treasurer's Office. Formerly handled by many bookkeepers, accounting information is now summarized on punch cards which give a compressed breakdown of the University's financial analysis. Because of code numbers, the same punch card can be used for different monetary reports, eliminating a number of complicated forms.

Under the guidance of Joseph A. Franklin, Vice-President and Treasurer, the Treasurer's Office is the chief financial and business office of the University.

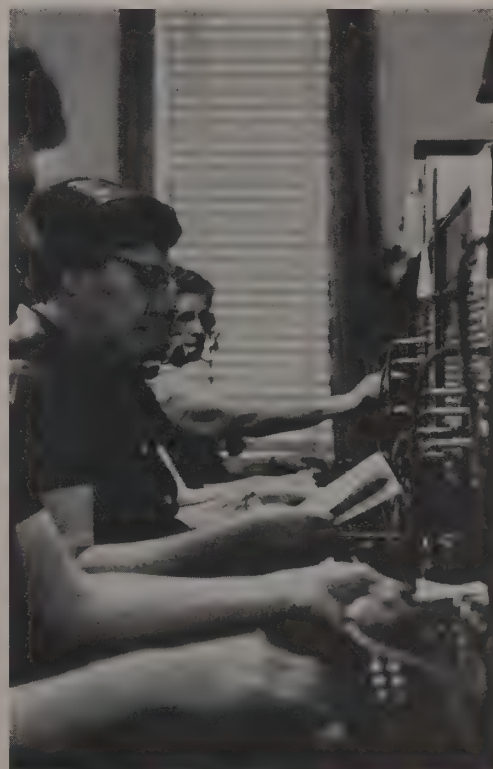

The office manages all enterprises, including building and maintenance, budgeting, budget control and planning, purchasing, and storing and supply. For the 1960-1961 school year the general costs of operation were $54,000,000. Of this amount the state of Indiana supplied 40 per cent. The remainder was obtained from the University's general income, student fees, research gifts and grants, and auxiliary enterprises such as the Bookstore and the University Press.

In addition, the office of the Treasurer controls funds for research activities and for the University's extensive construction program. This year funds for research and construction totaled $4,800,000 and $8,000,000 respectively.

Alumni Office Recognizes Five for Service

Portraits of outstanding alumni hang in the Distinguished Alumni Room in the Memorial Union.

The 1960 Distinguished Alumni Service Awards were presented to Everett S. Dean, William Croan Greenough, Arthur L. Miller, Earl W. Kintner, and Herschel D. Newson during Commencement week-end last June.

The award is the highest the University can confer on graduates who have distinguished themselves in their chosen fields of work.

Presentation of the Distinguished Alumni Service Awards is one of the many responsibilities of the office of the Indiana Alumni Association.

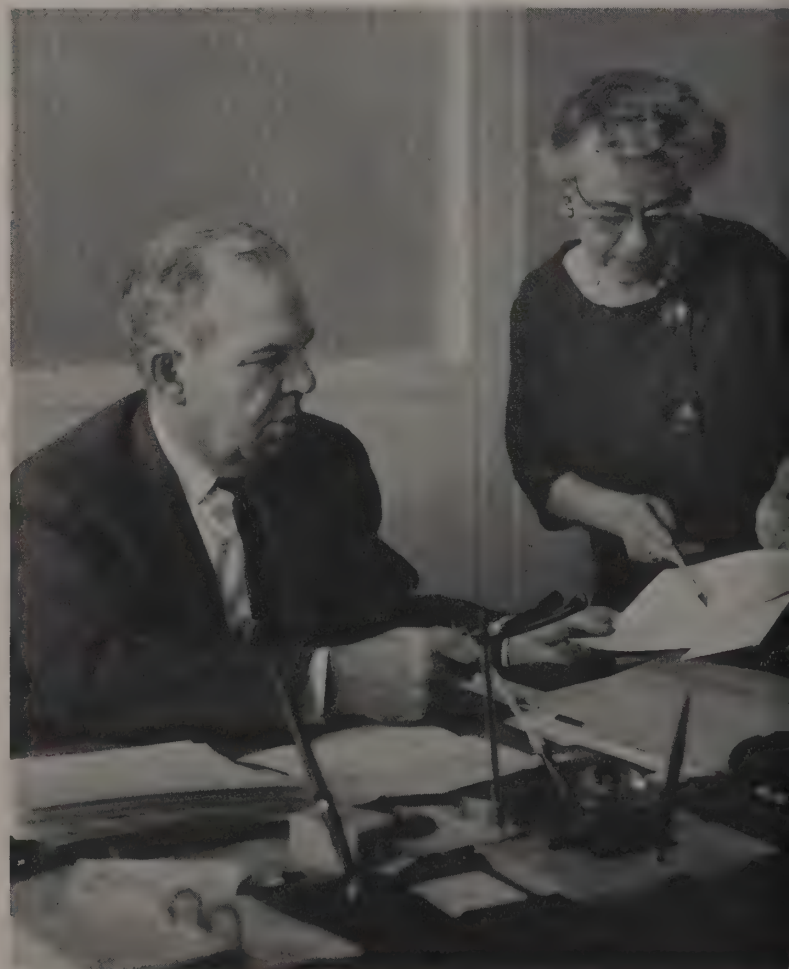

The Alumni Office, directed by Claude T. Rich, maintains official lists and the current addresses of all living alumni, who now number 123,000. The office directs alumni clubs and committees, varsity clubs, class activities and reunions, and the Alumni Institute.

The Alumni Office also publishes the Indiana Alumni Magazine. The monthly publication keeps alumni informed of personalities and events of I. U.

I. U. Events Are Publicized by News Bureau

Concerned with publicity and public relations, the Indiana University News Bureau and the Office of University Relations serve as informational extensions of educational services offered by the University.

The News Bureau, under editor Earl M. Hoff, covers all departments, people, and phases of I. U. on the Bloomington campus with the exception of athletic events. News stories and photographs are distributed primarily in Indiana but are also made available to press associations and other national mass media.

The Parent and Your University, two magazines containing news of interest to parents of students and to alumni, are distributed by the News Bureau.

E. Ross Bartley, director of University Relations, is responsible for good public relations for the University. Included among his many jobs is serving as Indiana University's educational consultant at the biennial sessions of the Indiana State Legislature.

Graduate School Revises Graduate English Credit

The graduate program of the Department of English was completely revised this year through the Graduate School. Under the new program, all graduate courses in English will offer four hours of credit, and graduate students may not enroll in any undergraduate course for graduate credit. Every student must pass the entrance requirement of having a reading knowledge of at least one foreign language.

Vice-president for Graduate Development and Dean of the Graduate School, John W. Ashton, is responsible for discussing course changes, new curricula, and programs of study with graduate students. Total enrollment of the school this year was 3800.

Co-ordination of the graduate programs of I. U. is the basic responsibility of the Division of Graduate Development through the supervision of Dean Ashton and his staff. The Division is now in its second year of operation. The Graduate Advisory Council is the Division's policy planning group.

The Indiana University Press, a part of Graduate Development, publishes both scholarly and trade manuscripts submitted by faculty members, scholars, and authors throughout the country. Its sales and promotional staff places the publications in bookstores and libraries throughout the world. The Press also prints departmental bulletins and magazines.

New Equipment Acquired for Graduate Research

New equipment purchased this year for Graduate Research includes the computing machine in the fieldhouse addition, electronic microscopes, and the facilities of the Lilly Library. These facilities are paid for by funds from I. U., foundation grants, gifts and contracts from the government and various private industries.

Research carried on at I. U. often affects homes throughout the nation. For example, many people can now have the protection of Crest toothpaste which is the first dentifrice to be recognized by the American Dental Association as an effective decay preventive agent. Basic research that led to the production of the stannous fluoride toothpaste was done in I. U. laboratories by Professor Joseph C. Muhler, Research Professor of Basic Sciences in the School of Dentistry.

Professor George H. T. Kimble, chairman of the Department of Geography, has recently completed a timely research project on the sub-Saharan or tropical area of Africa. The two-volume, 1100-page book is a culmination of five trips to Africa during seven years of intensive study.

Research which may help keep fresh vegetables fresher longer is being conducted by Carlos Miller, associate professor of botany. Dr. Miller is trying to isolate the chemical in plant material that causes its cells to duplicate.

Donald D. Jensen, assistant professor of psychology, has suggested, as a result of extensive research, a new "missing link" to complete man's probable line of ancestry back to the one-celled protozoa. The likeliest link between the vertebrates, including man, and the simpler, spineless animals, according to Dr. Jensen, is a lowly group of flat worms called "hoplenemertines".

The program of Graduate Research has been in existence since the nineteenth century when the Graduate School was created under David Starr Jordan.

Counting among its students Indiana University's graduate and professional staffs, Graduate Research is an integral part of the University's function as it furthers the discovery of knowledge in all areas of study.

The Graduate School is in charge of encouraging the development of graduate projects and receiving applications and awarding grants for this program. Graduate Research is also conducted in other graduate divisions of the University.

"Faculty and Associates" Plan To Aid Students

Samuel Edward Braden, Vice President and Dean for Undergraduate Development

Last year, the Division of Undergraduate Development began a program known as the Tower Faculty and Associates. A member of the faculty adopted 25 students from Tower Quadrangle and acted as a counselor and friend to them. In this manner, Tower Quadrangle attained a closer relationship and better understanding between faculty and students.

One of the particular interests of the Division is the superior high school student. For several summers, Indiana University has had a section of summer school devoted to instruction of 30 superior high school students who are given an accelerated composition course plus one course of the student's choice. These are not necessarily potential I. U. students, nor are they all residents of Indiana.

Also under Undergraduate Development is the Indiana Intercollegiate Student Project that provides for fifteen Indiana colleges and universities to send students to Europe each summer. These students may earn as much as six hours of credit between their junior and senior years.

Vice-President and Dean for Undergraduate Development is Samuel E. Braden. Dean Braden is responsible for the Junior Division, the Dean of Students, the Office of Records and Admissions, Women's Educational Programs, the Student Health Center, and convocations and ceremonials.

The Office of Records and Admissions reports that there were 26,000 students enrolled on the Bloomington campus and at all the University Centers.

Junior Division Suggests High School Curriculum

Counselor Logan Blank plots a first year study course.

Acquainting prospective Indiana University students with the recent changes in admission standards has been a part of the Junior Division's job this year. The Division emphasizes that if a high school student wishes to come to I. U., he should take college preparatory courses in English, science, mathematics, foreign language, and social studies in order to meet the higher admission requirements.

Pre-college counseling by the Junior Division is available through high school Visitation Day, the summer orientation program, and freshman camp. Regional get-acquainted meetings are given in Indiana and the Chicago area to inform admitted students and their parents about Indiana University.

Each Junior Division enrollee is required to have three meetings a year with his faculty counselor, who advises him on required subjects and certifies his records for undergraduate work.

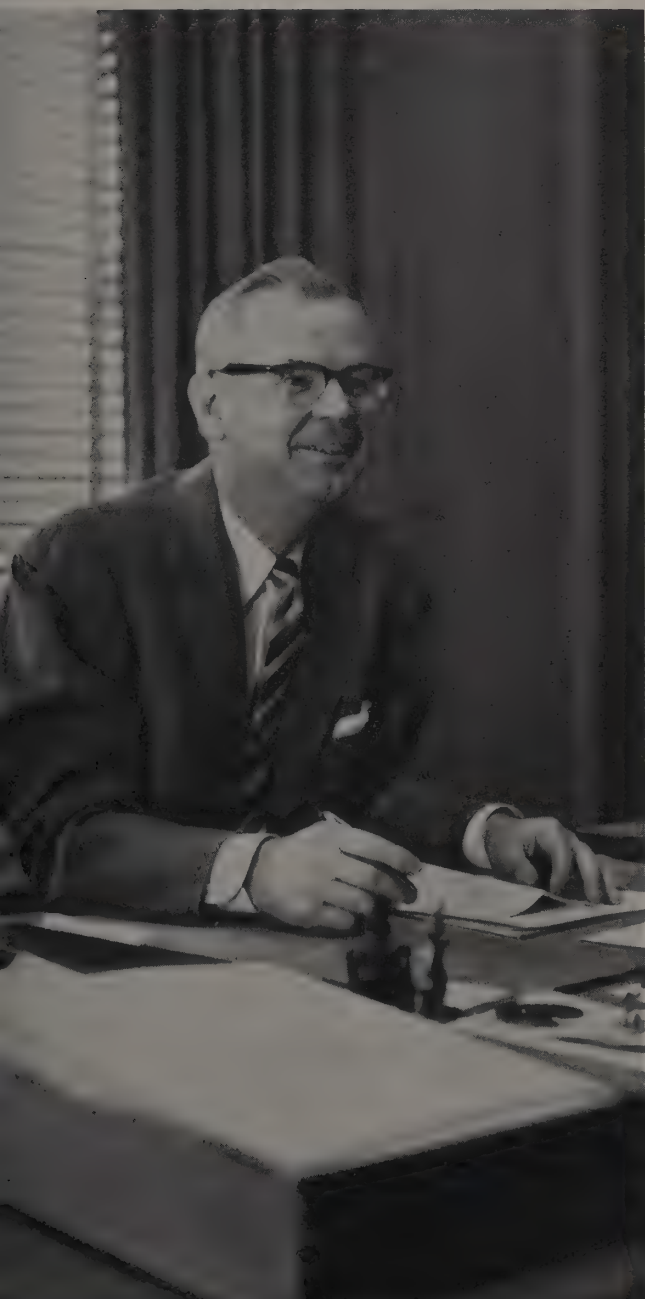

Every I. U. student who enters the University as a freshman must spend one academic year in the Junior Division before he declares his major subject.

Division of Student Personnel Studies Activities

Robert H. Shaffer, Dean of Students

The creation of a top-level University board to be known as the Committee of Student Activities was announced by Robert H. Shaffer, Dean of Students and Director of the Division of Student Personnel. The group is to be composed of student activity leaders and headed by Thomas C. Schreck, Dean of Activities.

The committee will establish policy and regulations governing extra-curricular activities. Its goal is to achieve a balanced program of activities supported by long-range planning and positive coordination.

Sorority quotas would be increased to 65 in February 1961 said Mrs. Virginia Rogers, head of the Panhellenic Office. Another office under the Division of Student Personnel is the Office of Fraternity Affairs, supervised by Robert Matson, its first full-time director.

It published two brochures concerning freshman scholarships and financial aids to upperclassmen. The office also works in conjunction with the Student Employment Office.

Mrs. Virginia Hudelson Rogers, Assistant Dean of Students, serves as advisor to sororities as well as to individuals.

Membership in the association consists of all students living in the residence halls. The IRHA is divided into three levels of government: (1) Hall or unit, (2) Center, (3) Inter-Residence Halls. Unlike any other major American university, I. U.'s IRHA governs both men and women under one constitution.

Increasing enrollment is producing the need for more housing facilities. With the promise of a near-record enrollment in 1961-62, the Central Housing Office must provide more accommodations for students.

Women Outnumber Men in Campus Enrollment

Jean Thompson and Eunice C. Roberts, Assistant Dean of Women's Undergraduate Development, discuss vocations.

Women are leading Indiana University, at least in enrollment, since this year, for the first time, more women than men are registered. The administration has created the Office of Women's Educational Programs to handle problems encountered by the numerous coeds. Recognizing the changing patterns in women's lives and the increasing importance of higher education for everybody, the office, directed by Dean Eunice C. Roberts, attempts to see that women's interests may be developed to their best advantage. The office is a part of the Division of Undergraduate Development.

Following the theory that a college woman's life is likely to develop along a pattern after graduation, Dean Roberts studies and interprets the educational needs of women students to insure that these needs are met through the University's academic offerings and living facilities.

All courses, except military classes, are open to women. Over the years women have majored in every field of study offered by the University. Each student has an academic advisor who helps her select courses to meet her interests and prepare for future demands which may be placed upon her.

University Plans for New Student Health Center

When its new building is completed sometime in the next two years, the Indiana University Student Health Center will be moved from the building which it has occupied since it was established thirteen years ago. The tentative site of the building is the northeast corner of Tenth Street and Jordan Avenue where the old Theta Xi house now stands. The present building has had two additions, the main tile unit built in 1943 and a frame structure moved to the Health Center site in 1947.

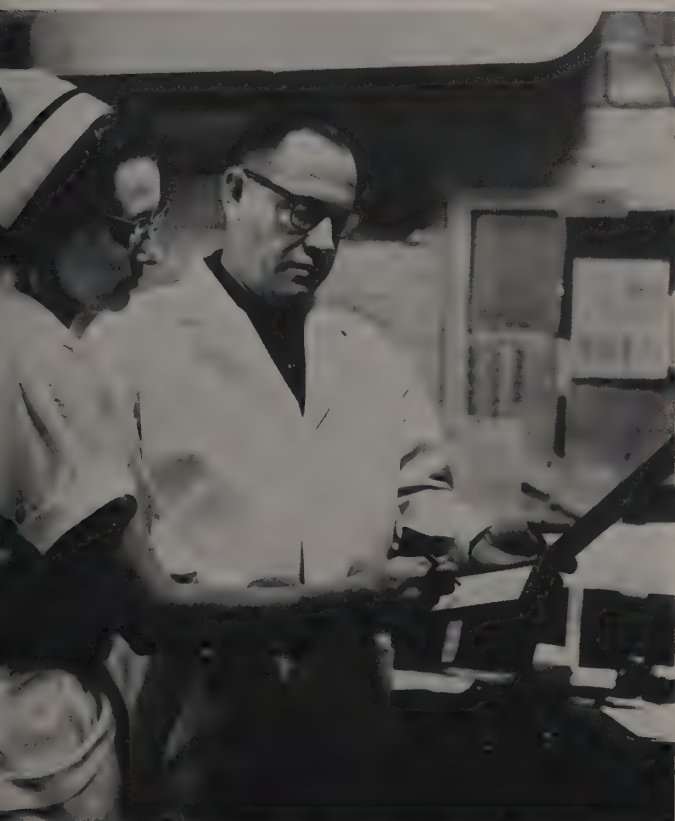

The Center offers round-the-clock services to every enrolled student. Because the health service is financed by student fees, faculty and staff members are not eligible for service, nor are married students' dependents. Directed by Dr. E. Bryan Quarles, the Center employs five practicing physicians and 21 other staff members. The staff also includes the half-time services of one psychiatrist.

Approximately 50,000 students' visits to the Health Center are recorded each year. This year the staff, which is always on duty to offer dispensary service and hospital care, has treated an average of approximately 200 cases every day.

Dean of Faculties Administers Faculty Promotions

After being approved by the Faculty Council in April 1960, a revised criteria for faculty promotions was put into effect by the office of the Dean of Faculties this year.

The new criteria for promotions includes teaching, research or creative work, and other services of administrative, professional, or academic nature. Promotion to any rank is a recognition of past achievements and a sign of confidence that the individual is capable of greater responsibilities and accomplishments.

Dean Ralph L. Collins, Vice President and Dean of Faculties, supervises all faculty and academic personnel on the Bloomington campus as well as those at the Indiana University Medical Center in Indianapolis and the I. U. Centers throughout the state. At present there are approximately 1500 full-time faculty members and about 2500 graduate instructors.

Dean Collins approves the budgets brought to him by the deans of all the schools. In turn, his budget recommendations are sent to President Wells and finally to the Board of Trustees for official approval. Sabbatical leaves and tenure are also approved by the Dean of Faculties office.

Ben-Hur Pages Are Lilly Library Dedication Gift

The long-missing first 27 pages of Hoosier General Lew Wallace's original manuscript of Ben-Hur were given as a surprise gift to I. U. at the dedication service of the Lilly Library on October 3, 1960.

Frederick B. Adams Jr., director of the Pierpont Morgan Library in New York City and main speaker at the dedication, presented the manuscript to the University's newest library. The gift was added to the Library's steadily growing collection of 70,000 rare books and 1,700,000 manuscripts.

The newest development at the Main Library is the creation of an undergraduate service desk. The service desk provides individual attention for undergraduates who, because of the Library's large size, often have difficulty finding needed material.

Plans also got underway this year for the conversion of the former rare books section of the Main Library to an honors reading room.

Other branches of the Indiana University Library are found in the Chemistry, Music, Education, and Law Buildings and Jordan Hall. Mr. Robert A. Miller is Director of Libraries.

ROTC Departments Plan Revised 1961 Programs

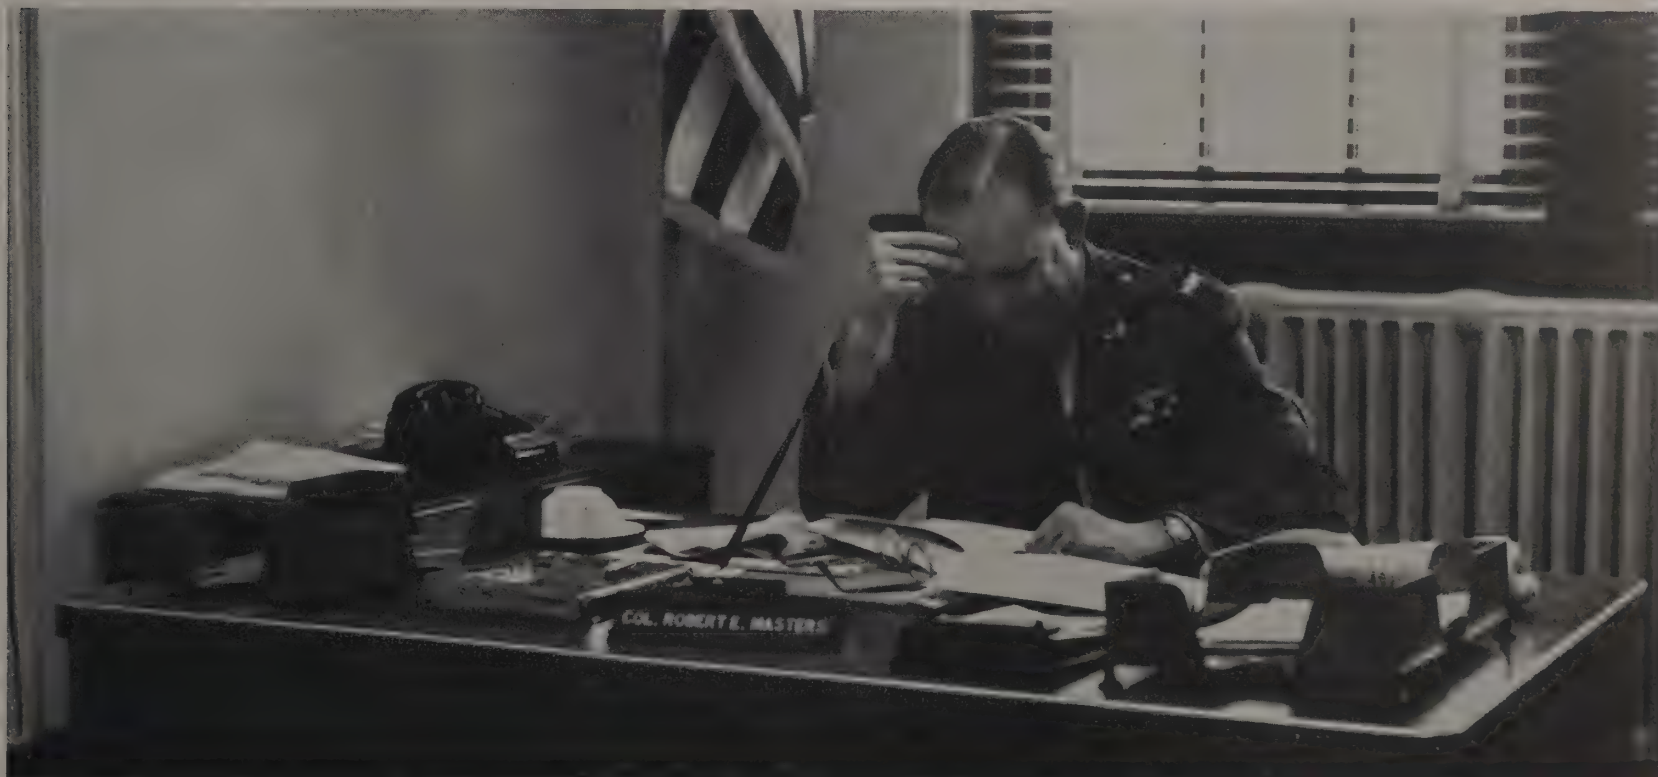

"Old Glory" stands well guarded.

A revised Army ROTC plan to be initiated in the fall of 1961 will reduce military contact hours for freshmen from three to two hours a week. In the first year of transition, the program will apply only to freshmen; however, sophomores will be included the following year. The Department of Military Science and Tactics is presently making plans for faculty members from the Department of History to teach a course in American military history.

In the fall of 1961, the Air Force ROTC program will substitute an academic course approved by the ROTC department for the required two to three hours of classroom attendance each week. Freshmen will be involved in this revision during the first semester of the program's operation; sophomores will then be included during the second semester. A revised three-hour AFROTC course will be required for the second and third semesters. AFROTC will still remain a one-hour credit subject.

Both the Army and Air Force ROTC programs have increased enrollments this year. The army corps now has three battle groups. Although the Air Force limited its freshman membership to 710, the total number of students participating in its program is an increase of 100 more than there were last year. Indications are that these revised military programs will enhance the Reserve Officer Training Corps.

Much concentration is required of Col. Robert E. Masters before making a decision which will affect several hundred ROTC cadets.

ROTC Cadets Put Theory to Use in Camps

Leaving classrooms and textbooks behind, I. U. Army and Air Force advanced ROTC cadets put into practical application at summer camps the theories they had learned in third-year ROTC classes. One hundred thirteen Army cadets attended summer camp at Fort Knox, Kentucky, for six weeks. The Air Force camp program took place at several sites, including bases in Ohio, Mississippi, Nebraska, and Tennessee. Several I. U. students received honors as outstanding cadets, and the University ranked in the first 10 in marksmanship competition in the Army program.

Moving into the field for maneuvers and platoon and squad problems, Army ROTC cadets participated in weapons training, hand-to-hand combat, bayonet training, mapping, communications, and night firing. The program stressed physical leadership and development. Summer camp attendance is a prelude to the senior-year military studies and is a prerequisite for commissioning as a second lieutenant.

Air Force cadets spent three days in overnight survival training and "fought" their way out of mountainous terrain under hazardous conditions. During most of their four weeks' training, the cadets learned the operations on an Air Force base. However, the training primarily emphasized flying. Cadets were allowed to participate in some of the jet flights and several refueling missions.

The Division of University Extension Provides Package Library to Serve Campus and State

Mrs. Hadley augments a student's research with a series of pamphlets from the package library.

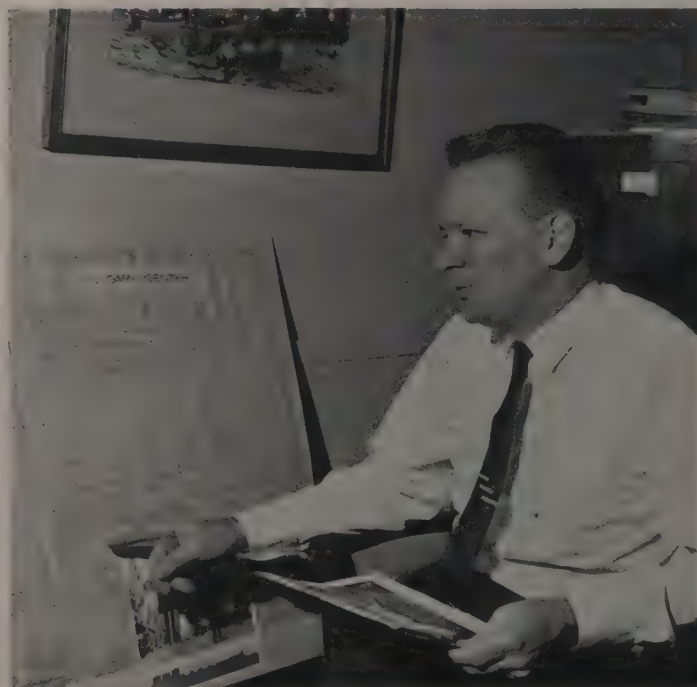

One of the unusual features of the Division of University Extension is the Package Library. Supervised by the Bureau of Public Discussion, the Library compiles current magazine articles and pamphlets which can be mailed anywhere upon request or can be used for research by students on campus. Achievement tests are also sponsored by the Bureau annually to recognize the work of outstanding high school students.

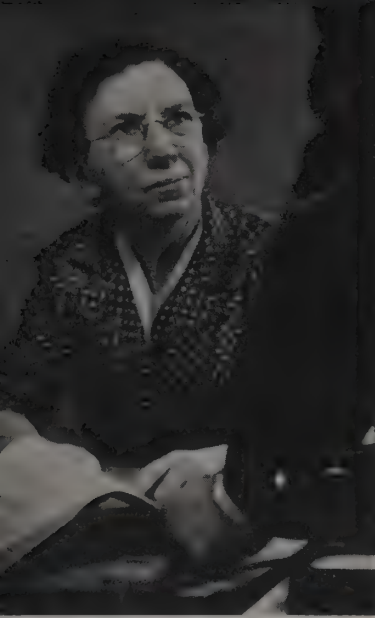

This year, the Audio-Visual Center had contracts with the International Co-operation Administration to send instructors to Nigeria, Pakistan, Thailand, and Sierra-Leone. The Center trains teachers and leaders of these countries to use audio-visual aids in community education. It also distributes educational films to campus and high school classrooms.

More than 4,000 students are now enrolled in the 200 correspondence credit courses offered by the Correspondence Study Bureau. Also included within the scope of the Division are the Bureau of Studies in Adult Education Conferences and Institutes and the Bureau of Industrial and Labor Service.

Acting Dean of the Division is Dean Smith Higgins, who is in charge of the instructional programs at the University's 10 off-campus centers which are Bloomington, Calumet, Earlham, Fort Wayne, Gary, Indianapolis, Kokomo, South Bend-Mishawaka, Southeastern, and Vincennes.

System of University Centers Initiated in 1916

The University Centers are an outgrowth of the guest lecture days of the 1890's when members of the I. U. faculty were often invited to speak to groups in the state. The popularity of these activities led to the founding of the first Center at Indianapolis in 1916 and the establishment of the second at Fort Wayne in 1917.

The success of the first two Centers during the twenties was so encouraging that another was organized at East Chicago in 1932. The other Centers followed in rapid succession: South Bend-Mishawaka in 1940, Southeastern in 1941, Kokomo in 1946, and Gary in 1948. Two cooperative Centers were set up with Earlham College at Richmond in 1947 and with Vincennes University in 1950. A center was officially established in Bloomington in 1946. Under the administration of the Bloomington Center, Evansville College offers graduate programs in education and health, physical education, and recreation. Altogether, the Centers serve more than 35,000 students a year.

The Centers' swelling enrollments have created a need for new buildings, one of which is being constructed for the South Bend-Mishawaka Center. The structure will include a 900-seat auditorium, 23 classrooms and laboratories, offices, a bookstore, a library, and student-faculty lounges.

Adult enrollment on the non-credit level has also increased because of the Center's adult education program, designed for those interested in academic knowledge without college credit.

The Gary Center's rapid growth has resulted in an increase from 20 instructors to more than 70 and in expansion of the curriculum to over 150 credit and non-credit courses.

Providing for Gary's expansion is its new educational plant, which contains all the facilities and equipment used by the Center. Included in the building are an auditorium, a library, and a faculty-administration center.

The Calumet Center offered a new course this year entitled Indiana Management Program for Small Business. The program enlightened owners of stores and small industries on principles and techniques of management.

The Center houses 1,284 full- and part-time students. A wide variety of adult education courses are also conducted at local high schools.

An increase of 40 per cent over last year was noted in the number of non-credit students at Southeastern.

The Southeastern Student, which is published monthly, contains reports of that Center's activities. Many students devote time to the Psychology and German Clubs and the I. U. Concert Series.

The Fort Wayne Center is again in need of additional space after expansion in 1937. New facilities will be constructed soon in cooperation with Purdue University. When the new building is completed, perhaps

Division of Allied Health Sciences

Graduates in the Division of Allied Health Sciences will, for the first time this year, all receive bachelor-of-science degrees from the School of Medicine. When the Division was organized in 1959, it became an integral part of the School. Degrees were then granted only in physical and occupational therapy; this year, 35 B. S. degrees were awarded to the first graduating class.

Undergraduates in the Division of Allied Health Sciences study on the Bloomington campus; graduate students, however, complete their work in Indianapolis. Dr. Aaron L. Andrews, Director of the Division, visits the Bloomington campus weekly to confer with individual students. Beginning this year, monthly programs of a professional nature have been given in Bloomington to make information available to students by means of speakers, panels, and discussion groups.

The Division is responsible for all undergraduate education of a paramedical nature.

College of Arts and Sciences Expands Program

The Department of Geology will move from 75-year-old Owen Hall to the newest building on campus.

Two new departments, History and Logic of Science and the Committee on Asian Studies, were added to the College of Arts and Sciences this year. The College now consists of 49 separate departments.

The Department of History and Logic of Science offers an integrated program of studies leading to the M. A. and Ph. D. degrees in the historical development and logical structure of science. For approximately two years, the program will be for graduates only; later it will become an undergraduate area. A limited amount of aid for students in the department is being provided by the National Defense Education Act.

The Committee on Asian Studies tentatively includes the study of Southeast Asia, India, and the Near East and Far East. It is primarily intended to inform the students and graduate specialists about underdeveloped parts of the world. Distinguished instructors in the field are committee chairman, Joseph L. Sutton; Visiting Professor Tien-Yi Li and Assistant Professor Wadie Jwaideh.

Under the supervision of Dean Frank T. Gucker and the administrative staff, an additional 57 instructors have been employed in the various departments of the College. The College's new physical facilities now under construction include the Department of Geology Building on East Tenth Street and a Fine Arts and Radio-Television Building on "cultural square."

About 40 per cent of last year's Junior Division students entered the College of Arts and Sciences this year, bringing the enrollment to 2500.

School of Business Adds World Business Degree

The first doctorate degrees of international business administration will be awarded by the School of Business in 1962. I. U. is the first school in the Midwest to offer graduate studies in this field. At present there are 20 students enrolled as candidates for either master's or doctor's degrees in the new program.

An increased number of required courses in mathematics and the social and behavioral sciences has been included in the undergraduate curriculum. In the spring, the Business School has its own Academy Awards Day at which it presents a $1,000 cash award to the student who submits the best business idea. Beta Gamma Sigma, the honorary society for graduate and undergraduate students in the School of Business who rank high scholastically, also presents several scholarships at this program.

Last year in a peak year for the School's placement bureau, approximately 400 companies sent representatives to conduct interviews, and more than 1,000 firms maintained correspondence with the bureau. This represented a 16 per cent increase in business participation over the preceding year.

Arthur M. Weimer, Dean of the School of Business, discusses Business Horizons with William G. Pinnell, Associate Dean.

After sixteen years of "how to," seniors decide on "what to."

On a much-too-early morning, the B. & E. Building awaits sleepy students who must appear for 7:30 classes.

For a better perspective, students refer to several texts.

Students prepare for tomorrow's assignment—or last week's.

Class dismissed, students discuss the thoughts presented—or Saturday night's date.

Practice the capital letters.

I. U.'s Expanding School of Dentistry Tests Crest

"Open wider, please," say dentists, during clinical practice, to tiny-mouthed children receiving free dental care.

Dr. Tom Connell probes a model of a dental plate.

Maynard Kiplinger Hine, Dean of the School of Dentistry

Indiana University provided the testing ground for Crest Toothpaste, the first toothpaste ever endorsed by the American Dental Association. This endorsement was the result of the distribution by Dr. Joseph C. Muhler of more than 20,000 tubes of toothpaste and 37,000 brushes, and of 40,000 separate examinations and 250,000 X-ray photographs. I. U. students were the guinea pigs for Dr. Muhler's non-commercial study of the effects of stannous fluoride in toothpastes. This study was conducted through the use of the facilities at the I. U. School of Dentistry.

An addition to the School Building at Indianapolis will permit expansion of most of its departments. The five floor wing, now nearing completion, will be completely air conditioned and will provide a double amount of classroom space. The addition includes an enlarged orthodontics department, two dental clinics, a television studio, offices, and research quarters.

This expansion of the School's facilities allows room for an increase in the number of students accepted. The present building was erected in 1934. The new Medical Science Building at the Medical Center will house all classes for freshman dental students as well as many classes for sophomores.

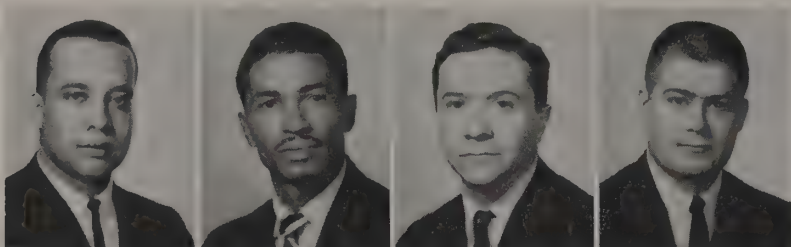

With the aid of financial grants, a new program is now being developed to train graduate dentists in research and teaching in the basic sciences. In the academic year 1960-61 the School of Dentistry had a total registration of approximately 370.

Intent upon his work, a dentist studies decay prevention.

School of Education Promotes Air-Borne TV Class

Harold G. Shane, Dean of the School of Education

The Bureau of Measurement determines a student's dexterity as part of a mechanical ability test.

Classrooms from the sky became a reality this year as the Indiana University School of Education participated in a mid-western air-borne television program. This latest development in modern education utilizes the value of airplanes for greater broadcasting distance.

The University School was used as a regional demonstration model for the program, as it received, in the classrooms, taped video lessons broadcast from an airplane. Dr. Mendel Sherman served as area coordinator. Approximately 13,000 schools and colleges and five million students in six Midwest states received the experimental programs.

Dean Harold G. Shane made a tour of administrative review this fall to aid and advise teacher education in Thailand, Pakistan, Korea, Nigeria, and Brazil. This action was carried on under international contracts with the International Co-operation Administration.

The value of seven semesters of academic and methods courses . . .

After hours of experimentation and practice, art methods students learn several techniques of application and design.

. . . is understood as student teacher, Judy Rasmussen, attempts for the first time to guide the minds and bodies of young children.

In art methods class, one dips newspaper strips in paste to construct a papier-mache so he may later teach others the process.

Several Additional Facilities for School of Health, Physical Education, and Recreation are Complete

Arthur S. Daniels, Dean of Health, Physical Education, and Recreation

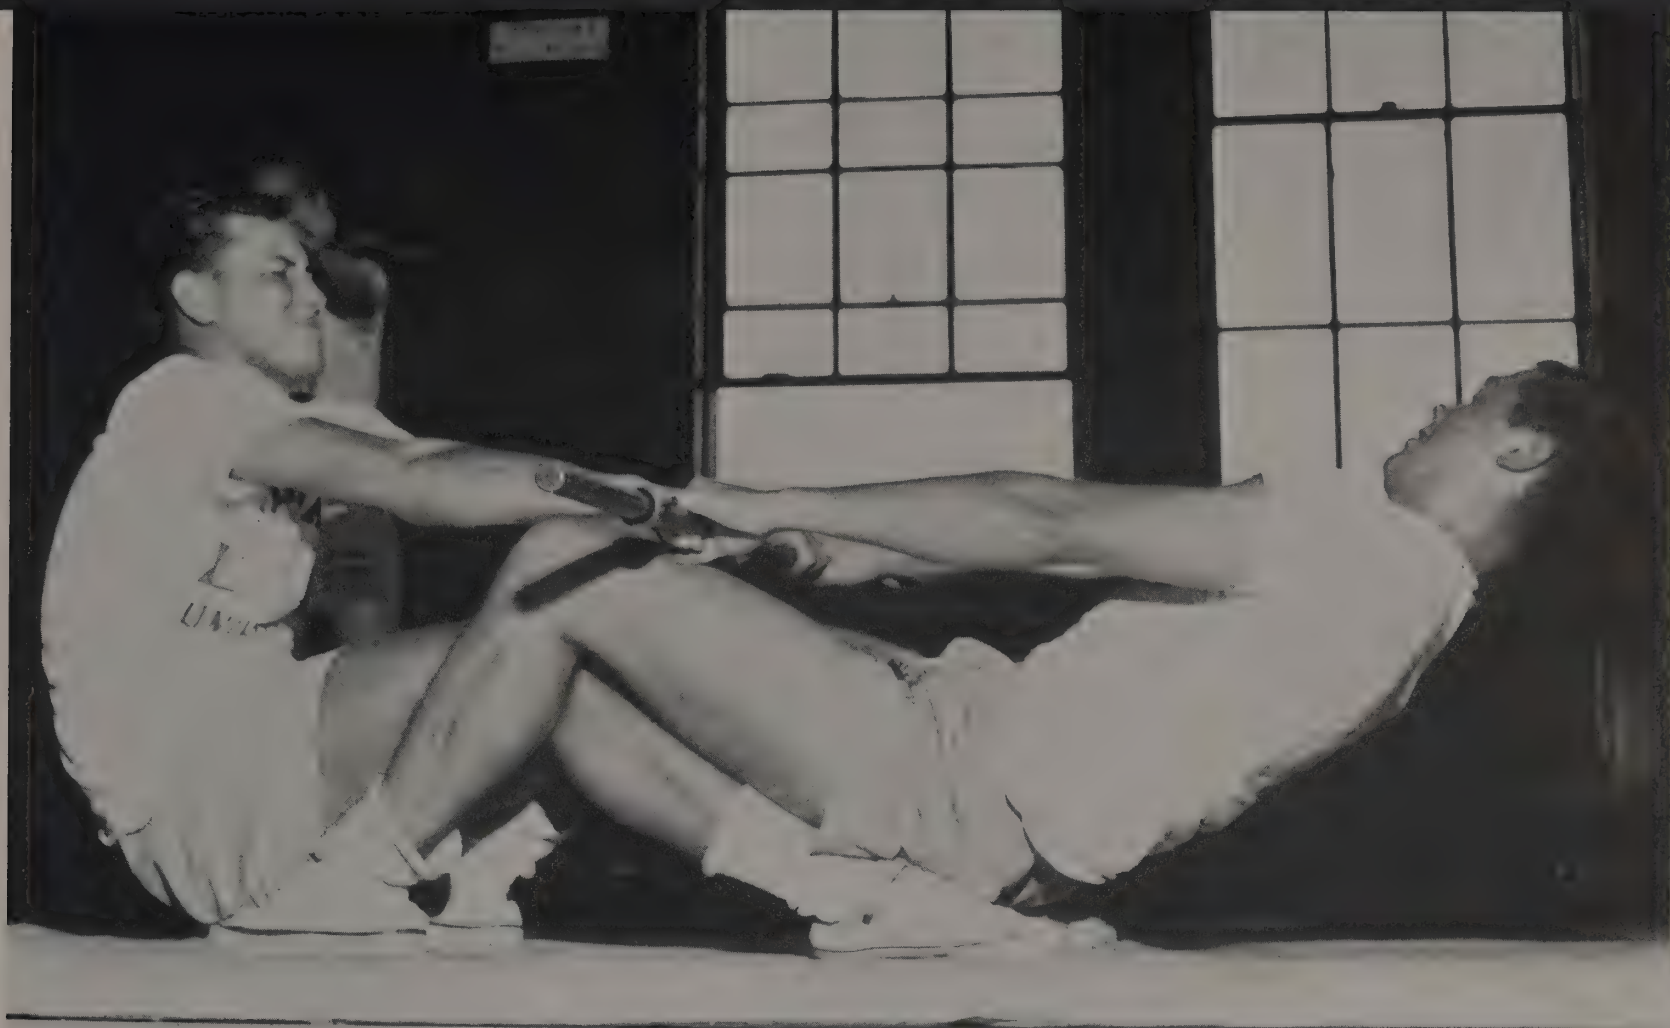

For the first time in the history of the School of Health, Physical Education, and Recreation, the entire school is housed in one building. The departments of the school were moved this year from Alpha Hall and the Student Building to modern facilities in the new gymnasium addition. The building provides increased services to students, including the expansion of the intramural program. The new pool area has a seating capacity of approximately 1400.

Near the gymnasium addition is a home fallout shelter, constructed by the Department of Health and Safety. The shelter, a cement block house 20 feet square, can accommodate a family of five in complete isolation for two weeks.

With the co-operation of the Riley Memorial Association, a 110-acre lake has been constructed at Bradford Woods, an outdoor education area. The lake will serve graduate students enrolled in camping and recreation courses and other groups occupying the various camping units in the area such as crippled children, the Boy Scouts, and civic groups.

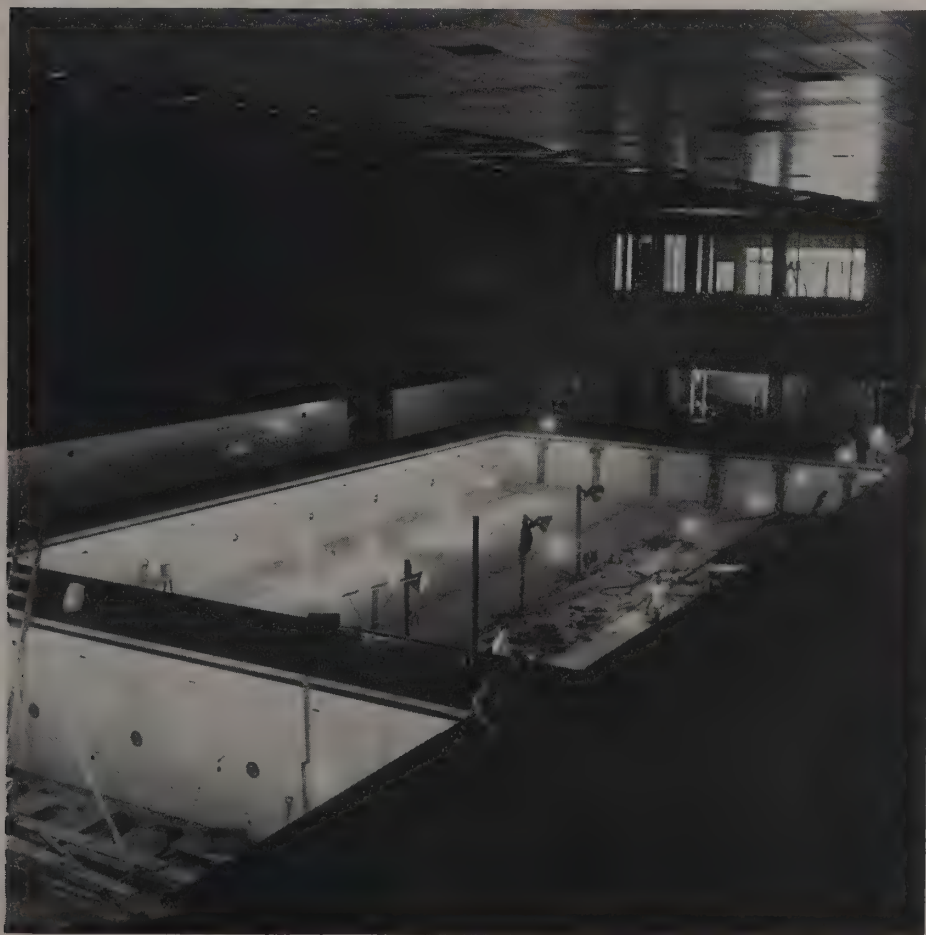

Hurryin' Hoosiers, feminine variety, coax the ball into the basket for another two points in a women's HPER class.

"Yo ho, heave ho"—tug-of-war progresses in a physical education class as muscles stretch and strain for firmer bodies.

Facilities include an Olympic pool and one of the country's finest diving pools.

Trampolines are resilient—fortunately.

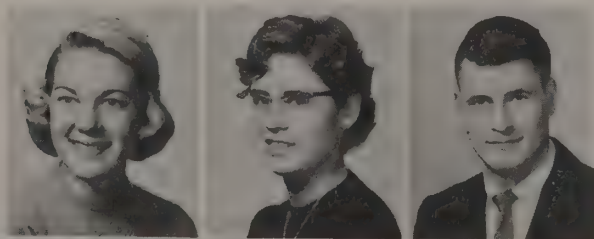

Only I. U. offers graduate study in athletic training.

Somebody go get some bufferin quick!

The $3,642,000 wing of the old fieldhouse opened second semester with a new swimming pool, diving pool, and four gymnasiums.

School Of Law Exchanges Ideas Internationally

Leon Harry Wallace, Dean of the School of Law

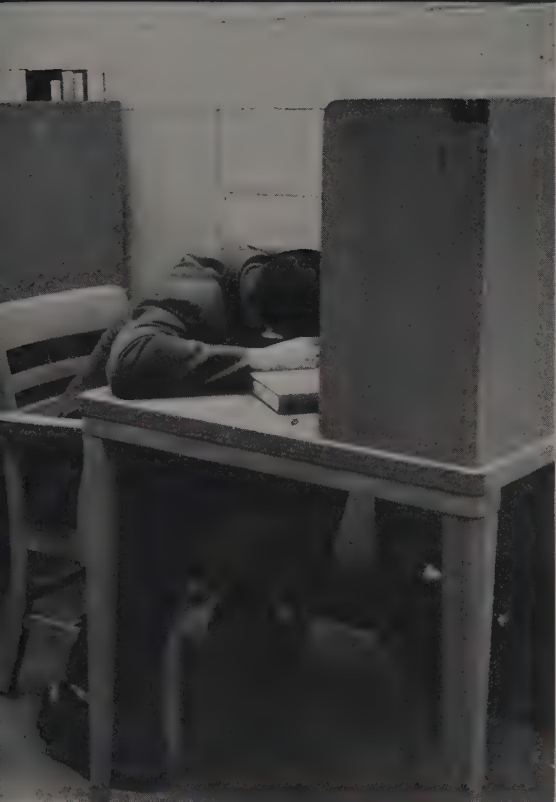

Furthering the trend of international exchange of ideas, Professor Jerome Hall of the Indiana University School of Law spent last summer lecturing at several universities in Mexico and the independent countries of South America. Halfway around the world, Indiana's Professor Ralph Fuches was an adviser to the Indian Law Institute in New Delhi, India.

I. U.'s future lawyers study at the Bloomington or Indianapolis divisions. As part of the three-year graduate law study, students take part in seminars, trial tactics, and case research. Those students holding both engineering and law degrees are discovering that there is a tremendous demand for their services in patent firms and large corporations.

Dean of the I. U. Law School is Leon Wallace. Associate Dean Benjamin F. Small serves in the administration of both divisions, but he is specifically responsible for the Indianapolis division, where his offices are located.

Representatives from three foreign countries—Nepal, Argentina, and the Philippines—are among the six hundred thirty-one law students.

Recent court decisions stimulate debate as to whether the new interpretations will significantly alter the administration of an old law.

"Whodunit" fades into a legal nightmare.

"But, Acts of 1945, Chap. 93, Sec. 3, (d), p. 539, says—"

Lawyers use the technique of role playing to simulate a court trial in a moot court session.

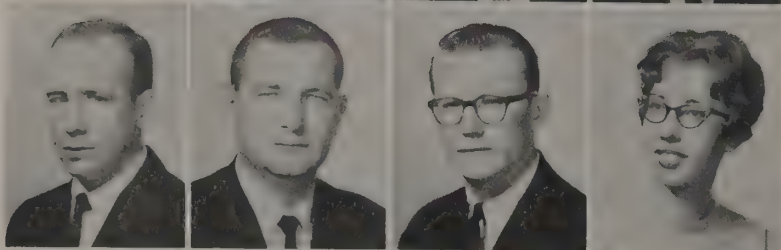

At the opening of the School of Law in 1842, the Board of Trustees said the School "should be one in which the student shall be so trained that he shall never, in the attorney, forget the scholar and the gentleman."

Division of Library Science Improves Filing

Margaret Irene Rufsvold, Director of the Division of Library Science

Science Bibliography and Documentation is the newest course added to the graduate curriculum of Library Science. Its purpose is to develop a method of processing research information so that an electronic computer may be used as a collective file for contemporary discoveries.

Library Science, a division of the School of Education, is primarily designed for graduate students. A major is not offered in this area for undergraduate students, but a master-of-arts degree with a major in Library Science is offered on the graduate level.

The master-of-arts degree in Library Science was established at I. U. in the fall of 1949. Since that time, the graduate as well as the undergraduate curriculum in Library Science has been offered on the Bloomington campus in both the regular and summer sessions. The basic professional preparation for librarianship requires five years of university study.

The regular program contains courses in all types of library work ranging from a Study of Humanities and Library Research, to Library Materials for Children and Adolescents and Reading Guidance.

Foreign students learn techniques applicable in the home countries.

Accuracy is of prime importance to the librarian.

School of Medicine Trains Teachers in Pakistan

During a lecture, students learn theories of micro-biology that will soon be a part of their medical practice.

Dr. Edward M. Millhouse Jr., research associate in anatomy, clarifies theories demonstrated in the experiment.

A Basic Science Institute in Karachi, Pakistan is being operated for the second year by the I. U. School of Medicine, working under a contract with the International Co-operation Administration of the federal government. The Institute, dedicated in March 1959, is educating much-needed teachers for Pakistan medical colleges.

The School of Medicine maintains a strong undergraduate program in the basic sciences which is conducted in the new Medical Science building at the Medical Center in Indianapolis. The building, constructed at a cost of over $7,000,000, offers every modern facility for medical education and research. The Ph. D. degree is now granted students in the basic subjects.

Also in its second year, the new program of medical education on the Bloomington campus, designed to demonstrate medical career possibilities, has increased its student enrollment from 10 to 14.

Repertoire Opera Introduced By School Of Music

Wilfred C. Bain, Dean of the School of Music

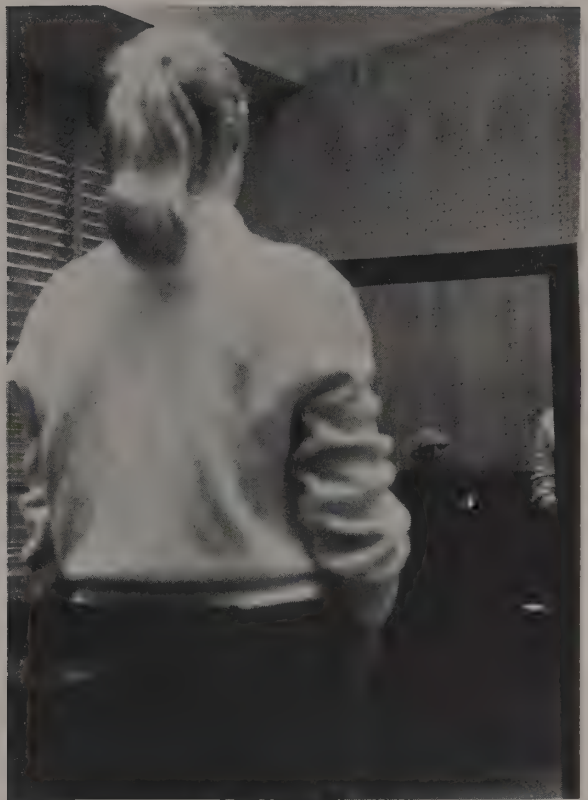

Indiana University became the only school in the nation to stage repertoire opera this year. Under the direction of Dean Wilfred C. Bain, the School of Music produced seven different operas in English every Saturday night for three, five, or six performances.

All areas of production of these operas were handled by the School of Music faculty and its 641 students. The School hopes to stimulate a professional situation in which operas can be repeated alternately with intensive practice before each performance.

Facilities of the School of Music were consolidated and improved this year with the completion of the School's $3,000,000 circular annex. The limestone structure contains 95 studios and offices, 105 practice rooms, three classrooms, five rehearsal rooms, a ballet studio, and a sheet music library. The "pie-shaped" rooms are sound-proofed to reduce acoustical problems and air-conditioned to help maintain constant pitch control of the musical instruments as well as to provide adequate air for persons in the building.

The magic of the opera stage sweeps the audience to the splendor of the mystic East in The Golden Cockerel.

The halls are alive with the "sound of music."

Cellists intently count the measures of their duet.

Musicians take a "double stop" between classes.

The I. U. School of Music, already one of the finest in the World, increased its facilities with a new $3,000,000 addition.

To improve their own techniques, musicians study other artists.

School of Nursing Revises Entire Program

A newborn baby receives his first dose of TLC.

For the first time this year, sophomore students of the I. U. School of Nursing are paying regular University fees and room and board. Previously, nursing students paid for their education by helping to staff the Medical Center hospitals. As a result of the School of Nursing's completely revised program, students can now devote more time to their educational curriculum rather than to practical experience.

Students may complete either a one- or two-year prenursing program on the Bloomington campus before beginning a three-year program at the Medical Center.

The School of Nursing received a grant this year from the National Institute of Mental Health for the integration of mental health studies into the basic program.

The School has added five new positions to its faculty. Two of these are in public health nursing, one is in pediatrics, and two are for medical and surgical foundations.

Division of Optometry Studies Drivers' Vision

Miriam Stemle takes a "bird's eye view" of Dr. Hofstetter, Director of the Division of Optometry, and Dr. John Carter.

Dr. M. S. Harding gives Mrs. Betsy Moulton a perfect fit.

Five major research contracts have been awarded to the Indiana University Division of Optometry this year. One, from the American Optometric Foundation, concerns research on the visual problems peculiar to night driving. The Division of Optometry is trying to determine how visual needs for night driving differ from those of day driving.

Of the four remaining contracts, three are with the United States Air Force and one with the Public Health Service.

The Division of Optometry offered its first year of preoptometry courses in the fall of 1951 and established its first professional courses in 1953-54.

The Division, one of 10 in the United States and Canada, has many facilities for training its 62 students. The optometry clinic serves about 1,200 people yearly with eye checks, orders for glasses, and contact lens fittings.

Directed by Dr. Henry W. Hofstetter, the Division offers a five-year curriculum leading to a degree in optometry and eligibility for a license to practice in Indiana or other states. Students interested in teaching optometry or in a career in research may then take a three-year graduate course for a Ph. D. degree in the study of physiological optics.

Division of Social Service Is Unique in Indiana

The only school in Indiana to provide professional education in social work, the Division of Social Service offers a two-year graduate program involving both classroom and field work courses. In the classroom students undertake intensive study in the various areas of human behavior, the organization and administration of social welfare services, in addition to the two principal methods of social work—case-work and group work.

At the same time, in field work in social agencies, students apply the knowledge of theory and method gained in the classroom. Under close supervision of professionally qualified field instructors, students work with people who seek social welfare services throughout the Indianapolis area.

Students in various colleges who might be interested in social service work were invited by the Division to go on a field trip to several social agencies in Indianapolis this year. Following the visits, the division gave a reception for the students. At this time several leaders in the field spoke.

Graduates are qualified to practice social work in such settings as public and voluntary family and child welfare agencies, hospitals, prisons, courts, community research and planning agencies, institutions for the mentally ill and mentally defective, and child guidance and adult psychology clinics.

In November of this year, the Division of Social Service claimed an enrollment of 75 full-time students and 35 part-time students.

Retiring athletic director Frank Allen offers best wishes to his successor Bill Orwig.

I. U.'s magnificent new athletic plant majestically lines the evening sky.

Hoosier Relays were in the Fieldhouse.

Bill Orwig to Head I. U. Athletic Department

The announcement of a new athletic director, a 4-year probation imposed by the National Collegiate Athletic Association, and the completion of the new Stadium and Fieldhouse made 1960-1961 a memorable year for Indiana University's athletic program.

I. U.'s new athletic director, J. W. (Bill) Orwig, will assume his duties June 30. Mr. Orwig, who replaces retiring Frank Allen, at present is director of athletics at the University of Nebraska. An all-American athlete at the University of Michigan, Mr. Orwig was a high school prep coach in Ohio for several years. In addition, he coached football at the University of Toledo and the University of Michigan.

In April 1960, the I. U. athletic department was rocked by the probation placed on the athletic program by an NCAA ruling. Charging the University with using irregular practices to recruit football players, the NCAA ruled that I. U. could not compete in any NCAA post-season tournament or any NCAA-sanctioned holiday tournament in any sport for four years. The penalty also ended I. U. appearances on television sports for the same period and denied the University the right to be represented on any NCAA committee and to vote before the Association on any matter.

One of the brightest spots of the 1960-1961 athletic season was the completion of the new Fieldhouse and the new Stadium.

The Fieldhouse, designed as an indoor practice area, will be used as an interim home for basketball until an arena, the final piece of major construction in the new athletic plant, is completed.

Seating 10,300 spectators, the Fieldhouse has excellent ventilation and heating systems, a new sound system, and a system of mercury vapor lights.

The new Stadium, which was dedicated at the Homecoming game with Michigan State, seats 48,344 persons—all at the sides of the field. Because of the curved shape of the stadium, all the seats have a direct sight line on the field. The west stand at the highest point rises 109 rows while the east stand is 72 rows high.

A week after the basketball season ends, the new Fieldhouse is a much emptier and quieter spot.

Student Athletic Board Organizes Pom Pom Girls

A vivacious new group called the Pom Pom Girls ushered the I. U. Fightin' Hoosiers into the stadium at every home game this year. The organization of the group was a project of the Student Athletic Board, which supervises the selection and training of the varsity cheerleaders, assists with half-time ceremonies, and conducts the Hoosier Hostess program.

The board also serves as liaison between the student body and the Department of Intercollegiate Athletics regarding ticket sales and other subjects related to athletics. The president of the board sits as a non-voting member on the University Committee on Activities. This year the board formulated the ticket sales policy and planned the seating arrangements for athletic events.

The nine members of the board are appointed each spring by President Herman B Wells on recommendations from the athletic department. Students are chosen for leadership, interest, and enthusiasm. The board is now a member of the new Student Activities Committee.

Hoosier Olympians Win Medals in Rome

One of the brightest spots in I. U.'s long athletic history came last September when it sent a six-man team to compete in the Olympics at Rome. This band of athletes captured four gold medals, two silver medals, and one bronze medal.

An outstanding star of the 1960 Olympics was swimmer Mike Troy. Troy qualified first in the 200-meter butterfly event in the Olympic trials with an Olympic record of 2:15.5. In the final of the butterfly event at Rome, he broke the Olympic record and his own world record with a time of 2:12.8 to win a gold medal for the U. S. Besides this, he led the 800-meter freestyle relay team to another gold medal and another new world record.

Swimmer Frank McKinney, senior, was another I. U. star at Rome. He captured a gold medal as a member of the 400-meter medley relay team which set an Olympic and world record, and he took a second place medal in the 100-meter backstroke.

Walt Bellamy won a gold medal as a member of the 1960 U. S. Olympic basketball team. The all-American and all-Big Ten center played a key role in the United States' undefeated sweep to the Olympic basketball championship. Bellamy is the first I. U. player to ever win a berth on the U. S. basketball team.

Willie May represented both the Hoosiers and the Chicago Track Club in track. May, a former Big Ten champion in both indoor and outdoor low and high hurdles, placed second in the 110-meter high hurdles. His time of :13.8 was identical to that of the winner, but he lost a judges' decision.

George Breen, a graduate student at I. U. last year, placed third in the 1500-meter free-style and brought back a bronze medal.

Alan Somers, another Indiana swimmer, was the top U. S. qualifier in both the 400- and 1500-meter freestyle events. In the finals at Rome, he placed fifth in the 400 and seventh in the 1500.

The six 1960 Hoosier Olympians are the largest representation ever to come out of Indiana University. In 20 previous individual appearances in the Olympic Games, I. U. athletes had accounted for a total of only ten gold and silver medals.

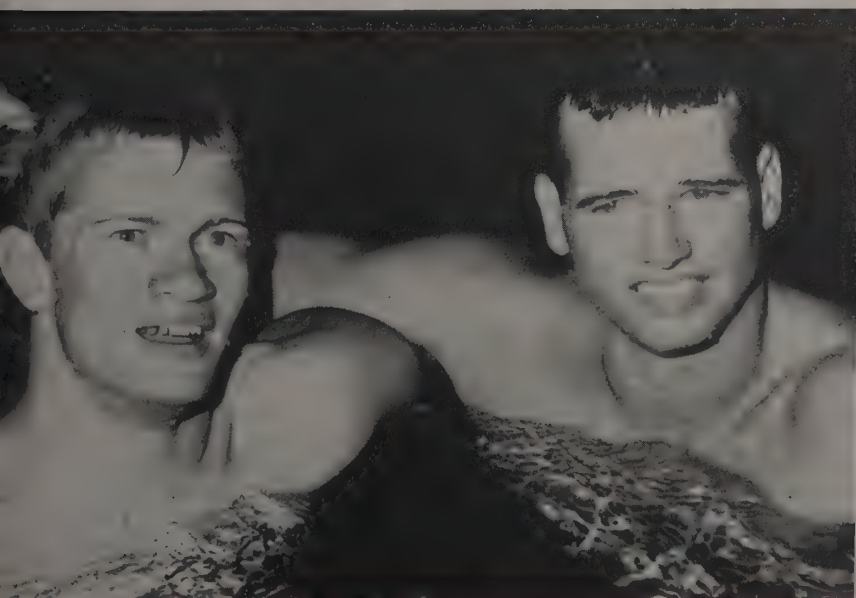

Kamal Abdou, formerly of Egypt and now a graduate student, was selected to referee boxing matches in the 1960 Olympics.

Olympians Walt Bellamy (4) and Bob Boozer (5) fight for a rebound to help give the U. S. an 81-57 victory over Russia.

Records Do Not Tell Whole Football Story

The 1960 season for the Fightin' Hoosiers was not a bright one so far as the won-lost column is concerned, but it showed football fans that I. U. could give any team a hard battle.

Two Hoosiers won national acclaim. Joe Maroon was nominated to the Pop Warner Scholarship Team and Earl Faison was selected as an all-American athlete.

At Illinois, the Fightin' Hoosiers fought against the preseason favorites, who wanted revenge after a 20-0 upset last year. The Illini led only 7-6 at halftime but went on to win, 17-6. Indiana trailed Minnesota, Big Ten cochamps, by only seven points at halftime but wilted under the strong pressure of the Gophers in the second half. The Gophers went on to the Rose Bowl, ranked as the number one team in the nation.

Coming home for the first game in their new Stadium, the Fightin' Hoosiers entertained the top-ranked Oregon State Beavers. Oregon outlasted the determined Hoosiers, who saw their tying touchdown nullified.

The Hoosiers scored early and often as they mauled the outclassed Marquette Warriors, 34-8. Tailback Willie Hunter set up the first touchdown, and Joe Maroon turned and twisted up and down the field for two touchdowns and a brilliant rushing average.

In I. U.'s Homecoming, stadium-dedication game against Michigan State, the Hoosiers fell victims to the speedy Spartans, 35-0. In the same game, they lost their captain, Richie Bradford, for the season because of a broken arm.

Hoosier fans saw a distinctive change in I. U. football the following week. Instead of the usual single wing, the Hoosiers operated out of a wing-T formation against Northwestern. The half ended in a 3-3 tie, but the Wildcats won, 24-3.

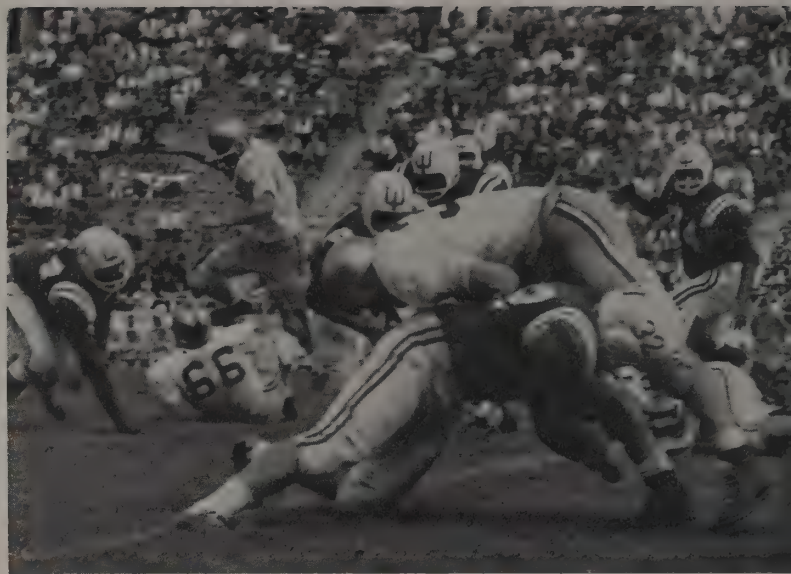

The Hoosiers traveled to Ohio State where the Buckeyes defeated them, 36-7.

Coach Dickens started a sophomore-predominated lineup against Michigan at Ann Arbor. Again at the halftime break, I. U. trailed by just a single point, 8-7. Michigan regrouped its forces, however, and downed the Hoosiers, 29-7.

In the season's finale, I. U. lost 35-6 to arch-rival Purdue.

Cross-Country Team First in Big State Meet

Paced by five underclassmen, the Indiana University cross-country team finished the 1960 season with a fine record of four wins and one defeat in dual meets. The Hoosiers placed first in the Big State Meet and third in the Big Ten Meet.

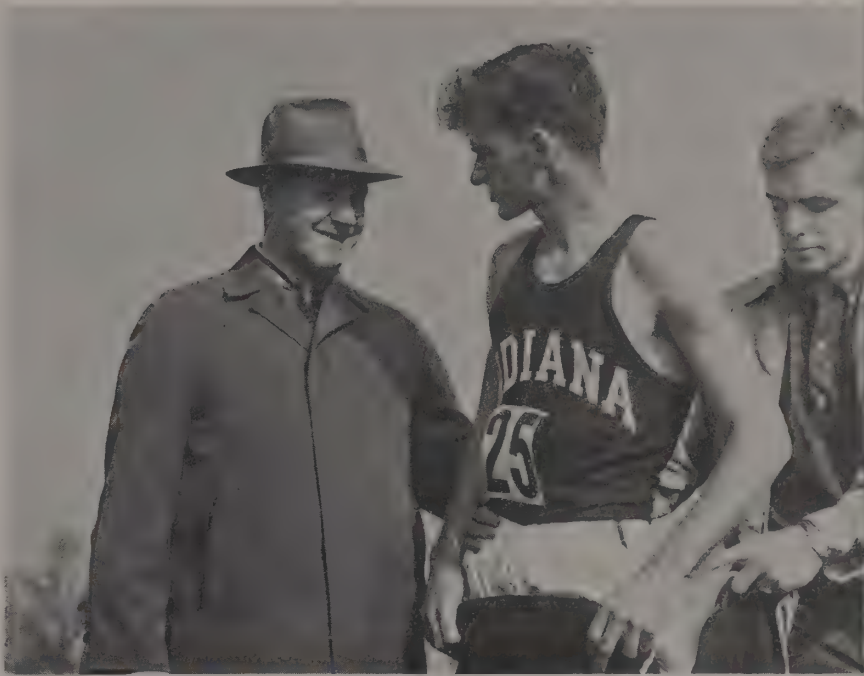

Bob Fell, who took first in the first three dual meets, and Charles Harris, who finished second in the meets, led the Hoosier harriers past Miami University (Ohio), the University of Notre Dame, Wabash College, and the University of Illinois. The only loss was to Western Michigan University by six points. At the time, Notre Dame's cross-country team was considered to be one of the best in the nation.

Three of the Hoosiers broke the I. U. course record in the meet with Wabash College. Fell, with an excellent time of 20:04.9, Harris, 20:29, and Russ Lash, timed in 20:32, all broke the record set last year by a Notre Dame runner.

In the Big State Meet the Hoosiers outclassed Notre Dame and some of the smaller schools in the state to cop the contest. So complete was I. U.'s team victory that it placed five runners among the top nine finishers. This was the second straight Big State Meet victory for the Hoosiers.

Coached by Gordon Fisher, the I. U. harriers placed five men in the top 20 finishers for third place in the Big Ten title meet.

Basketball Team Sets I. U. Rebounding Record

Charley Hall eludes three Indiana State players.

Ernie Wilhoit leaps past an Ohio State defender for a layup.

By grabbing a total of 1,363 rebounds during the season to top the old school mark of 1,245, the 1960-1961 edition of the Hurryin' Hoosiers established themselves as the top rebounding unit in the history of Indiana University basketball.

With a 98-80 victory over Kansas State early in the season, the highly ranked Hoosiers started the season with high expectations. Although victories for the Hoosiers were not as frequent as hoped for, the Hoosiers defeated highly ranked De Paul, 81-78, and upset Iowa's Hawkeyes, 78-69, after bowing to the latter earlier in the season by a 7-point margin. The Macmen compiled a 15-9 record in regular season play and an 8-6 record in Big Ten competition while playing one of the roughest schedules in the nation.

Walt Bellamy, one of I. U.'s Olympic stars, headed the second teams of both the Associated Press and United Press International all-American aggregations. He won the Big Ten rebounding title with a 247-230 bulge over Ohio State's Jerry Lucas. Averaging 20 points a game for the second season in a row, Bellamy finished his I. U. basketball career with 1,342 points to rank third in all time I. U. scoring.

The Hoosiers were fortunate enough this year to play in the newly built Fieldhouse. The completely modern structure, with a seating capacity of over 10,000, has among its facilities excellent ventilation, fine shower rooms, a new hardwood floor, a multitude of scoreboards, improved lighting, and a new sound system. These and other facilities combined to make the new structure one of the finest places in the country for both the players and fans alike.

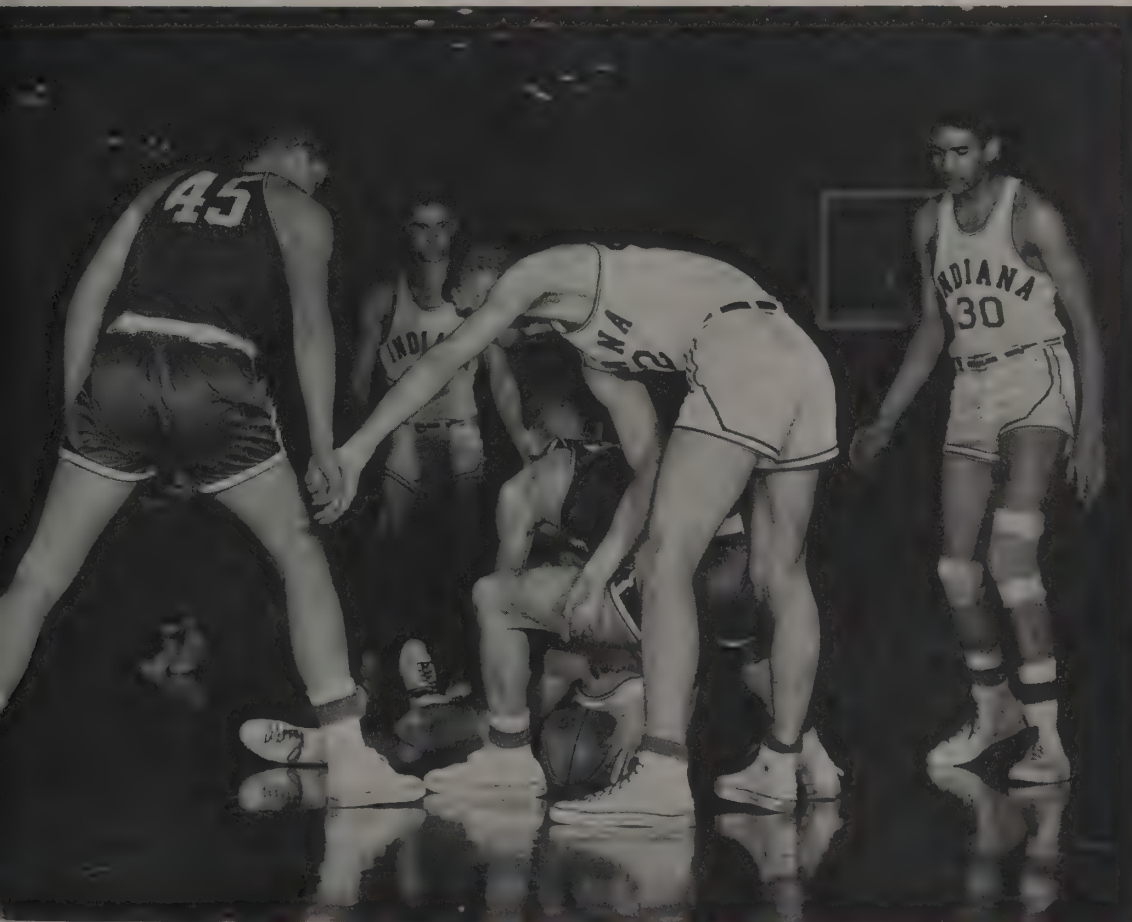

Another of I. U.'s outstanding seniors was Gary Long, one of the Hoosiers' steadiest players. Long's scoring average was just under 12 points a game for his final season, and his outstanding floor work made him a favorite with the fans.

Sophomore Tom Bolyard gave strong indications of being an up-and-coming star of the Big Ten by scoring 371 points in competition this year.

I. U. marksmen take aim at the elusive bull's-eye.

By scoring an overwhelming 291 against Purdue University, Dick Mantel, senior and captain of the Indiana University rifle team, achieved one of the five best individual efforts of the 1960-1961 Big Ten rifle season. Mantel's efforts throughout the entire season earned him the ranking of one of the Conference's leading marksmen.

Under a new coach this year, Sfc. Lawrence Knott, the Hoosier riflemen outshot Wisconsin by a 74-point margin. They bowed, however, three times to a hard-to-beat Michigan State team, once to Ohio State, and once to Purdue. Indiana placed sixth out of six competing teams in the Big Ten match.

Captain William J. Smith instituted a new training program consisting of at least six hours of mandatory practice each week. Previously the number of practice hours had been optional.

Big Ten Champion Swimmers Smash Opponents

Led by Olympic stars Frank McKinney and Mike Troy and under the masterful guidance of Coach James "Doc" Councilman, the 1961 I. U. swimming team smashed all opponents and then climaxed its great season by winning the Big Ten Championship.

The Indiana swimmers rolled up a total of 8 straight wins this year to run their unbeaten string to 14 straight in dual meets.

The most important meet of the year was against Michigan. At the time of the meet, the two teams were rated one-two in the nation with little agreement on the order. The Hoosiers came roaring out of the meet with an overwhelming 62-39 win. The Indiana team had many individual stars in this contest: Pete Sintz won both the 100- and 200-yard freestyle races; Jim Fitzgibbon captured the 50-yard freestyle; Mike Troy took the honors in the 220-yard butterfly event; Chet Jastremski won the 200-yard individual medley; Captain Frank McKinney defeated all opponents in the 200-yard backstroke event. This was Michigan's second defeat in five years, the other one coming last year against Indiana.

Even though I. U. had won their dual meet with Michigan, the Wolverines were favored to win the Big Ten Championship because of their greater depth. The Big Ten swimming meet is decided on a basis of points for twelve places. The Hoosiers, led by Captain Frank McKinney, Alan Somers, Mike Troy, and John Roethke, piled up 205 1/2 points to Michigan's 201 5/6 points. McKinney won the 100- and 200-yard backstroke events; Somers took the 1500-meter and 440-yard freestyle events; Troy was victorious in the 200-yard butterfly, and Roethke captured first in the 200-yard individual medley.

First place finishes weren't enough to take the meet. Tribute must also be paid to Dick Beaver, Pete Sintz, Chet Jastremski, Dave Smith, Tom Verth, Terry Laberdie, Bill Marks, Bill Cass, Jim Fitzgibbon, and divers Keith Craddock and John Lovstedt—all scored valuable points for the Hoosiers. As Coach Councilman said, "It was a team victory."

Wrestlers End Year With Six Straight Victories

Bouncing back from a string of five losses, the Hoosier wrestlers reeled off six straight victories to finish the year with a winning season.

The Hoosiers turned in their best performance at a four-way meet at Minneapolis, Minnesota, when they totally outdistanced the three other schools. Indiana scored 79 points; Minnesota, 55; Purdue, 51, and Wisconsin, 38. Coach Charley McDaniel's hard-to-convince crew placed all nine men in the finals, and five of them—Ron Hutcherson, 130 pounds; Dick Zboray, 137; Don Schultz, 147; Lloyd Anderson, 191, and Bill Putorti, heavyweight—won individual meet championships.

Coming from behind, the Hoosiers went on to win their finale by defeating Ohio State, 20-16. After trailing, 16-9, Hoosiers John Maroni, Lloyd Anderson, and Bill Putorti scored the points necessary to win the meet.

Like the team, Dick Zboray closed the season by winning his last six matches, and Ron Hutcherson, Bill Putorti, and Don Schultz each put together strings of five consecutive victories. John Maroni (6-4) and Lloyd Anderson (5-3-1) were the other two Hoosiers to compile winning records. The remaining starters included Ralph Carlino, 123 pounds; Randy Galvin, 157 pounds, and John Grill, 167 pounds.

In the Big Ten championship the Hoosiers slumped to a seventh place finish. Dick Zboray was the only I. U. entry to reach the final round.

Injuries Plague 1960-1961 Gymnastics Team

Injuries and ineligibility plagued the 1960-1961 gymnastics team which had been predicted to be the Hoosier's best in 12 years. The team finished its season with five victories in nine duel meets and a sixth place finish in the Big Ten championships. Two of the team's losses, however, were to Michigan and Illinois—both national powers.

Dave Nawrocki, who finished fourth in the NCAA tumbling championships last year, was injured before the season started and was out for the entire year. Sophomore Paul Keller broke his arm during warm-up routines for the Wisconsin meet, I. U.'s Big Ten opener.

Paced by Jim Woodward, the Hoosiers started the season impressively with a 77-33 victory over the University of Chicago. Woodward, who is only a sophomore, earned 22 of the 77 Hoosier points in the meet and continued to be one of Indiana's top scorers.

Although three men were unable to compete because of injuries, the Hoosiers defeated both Ohio State and Western Illinois in a triangular meet. Against Western Illinois, I. U.'s gymnasts took first place in all seven events. The tumblers finished first in five of seven versus the Buckeyes.

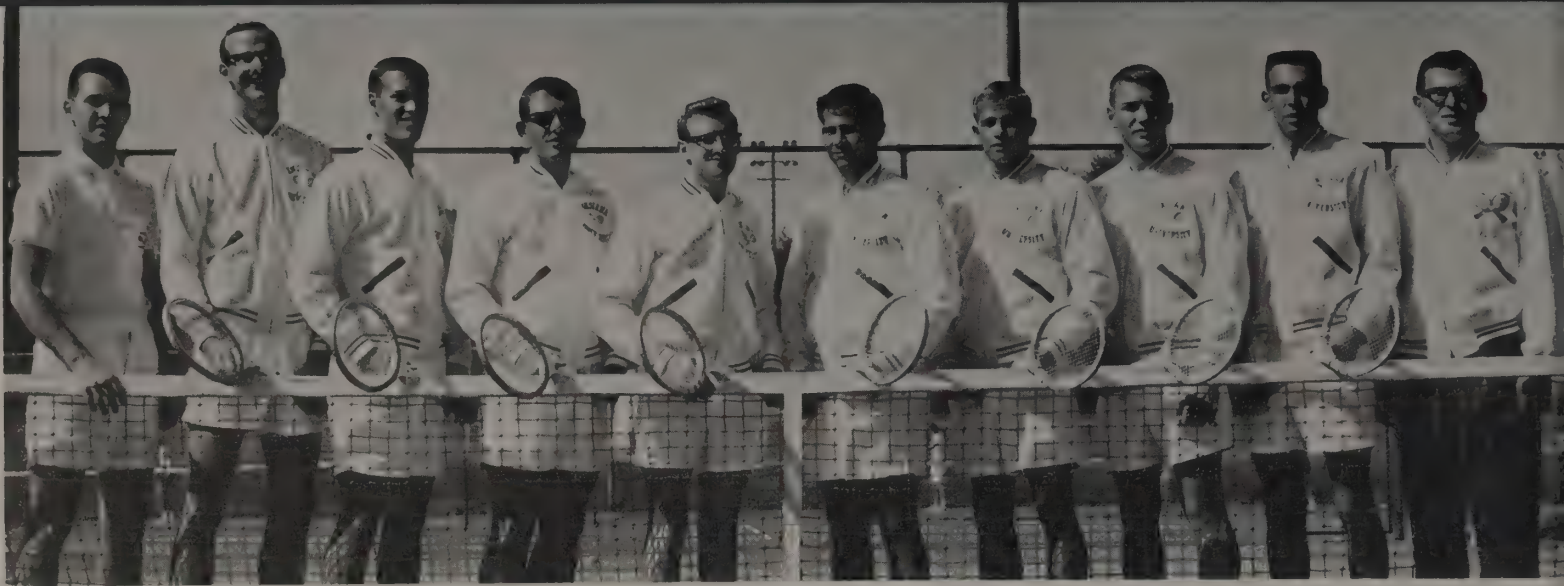

Top tumblers on the team were Captain Tom Lancaster, Bob Baechle, and Woodward. Other leading scorers were Paul Keller, Virgil Ecton, and John Burkel, all of whom return next year.

Tennis Rebuilding Program Proves Successful

Coach Bill Landin's "rebuilding program," including strenuous winter and spring practices, paid off for the young 1960 Hoosier tennis team in a winning 12-9 season.

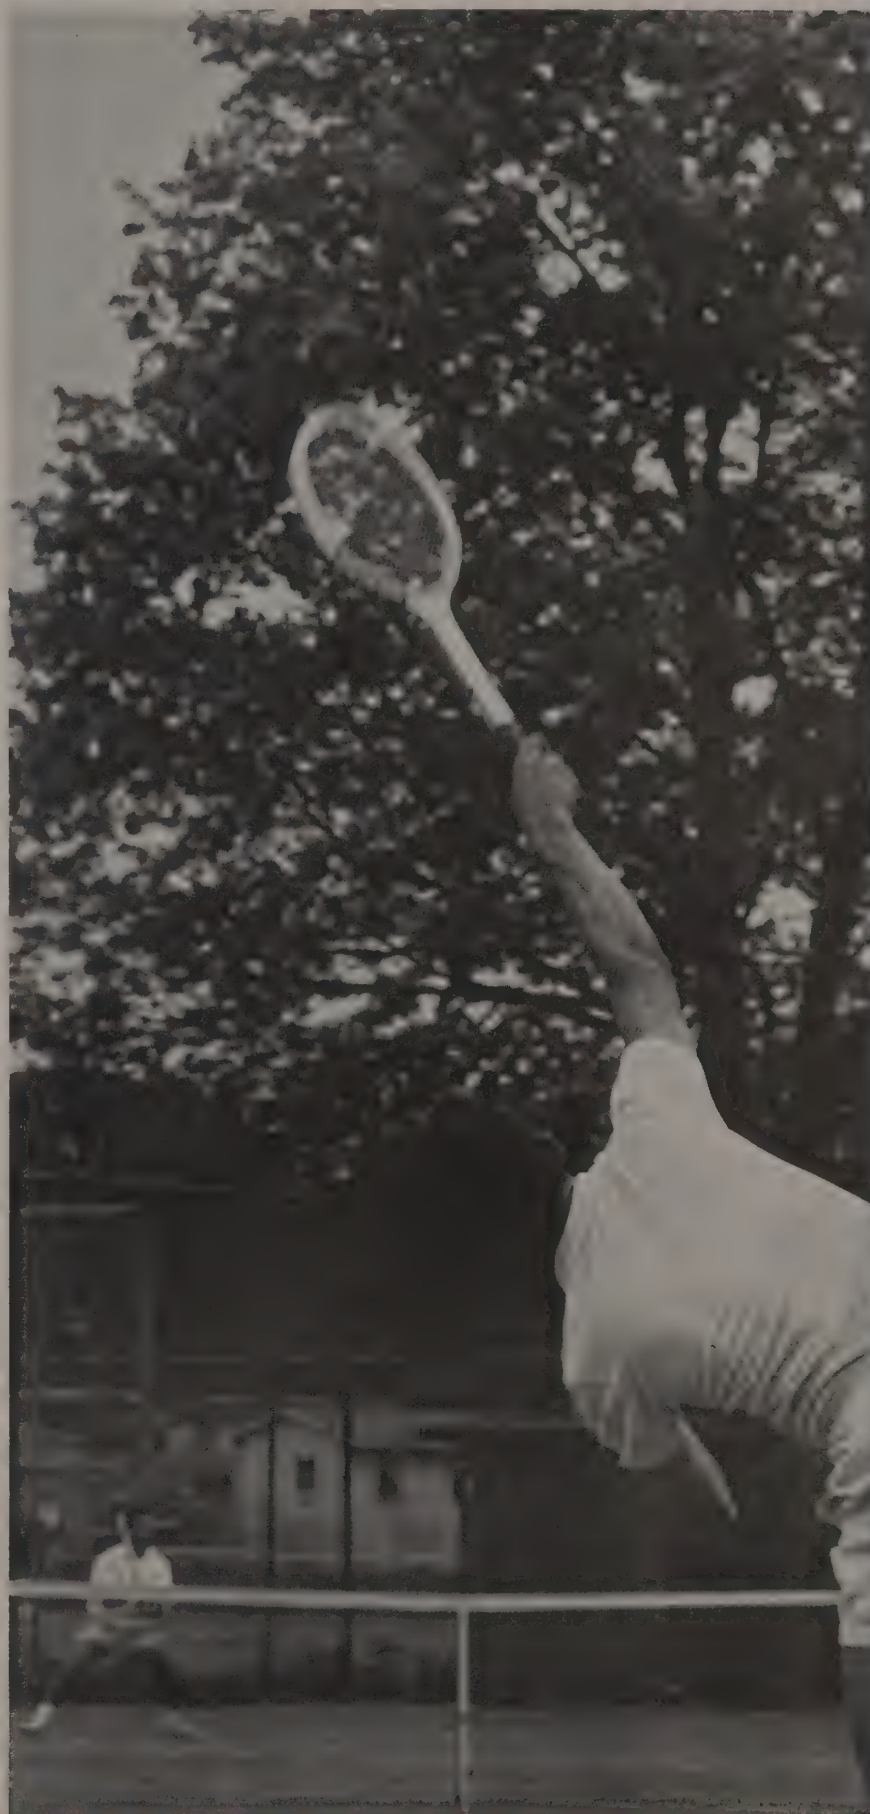

Sophomores Don Thorne, Stu Cohen, Bob Ewald, and Dick Martin did a commendable job of replacing high ranking lettermen who were lost through graduation. Thorne and Cohen held down the vital number one and two singles spots respectively.

Providing experience and a steadying influence for the squad were returning lettermen Jack Fitzpatrick, Captain Harry Garnette, Ilan Rothmuller, and Denny Lortz. Fitzpatrick, number four singles, and Lortz, number six singles, posted the top individual won-lost records on the team.

The Hoosiers started quickly by winning 9 of their first 13 matches; however, competition toughened during the last part of the season, and the squad dropped 5 of its last 8 matches. The team won 4 of 8 duel matches against Big Ten opponents including a satisfying 9-0 whitewashing of Purdue.

In the postseason Big Ten tournament, the Hoosiers were off their best form and finished last, losing to teams that they had previously beaten. The squad's only points were scored by Bob Ewald and the Rothmuller-Lortz doubles team.

Indoor Cindermen Finish Second in Big Ten

After an undistinguished outdoor season, Indiana University's track team finished with consistently strong showings during the past indoor season by taking second place in Big Ten competition.

The outdoor Hoosiers brought a record of a loss to Ohio State and a second place finish in the Big State Meet to the Big Ten championships in which they finished seventh. Men scoring points for Coach Gordon Fisher's charges at East Lansing were high jumpers Reggie Sheppard and Leroy Johnson, sprinters Eddie Miles and Al Phillips, and pole vaulter Joe Carroll.

Top performers in I. U. wins in four out of five indoor duel and triangular meet opponents were Miles, Sheppard, shot-putter Tom Seifert and 440 man Reggie Laconi. Miles twice tied the Fieldhouse record of :06.1 in the 60-yard dash while Seifert easily smashed the existing Fieldhouse standard with a heave of 56 feet 7 inches.

Really hitting their stride, the Hoosiers finished in second place with three individual champions in the Big Ten Meet. Eddie Miles copped the "60" in :06.2; Reggie Sheppard took the high jump for the second straight year with a leap of 6 feet 6½ inches, and the mile relay team of Gene Graham, Ray Spivey, Reggie Laconi, and Larry Clinton won with a 3:20 clocking.

Biggest standout for I. U. in two postseason meets was high jumper Reggie Sheppard, senior and co-captain of the Hoosiers. Sheppard won his specialty at both the Chicago Relays and the Milwaukee Relays, twice breaking his all-time I. U. record of 6 feet 8¼ inches with jumps of 6 feet 9¼ inches at Chicago and 6 feet 9⅝ inches at Milwaukee.

Indiana's Big Ten champion mile relay team won its heat at both places. Eddie Miles managed a second place finish in the 50-yard dash although he was hampered by an injured leg.

Golfers Finish Season With 8-3-1 Record

Led by the steady play of veterans Ron Royer and Jon Sommer, the Indiana University golf team recorded another successful season in 1960. Under the direction of Coach Robert Fitch, the Hoosiers won 8 matches, lost 3, and tied 1.

Royer, a former Indiana State Amateur champion, was the top shooter on the squad with a 75 average for all meets, and Sommer was second best with a 78 average. Royer's fine average earned him a berth on the NCAA's third string all-American team.

The I. U. linksmen did well in important matches. They placed first in a triangular meet with Kentucky and Purdue. Indiana finished third in the Big State Meet with 779 strokes. Fifth place in the Big Ten Conference went to Indiana with Purdue in first place. Ron Royer was sixth in individual competition, and Jon Sommer placed seventh.

I. U. Nine Defeats National Champion Gophers

Despite a late-season slump which saw the Hoosiers drop five of their last six games, the Indiana University baseball team posted a winning 18-14 record in the 1960 campaign. Included among the victims were the national champion Golden Gophers of Minnesota.

Indiana rolled up a 13-5 mark against nonleague competition but could do no better than 5-9 in Big Ten play. Coach Ernie Andres explained that the team played well all season until the last six Big Ten ball games, which were poorly scheduled during final week last May.

Outfielder Don Foreman experienced another outstanding season for I. U. with a .396 batting average. Hard-hitting, hard-throwing pitcher Paul Deem, playing the outfield when he was not on the mound, wound up the season with a .315 mark.

Paul Michaels, Ernie Wilhoit and Deem turned in crack pitching performances through the season. Southpaw Wilhoit was the only pitcher to defeat league winning Minnesota. He turned back the Gophers, 2-1, on Cream and Crimson Day. Deem and Wilhoit stopped the famed Gopher wrecking crew so well that the Minnesotans managed only three extra-base hits in the twin bill.

Flexibility Is Keynote of Intramural Program

A cager twists away from his "man" for an easy bucket.

Flexibility was the keynote of intramural director Robert Stumpner's 1960-1961 intramural program for the students of Indiana University.

Better facilities for touch football and a new annex to the Men's Gymnasium provided a setup superior to anything in I. U.'s athletic history. Six new basketball courts and 12 handball courts add to the flexibility of the intramural program. The basketball courts can also be used for indoor tennis, badminton, volleyball, ping-pong, and other sports.

Indiana University fields teams in soccer and fencing on a club basis. The teams are helped financially somewhat by the University, but they are considered neither varsity nor intramural squads. In intercollegiate soccer competition, I. U.'s team compiled only a 1-9 record. However, every team played was a varsity squad at the opponents' schools. The fencing team compiled a 3-8 record, beating Culver Military Academy twice and Indiana Technical College once.

As the Fightin' Hoosiers took to the football field, so did 88 teams to compete in touch football. A pre-holiday basketball tournament was sponsored in addition to the regular basketball intramural season. Spring competition included a swimming meet and softball leagues, with approximately 97 teams entering the softball tournaments.

Kappa Kappa Gamma Wins WRA Swim Meet

The WRA program includes a modern dance workshop.

Mermaids of Kappa Kappa Gamma won the annual Women's Recreation Association swimming tournament in March with Kappa Alpha Theta's swimmers placing second. Other recreational activities sponsored by the WRA included a tennis tournament which was divided into beginning and advanced stages, and badminton and table tennis tournaments. Smithwood II emerged victor of the bowling tournament in November.

As part of the intercollegiate WRA program, I. U. members participated in Sports and Play Days in volleyball with DePauw University and Indiana State Teachers College.

Open to all women students at Indiana University, WRA is a national association which promotes interest in recreational and physical activities. Membership costs are paid by the individual housing units. The housing unit which wins each intramural tournament is presented a roving trophy. An additional trophy is awarded to the unit earning the most points in WRA activities throughout the year.

This year, for the first time, every woman student on campus was eligible to vote in the annual election. Previously, a student had to participate in each intramural sport, attend each Sports and Play Day, or work on a WRA committee to be eligible to vote. Elections are conducted at the AWS Mass Meeting.

I-Men's Club Provides Blazers for I. U. Teams

Providing blazers for all I. U. athletic teams is a major project of the I-Men's Club, an organization of all sophomores, juniors, and seniors who have earned varsity letters. The teams will wear the blazers on trips to other colleges and universities.

In October the club, working with the Union, sponsored a reception in the Union Trophy Room for I-Men who participated in the 1960 Olympics. The honored guests were Mike Troy, Frank McKinney, Alan Somers, swimming, and Walt Bellamy, basketball.

Each year the club sponsors Cream and Crimson Day which includes contests in all major sports, a banquet, and a dance. In the athletic events, underclassmen challenge the varsity team members and former I. U. athletes. I-Men blankets and other awards are presented at the banquet.

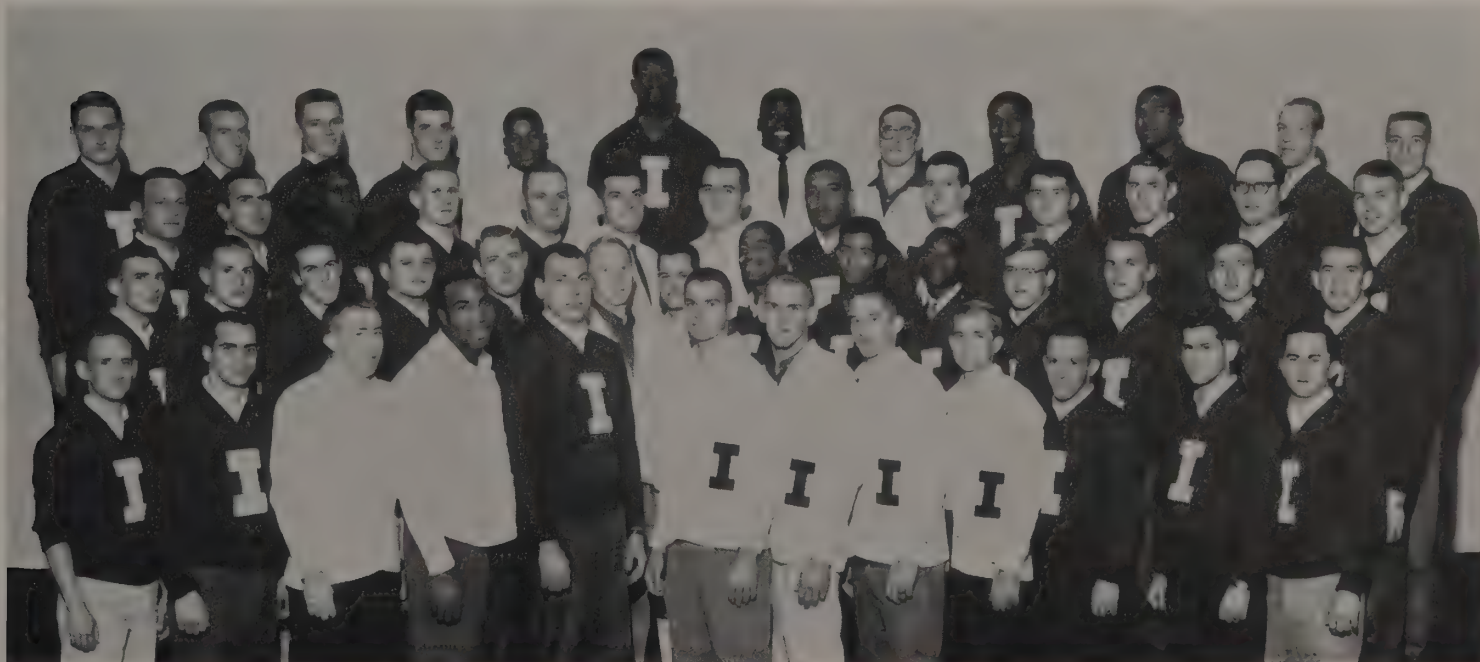

Officers of the club, one representative from each varsity team, and the adviser, Robert C. Dro, assistant director of athletics, plan mass meetings and various projects of the group.

A part of Hoosier tradition is the annual I-Men's Dance.

Panhellenic Accepts Fraternity Rush Mixer Plan

The proposal for a new rush mixer plan received serious contemplation by Panhellenic Council.

A rush mixer plan was accepted this year by the Panhellenic Presidents' Council to replace the controversial fraternity rushee date system. The Presidents' Council is the legislative body of I. U.'s Panhellenic Association. Under the new plan, a maximum of five pledges from a sorority will attend a mixer for fraternity rushees.

Beginning with the pledge classes of January 1961, Panhel raised the total possible number of girls to be pledged by each sorority from 60 to 65, plus town girls.

Although it is primarily a governmental organization, I. U.'s Panhellenic Association supports two foreign orphans abroad through the Foster Parents' Plan, Incorporated as a philanthropical project.

The unifying body among the 21 sororities, Panhel directs rush programs, co-ordinates activities, and establishes policies observed by each sorority concerning disciplinary actions and scholarship cases.

Panhel provides rush counselors who live in the dorms with the rushees during formal rush week.

Junior Panhellenic Council "Adopts" War Orphan

During the past year, Junior Panhellenic Council adopted, through financial support, a war orphan under the Foster Parents' Plan, Incorporated. One of the year's major projects was giving Christmas presents to the children in an Indiana mental institution. Other accomplishments included the revision of the Council's constitution.

The 1960 spring pledge class of Alpha Xi Delta won the trophy awarded annually by Junior Panhel for outstanding sorority pledge class scholarship.

Junior Panhellenic Council is composed of the presidents of the 21 social sorority pledge classes. The main goal of this group is to unite more closely all sorority pledges and to help them to understand the Greek way of life.

Each year the Council awards two scholarships to applicants from the preceding year's pledge classes. The recipients are chosen on the basis of scholastic average, participation in activities, and financial need.

The annual Junior Panhel Scavenger Hunt is sponsored in the fall by Alpha Gamma Delta.

Greek System a Part of I. U. for 116 Years

Name tags and costumes are standard equipment for rush.

The Greek-letter fraternity system has been an integral part of Indiana University for 116 years. On August 27, 1845, Beta Theta Pi established the first fraternity on campus. In September 1960, 30 national fraternities had chapters at I. U. In March, two local fraternities, Sigma Sigma and Chi Alpha, received official recognition from the Interfraternity Council.

In 1870, three years after I. U. was made a coeducational institution, Beta Chapter of Kappa Alpha Theta was installed to become the first women's fraternity on campus. The most recent addition to women's organized units is Alpha Epsilon Phi, which was colonized at Indiana University in 1958.

I. U. Alpha Chi Omegas Honored at Convention

From their Diamond Jubilee Convention at French Lick last summer, Alpha Mu Chapter of Alpha Chi Omega brought home several honors, including the Lyre award for fraternity publications, first place awards for rush and activities displays, and several scholarship awards.

Alpha Chis and Acacias were hosts to some 500 international students at the annual Foreign Student Tea October 16 at the Acacia house. Working together, the women and the Alpha Tau Omegas produced "P. S.," a Fall Carnival booth with a skit satirizing campus life.

Alpha Chis presented "Clownin' Around" to win second in production in the 1961 Sing.

Informal song practices helped the Alpha Chis win second place in production in the I. U. Sing.

The pledge class of Alpha Epsilon Phi, doing their part to protect campus housing units from Halloween ghosts and goblins, sponsored a pumpkin sale this fall. The project proved to be such a success that they hope to repeat it again next fall.

For the Alpha Epsilon Phis, the excitement of recently moving into their house on Tenth Street has been increased by the thrill of planning for their completely new home which is now under construction.

Li'l Abner and his Dogpatch crew brought shouts and celebration to the Alpha Gamma Deltas after the 1961 I. U. Sing. The Alpha Gams' presentation won first place in production and overall performance. In the 1960 Sing, the women teamed with Kappa Delta Rho to present music from "Good News," which also won first place for a production number.

A German ski lodge was the theme of the Alpha Gams' fall house dance. The women also plunged to the depths of Neptune's realm for a deep sea dance.

Alpha Kappa Alphas Work at Community Center

Because the Alpha Kappa Alphas do not have a house, they meet in a Smithwood lounge for a song practice.

Making posters, answering the phone, supervising games, and reading to the children at the West Side Community Center were projects of the Alpha Kappa Alphas in their volunteer work this year.

When the women combined a rush party and style show, the actives modeled clothes from one of the Bloomington stores. At the sorority's Beatnik Dance, the women wore black leotards and sweaters. The actives topped their costumes with pink tunics, and the pledges wore green ones, representing the Alpha Kappa Alpha colors.

At Christmas, the women of the sorority caroled through the halls and the wards of the Bloomington Hospital. They observed their Founders' Day in Indianapolis with their graduate chapter and sang a medley of songs as part of the entertainment for the convention.

In the spring, the women crowned their male sweetheart at the annual formal. They also completed their annual project of helping people in Fayette County in Tennessee through the NAACP.

Alpha Omicron Pi Play Basketball All Stars

A 1-point margin gave the Alpha Omicron Pi Pirates a 1,000 record in their annual basketball game against the I. U. All Stars. Begun in March 1960, the athletic contest raises funds for the Olympics Fund. The All Stars' team is comprised of senior men.

"Riley Medley" at the 1961 I. U. Sing earned the AOPi a second place trophy in the women's choral division. Dressed as children, the group listened to Little Orphan Annie tall tales and sang excerpts from James Whitcomb Riley's poems set to original music.

In August AOPi was host to the first state district meeting of the sorority's chapters in Indiana.

Alpha Phis look over the drawing of the 36-girl addition to their house which is to be completed next fall.

Tramping from house to house in downtown Bloomington last spring, the Alpha Phis collected donations to the Heart Fund as their major charitable activity of the year. They also assisted the Kappa Sigmas with their annual Halloween party for married students' children.

"Shangri-La," the formal pledge dance, honored the new pledges in March. The chapter presented "Siesta," a Spanish act, at the 1960 I. U. Sing. "Mother Goose's Tales" was the theme of the Alpha Phis' and Lambda Chi Alphas' Fall Carnival booth.

The Alpha Phi house changed in appearance when builders started an addition which will be completed next fall. The wing will house 36 girls.

Alpha Xi Delta Pledges Honored by Alumnae

A pink dogwood tree was presented to the 1960 spring pledge class of Alpha Xi Delta by their Bloomington alumnae chapter. Planted in the front lawn of the Alpha Xi house, the tree is to recognize the group for having the highest pledge class scholastic average on campus last spring. The women also received the Junior Panhellenic Council's traveling scholarship trophy.

Faculty members, some of whom gave short talks after dinner, were entertained by the Alpha Xis once a month.

At the Christmas dance, an Alpha Xi Santa Claus presented boress gifts to the women's dates and accompanied the presentation with original poems.

Chi Omegas Are Hostesses for Miss America

Chi Omega sisters used their imaginations and fun-loving spirit to create an eye-catching advertisement.

Mary Ann Mobley, the former Miss America, spent her I. U. weekend as Little 500 Sweetheart at the Chi Omega house. Miss Mobley is a member of the social sorority's University of Mississippi chapter.

The Chi O's joined the Sigma Nus again this Christmas to entertain foreign students at a holiday party. The event is part of a national Chi Omega program for "Christmas Kindness."

The sorority also worked with the Sigma Nus for Fall Carnival. They won first place for originality with their booth, "Wynalei." Other awards include a second place for Miniature 500 costumes.

Delta Delta Deltas Stress Scholarship Program

Study hours were extended this year by the women of Delta Delta Delta as they placed greater emphasis on the house's scholarship program. The sorority was ranked second scholastically last spring and third last fall among organized women's housing units. To recognize campus women who rank high in scholarship, they presented their annual Pansy Breakfast.

"Sounds Beyond D'Mention," the Tri Delts' number in the 1960 I. U. Sing, won second place in the production division. With Sigma Alpha Epsilon, the women presented "Vaudeville" in the 1961 Sing to win first place in the mixed choral division.

Delta Gammas Win Honors in Sing and Minny

Accompanied by their housemother, a trio of DGs run through one of the latest hits.

"Waltzing Matilda," as presented by the Delta Gammas, won first place in the women's choral division of the 1960 I. U. Sing. Among other campus honors received by the DG's was second place in the Miniature 500. They also sponsored the Little 500, winning Phi Kappa Psi team.

At their National Convention last summer in Colorado, the I. U. Chapter won the award for the runnerup chapter in the nation.

The sorority had a formal open house last fall to show their remodeled house to the campus. As a philanthropic endeavor, the women of Delta Gamma read to a blind student in Bloomington High School.

Delta Sigma Thetas Present Peppermint Ball

Alumnae were invited to attend Delta Sigma Theta's annual spring formal, the Peppermint Ball, on April 29. To carry out the theme, the women wore red and white and decorated the dance hall in the same colors. In addition to the formal dance, the sorority presented several record hops.

Delta Sigma Theta pledges sang at several of the services at the Second Baptist Church during the year. The women plan to maintain the project next year by singing at least once a month.

A major project of the I. U. Chapter each spring is preparing for their part in the "Jaber Wok," an annual talent show sponsored by the sorority's Indianapolis chapter. This year the I. U. Delta Sigma Thetas sang and presented a skit.

The local chapter president attended the Delta Sigma Theta Midwest Regional Conference in Toledo, Ohio, on May 6. Attended by members from several chapters, the conference is designed to offer members an opportunity to share ideas for projects and to report progress of the various chapters.

Delta Zetas Dedicate Sterling Tea Service

Children from the Exchange Home helped decorate a tree before the Christmas party at the DZ house.

Grace Mason Lundy, past national Delta Zeta president, dedicated a sterling silver tea service at the sorority's Founders' Day program. The service was given in honor of an Epsilon alumna who was active in forming a panhellenic group in the Detroit area.

Epsilon Chapter's representatives returned from the 27th biennial national convention in Pasadena, California, with awards for course of study, standards program, and participation in campus activities. In November, the chapter was host to Mrs. Beth Parsons, international vice-president of the Council of Women.

DZ service projects included a Christmas party for residents of Craigmont Hospital in Madison and a tree-trimming party for Exchange Home children.

Gamma Phi Betas Date Dads on Dads' Day

Fathers moved in as daughters moved out of the second floor of the Gamma Phi Beta House during Dads' Weekend in October. They were entertained with a noon luncheon before a football game. A date with Dad was the order of the evening when several girls took their fathers to see the Jonathan Winters show at the Auditorium.

The Christmas season brought gay, holiday decorations to the Gamma Phi house. Fall pledges were presented under the mistletoe at a Christmas dance in their honor. Girls' dates received Christmas stockings full of candy and toys.

The Gamma Phis and the Acacias presented a wild west show for Fall Carnival.

"For meals and service 'par excellent'," declared the Gamma Phis as they honored their cooks at Christmas.

Pledges Raise "Kites" For Kappa Alpha Theta

Muu-muus appeared quickly when the Thetas began to think about spring vacation and Ft. Lauderdale.

This fall the Kappa Alpha Theta "kites" flew high. The day before their initiation the Kappa Alpha Theta pledges celebrated by flying decorated kites, the symbol of their sorority, in the field across the street from their chapter house.

In the fall, the pledges also won first place in the annual Junior Panhellenic Scavenger Hunt.

Kappa Deltas Are Honored for Improved Grades

The Panhellenic traveling scholarship trophy, which is awarded to the sorority with the most improved grades for the previous semester, was presented to the Kappa Deltas in November.

At Christmas the KD's had a tree-trimming party in addition to their annual Christmas dance. Twice each month the KD's invited a song leader from one of the fraternities to dinner. These singing guests taught the women their fraternity songs so that, by the end of the year, the KD's knew the majority of the fraternities' favorite songs.

Addition Built by Kappa Kappa Gamma

The Kappa Kappa Gammas really hit the high notes as they finish another song practice.

A $150,000 addition to the residence and a new housemother, Mrs. Estelle Cheseldine, greeted the Kappa Kappa Gammas when they returned to school last fall. The new wing is three stories high and contains a living room, studyrooms, and a dormitory.

Walking through Ballantine or the Commons the day before Fall Carnival, one could hear the Kappas and the Sigma Alpha Mus advertising their booth, "Peg A Panda," which won second prize for best design.

Joining the Pi Beta Phis, the Kappas gave their annual Monmouth Duo Dance in honor of the sororities' foundings at Monmouth College in Illinois.

Phi Mus Create "Dizzyland" for Fall Carnival

"Dizzyland" came to I. U.—complete with castles and Walt Dizzy—as Phi Mu's contribution to the 1960 Fall Carnival. Other activities of the sorority included a tea early in the year in honor of all sorority pledges. Phi Mu's Homecoming decorations won honorable mention. After the game, parents and alumnae were invited to an open house.

On March 4 the Phi Mu's celebrated their founding as the second oldest women's sorority in the United States. Collegiate and alumnae members throughout the country donated a penny for each year since the sorority's founding in 1852. The money that was collected was used for loans and scholarships.

Pi Beta Phis Create Best Fall Carnival Booth

A group of Pi Beta Phis discuss how they planned and built their prize-winning Fall Carnival booth.

Winning the trophy for the best over-all booth at Fall Carnival began the year for the Pi Beta Phis. Their sophisticated "Pi Phi Penthouse," complete with floorshow and decorative interior, was a new and different contribution to the Carnival atmosphere.

Among the dances given by the Pi Phis were the annual Monmouth Duo, the "Little Abner" fall pledge dance, and the "Southern" spring pledge dance.

The Pi Beta Phis backed the winning Sigma Alpha Epsilon bachelor candidate at Fall Carnival, cheered the Beta Theta Pis on for the Little 500, and joined the Delta Tau Deltas in a production of "Unsinkable Molly Brown" for the I. U. Sing.

Sigma Delta Taus Receive Scholarship Trophy

The Panhellenic Scholarship Trophy was recaptured by the Sigma Delta Taus last spring after they earned a house average of 2.1. In addition to this achievement, they won the Hillel Stunt Show Trophy for the third consecutive year with a production called "Promotion Commotion." Their pledge class had a highly successful cupcake sale project last fall.

"Oriental Accent" was the theme of the winter formal this year. The house was transformed into a Chinese pagoda complete with dragons, bamboo curtains, and geisha girl.

Breaking ground early this spring, the SDT's are looking forward to moving into their new house on North Jordan next year.

Sigma Kappas Give Party for Borrowed Time Club

"And so it happens in the Land of Nod," say the Sigma Kappas at a party during formal rush week.

Sixty-nine members of the Borrowed Time Club, a group of Bloomington's senior citizens, helped the Sigma Kappas celebrate the holiday spirit at a Christmas party in the sorority house. During the Christmas season, the chapter also adopted a local needy family and gave them clothing and food.

The Tau Chapter contributed money for new clothing and other necessities to be distributed to people living along the reefs of the Maine seacoast.

Zeta Tau Alpha Pledges Give Mock TV Program

"It Could Be You" was the theme of a skit presented by Zeta Tau Alpha pledges before their initiation. In this skit they depicted the seniors just as they looked as children. The pledges had to write the parents of the seniors and ask them to send baby pictures and some amusing incident that had happened to the girls while they were young.

Members of Zeta Tau Alpha sold Christmas trees to earn money for their national philanthropy, aid to the victims of cerebral palsy. They also gave a Christmas party for the children from the Christian Center. The ZTA's had an open house during Homecoming weekend for their alumnae who returned for the football game.

Junior Interfraternity Council Has Tug of War

"Well, for our pledge class boress, we decided to walk out with all the actives' toothpaste."

The traditional tug of war across the Jordan River between fraternity sophomore actives and pledges sponsored by the Junior Interfraternity Council decided the fate of the pledges' green pods. A pledge victory kindles the ceremonial fire for the burning of the pods, while a sophomore triumph compels the pledges to wear the pods for an additional period of time.

Although the Junior Interfraternity Council has no power to pass any campus-wide legislation, the Council may submit suggestions to the Interfraternity Council for consideration. Among Junior IFC proposals this year was the Council's conception of an ideal study table program for pledges.

A banquet in November preceded the annual pledge dance. During the year, one week climaxed by a smoker was set aside for all fraternity pledges to become better acquainted. Later the group sold tickets for the Campus Chest. Through social and philanthropic activities, the Council improved relations between the pledges and initiated members.

Foreign Students Go "Greek" in IFC Program

Introducing the American fraternity system to foreign students was one of the main projects of the Interfraternity Council. Each Wednesday during the seven weeks preceding Greek Week, foreign students were invited to dinner at the fraternity houses. Some of the students who attended these dinners were invited to move into the fraternity houses on Wednesday of Greek Week and to live in the houses through Saturday of that week.

The reorganization of Greek Week, another project of the IFC, was part of a program to work more closely with the Panhellenic Association.

During spring rush, each fraternity sponsored an open house under an IFC program. In addition to this, all Indiana High school counselors received rush booklets from the Council.

Through the efforts of the I. U. Interfraternity Council, an Indiana State IFC Presidents Conference took place last fall. Four of the officers of the Interfraternity Council were sent to the national convention in Los Angeles during Thanksgiving vacation.

Foreign students lived in fraternity houses and saw the American fraternity system at work in an IFC program.

Local Acacia Chapter Honored as Best in Nation

The annual Ice Cream Social, Dan Roby, and two major attractions create a large serving of entertainment.

At their National Convention last summer, the Acacias received the Malcomb Award for being the best of the 45 Acacia chapters in the country. There were 200 representatives at this convention in Bloomington.

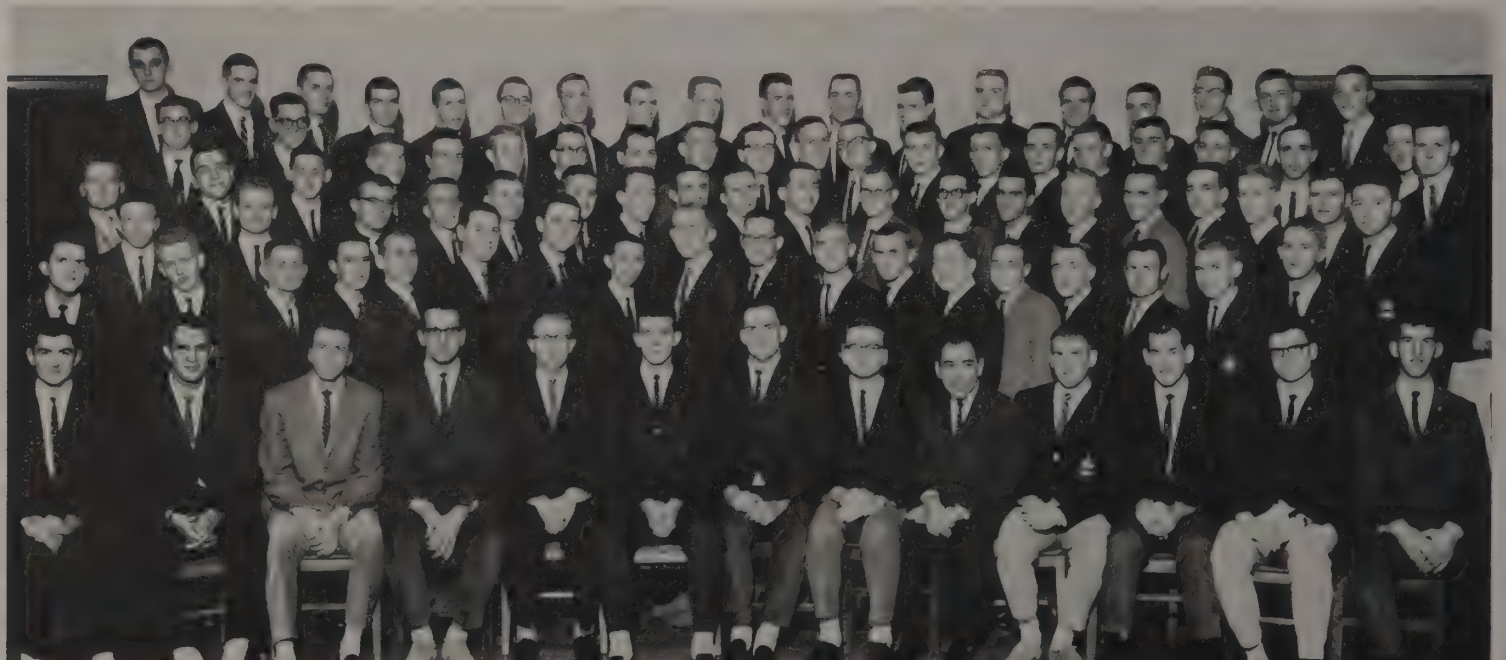

Again, as in the past, this group emphasized cordial relations with the foreign students. In October their International Tea was co-sponsored with the Alpha Chi Omegas. Acacias also invited foreign students over each week to give an informal talk.

Six thousand people were served free ice cream and entertained by the variety shows at their annual Little 500 Ice Cream Social.

La Boheme Theme of Alpha Epsilon Pi Dance

Newspapers cover the wall; mattresses are placed on the floor for seats; food and drink are served on a coffin; warped interpretations of nursery rhymes are recited; and everyone crawls through the door to enter. This is the setting for the annual Bohemian Dance at the Alpha Epsilon Pi house.

The pledges offered their services to babysit for mothers wanting to vote in the presidential election this year.

Among other activities were a hayride at Morgan-Monroe State Park, a Mardi Gras dance, spring formal in April, Parents Weekend, a jungle party, and the senior-new initiate banquet.

Alpha Phi Alphas Stress Scholarship and Service

Possible recipients of the Alpha Phi Alpha scholarship are discussed at a weekly chapter meeting in the Union.

Scholarship, service projects, and intramural sports were main interests this year of Alpha Phi Alpha social fraternity. For the first time the fraternity presented a scholarship, the recipient of which passed a series of examinations given according to rules set up by the national fraternity. The awarding of the scholarship was an attempt by the fraternity to place greater emphasis on academic achievement. At Christmas the fraternity collected baskets of canned goods which they distributed to needy families in Bloomington. They also contributed food to be distributed through the Christian Center and gave a party there for children of the west side area.

Participating in several intramural athletic contests, the Alpha Phi Alphas won second place in the basketball tournament and were semifinalists in the touch football tournament. Alumni of the fraternity were honored guests at the annual spring formal given during Little 500 weekend. A dance last spring and a reception in the fall honored Walter Bellamy, who participated in the 1960 Olympics in Rome.

Alpha Tau Omegas Start "Help Week" Program

A plaque recognizing "Help Week," a civic service program originated by the Alpha Tau Omegas, now hangs in the Union Building. The ATO's continue Help Week services through pledge class projects. Last year the pledges painted a band shell which is used for open-air concerts.

In March 1961, the I. U. chapter of Alpha Tau Omega was host to the Conclave of Indiana Chapters.

ATO is active in most intramural sports events. Among other activities of the fraternity are the spring pledge dance, the Calypso Club Dance, and their annual Little 500 Brunch. The ATO's Fall Carnival booth won second prize in the best show category.

Beta Theta Pi Is I. U.'s Oldest Fraternity

After-dinner activities for these Betas include discussions of world and local news developments.

The oldest fraternity on I. U.'s campus is Beta Theta Pi. Included among the chapter's distinguished alumni are former Governor of Indiana, Paul McNutt; former Vice-President of the United States, Wendell Wilke, and the present House of Representatives minority leader, Charles Halleck.

Representatives from Beta chapters in Indiana and surrounding areas met at I. U. in January to promote fellowship among the chapters and to discuss the fraternity as a whole.

The Betas, Sigma Chis, and Phi Delts sponsored the Miami Triad in the spring. The dance, which is an annual event, recognizes the founding of these three fraternities at Miami University.

Chi Phis Honored for Scholastic Improvement

Interfraternity Council presented the Scholastic Improvement Trophy to the men of Chi Phi, and in addition, the national fraternity gave recognition to the chapter for showing the greatest scholastic percentage increase of all its chapters for the fall semester. The I. U. chapter was founded only three years ago.

Within the last year the Chi Phis achieved two other firsts. In the spring of 1960 they were the victorious housing unit in the Campus Quiz Bowl. This year their team advanced to the semi-finals. A display with an I. U. bull roasting a Spartan player over a pit won the first place award in the Homecoming organized housing decorations category.

Delta Chis Turn House into Speakeasy For Dance

A beatnik coffee house advertised as "The Famished 'i'" won a Fall Carnival trophy for the Delta Chis.

With the mock murder of Alphonse Patrick Kelly, a fictional underworld character, in front of the Commons, the Delta Chis began their plans for his wake. This wake was the fall house dance with a Roaring Twenties theme. Other dances included the Blue Champagne Pledge Dance and a Christmas dance.

During Little 500 Weekend the Delta Chis moved to Wingate Lodge to allow their mothers to live in the house. The Mothers of Delta Chi, a chartered chapter organization, annually holds its convention at the house.

These men, with Smithwood IV, received a first-place trophy in the show division of Fall Carnival for their beatnik coffee house, "The Famished 'i'."

Delta Tau Deltas Work on Addition to House

In January 1961 workmen took the initial steps on the new $350,000 addition and remodeling of the Delta Tau Delta House. When completed, the addition will have a new formal living room and recreational facilities. It will also provide living quarters for several more men.

In cooperation with the Kappa Alpha Thetas, the Delts presented the annual Delt Street Dance in September. The dance, which was in front of the fraternity house on Eighth Street, attracted approximately 4500 persons to hear Al Cobine's band and folksinger Miriam Makeba. The Delts also had several house dances during the year, including their Homecoming Dance and the Rainbow Formal.

Individual studying is finished for the night, and now the Delts can start planning their annual street dance.

Delta Upsilon Opens 35-Man Addition to House

The red Delta Upsilon firetruck, hidden for the winter, gets a motor check-up by the mechanically minded.

A new $200,000, 35-man addition built onto the existing chapter house awaited the Delta Upsilon's this September. The men immediately showed the new section to the campus at an open house. When the I. U. chapter members serve as hosts to the national Delta Upsilon convention in Bloomington this summer, their house will help accommodate the representatives from other chapters.

The DU's, who traditionally rank high scholastically, received two trophies from their national organization this year—the National Delta Upsilon Scholarship Improvement Award and the National Trustees Award for Chapter Improvement.

Kappa Alpha Psi Founded Here 50 Years Ago

"Fifty more years of golden success" is the aim of the Kappa Alpha Psis who will celebrate their golden anniversary with a national meeting in August. The new chapter house at 17th and Jordan will be the center of activity for the 2000 chapter members and alumni who are expected to attend the four-day meeting. The house will be named the Elder Watson Diggs Memorial in honor of the man who founded the fraternity 50 years ago on the I. U. campus. The building will be ready for occupancy late in the fall semester or early second semester.

Pledge class activities this year centered around the children at the Exchange Home. The pledges took them to a movie and to one of I. U.'s home basketball games.

One of the spring projects of the Kappa Alpha Psis included support of the NAACP membership drive. The fraternity presented a fall formal, "Autumn Leaves," and also a spring formal in April. The men were also active in the intramural athletic programs in football, basketball, baseball, and track.

Wells Speaks at Kappa Delta Rho Dedication

An I. U. Sing practice finds a fancy-stepping KDR rehearsing a dance number with a high-flying Alpha Gam.

President Herman B Wells was guest speaker this year at the formal dedication of the new Kappa Delta Rho fraternity house. In his speech, President Wells cited benefits which a fraternity can provide a university. Claude Rich, I. U. Alumni Secretary, was the toastmaster at the dedication. Following the program, faculty members and housemothers were guests at an open house. The KDR's presented a ball with the music of Chris Barber the night before the dedication ceremony.

Last spring the KDR's and the Alpha Gamma Deltas won first place in the production division of I. U. Sing with music from "Good News."

Kappa Sigmas' Homecoming Float Wins Trophy

"M. S. U. 2 Will Be Shot Down," warned the Kappa Sigma fraternity when I. U.'s opponent came to town for the Homecoming football game. The Kappa Sig missile-age float which bore the prediction won second place in the Homecoming float contest.

During Homecoming weekend, the fraternity celebrated its 60th year on the I. U. campus. Newton van-Why, national ritualist, spoke at the anniversary observance.

The national fraternity voted two local alumni, Hoagy Carmichael and Branch McCracken, Outstanding Kappa Sigma Men of the Year. Portraits of the two men were hung in the Kappa Sig house.

Lambda Chi Alphas Top Male Group in 1961 Sing

Dynamic directing and exceptional enthusiasm won the Lambda Chis a trophy in the 1961 I. U. Sing.

First place for the best men's choral group went to Lambda Chi Alpha for their presentation of "Tiger Rag" in the 1961 I. U. Sing. The Lambda Chis worked with the Alpha Phis in Fall Carnival. Their candidate for Bachelor of the Year, Vance Foster, was one of the five finalists.

By publishing a quarterly paper, they kept alumni informed of the chapter's activities. The men also sponsored two dinners in honor of their alumni.

Backed by the Kappa Alpha Thetas, the Lambda Chi Alphas placed third in the 1960 Little 500. Approximately five to six thousand children from the Bloomington area participated in the annual Easter egg hunt sponsored by the Lambda Chis.

Omega Psi Phi I. U.'s New National Fraternity

Recognized by the Interfraternity Council last spring, Omega Psi Phi is the newest national fraternity on campus. The national fraternity was founded in 1914, and the local chapter was organized in the fall of 1959 although it did not come on campus officially until the recognition by the IFC. President Herman B Wells spoke at the fraternity's Founders' Day program in September.

In its first year on campus, the chapter won eighth place in overall intramural sports. Two championships won by the fraternity, one in the holiday basketball tournament and one in the touch football tournament, contributed to the athletic standing.

Social events during the year included the chapter's Coronation Ball December 17 in Alumni Hall and the spring formal April 29 in the Frangipani Room. The fraternity crowned its sweetheart at its Coronation Ball.

In co-operation with its national group, the fraternity is now planning its new chapter house which will have accommodations for 40 men. Construction of the building is scheduled to begin in 1962.

One of the greatest rewards after winning a race is the brother's handshake that says "I'm proud of you."

Phi Delta Thetas Initiate Dates as "She Delts"

A newspaper account and an additional trophy tell the tale of another intramural athletic victory for the Phi Delts.

Their "best girls" were the guests of honor of the men of Phi Delta Theta during the annual "She Delta Theta" weekend. Activity began on Friday with a picnic and dance at which the girls were pledged as "Shekias." After a work session at the Phi Delt house on Saturday morning, the girls were rewarded with a smorgasbord luncheon. They were initiated as "She Delts" on Saturday evening at a formal dinner and dance.

The Phi Delts relieved prefinal week tension this spring with their annual "Beachercomber Blast." The house was decorated in a jungle motif, and the men and their dates were dressed in native attire to carry out the dance theme.

Phi Gamma Deltas Win Three Athletic Contests

Championships in intramural football, wrestling, and free throw contests in addition to a league championship in basketball were included in the year's athletic achievements of Phi Gamma Delta.

In the spring, the Fijis set an all-time fraternity scholastic record with a 1.8 average. As a community service project, the men sang to the Borrowed Time Club, a group of Bloomington senior citizens, following performances in I. U. Sing and the Fiji State Day contest. Their musical arrangement won first place in the State Day competition.

Major dances sponsored by the Phi Gamma Deltas were the Heidelberg Hop, Fiji Isle, Mount Olympus, and the Jeff Hop.

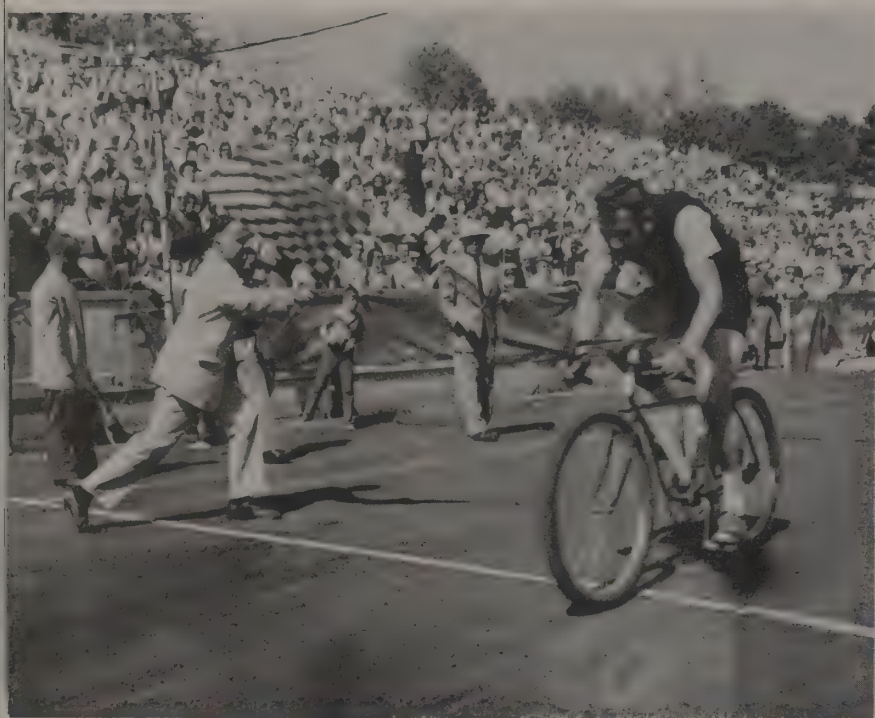

Ingenuity plus strong eardrums created this make-shift band for the Phi Gamma Deltas.

Phi Kappa Psis Win "500" for Third Straight Year

The checkered flag and a cheer from the crowd end the Little 500 race with the third consecutive victory for the Phi Psis.

They did it again! For the third consecutive year Phi Kappa Psi won the Little 500 bicycle race last spring. On Sunday afternoon following the race, the fraternity had its annual victory party in Brown County State Park with its sponsoring sorority, Delta Gamma.

During the weekend of February 19 the Phi Psis had their initiation. At their annual Founder's Day celebration, the fraternity honored Thomas Cookson, a distinguished alumnus who was one of the first members of the Indiana University chapter of Phi Kappa Psi.

Social events included the fall pledge dance, "Shipwreck," and the spring Arab Dance.

Phi Kappa Taus Intensify Scholarship Program

An intensified scholarship program was the goal set this year by the men of Phi Kappa Tau. The members received most of their ideas for improvement of their program at their national convention at Shawnee, Pennsylvania, where Phi Kappa Tau chapters from throughout the nation gathered to exchange ideas on improving their individual chapters.

The spring formal sponsored by the fraternity had a medieval castle theme.

The Phi Taus rejuvenated their home in the fall with a do-it-yourself redecorating project. They repainted the interior and bought new furniture, paintings, drapes, lamps, and carpets for the house.

A tapestry with the fraternity's crest, made by two of the men during the summer, hangs in the Phi Tau house.

Phi Kappa Theta Honored for Blood Drive Work

"They say that a man with the right mental attitude knows how to make the best of any situation."

The local Red Cross presented a trophy to Phi Kappa Theta for winning first place in a blood drive conducted on campus in the fall. The major activity of the chapter in the spring was serving as host to representatives from various chapters in Province Five at the fraternity's convention.

In the spirit of Christmas, the fraternity entertained the children from the Exchange House at a party at the chapter house. A Phi Kap Santa Claus gave each child a gift, and the men treated the children to a movie and refreshments.

The annual spring formal in April climaxed the activities of the second semester which included exchange dinners and informal dances.

Phi Sigma Kappas Build Best Homecoming Float

The first place trophy for the best Homecoming float was awarded to the Phi Sigma Kappas. Based upon Greek mythology, the theme of the float was "Terrors of the field are bearers of the shield." The men carried out the theme with pledges dressed as I. U. football players carrying a wounded M. S. U. player on a shield.

At the annual "Moonlight Girl" spring formal, a queen and her court were selected from a group of candidates consisting of one representative from each sorority on campus. Other social events were the "Beachcomber's Blast" and a pajama dance.

All fraternity and sorority housemothers were guests at the annual "Housemothers' Banquet."

Pi Kappa Phis Initiate "Project a Month" Plan

Brothers lend a helping hand to unload assorted boxes and suitcases as the Pi Kappa Phis move in.

A "Project a Month" plan was initiated by the actives and pledges of Pi Kappa Phi as they worked for over-all physical improvement of their house. Because of this program, they were able to sell the house second semester. The Pi Kaps plan to purchase another home by spring of next year.

Included on the Pi Kap social calendar were the Homecoming Dance and the Rose Ball.

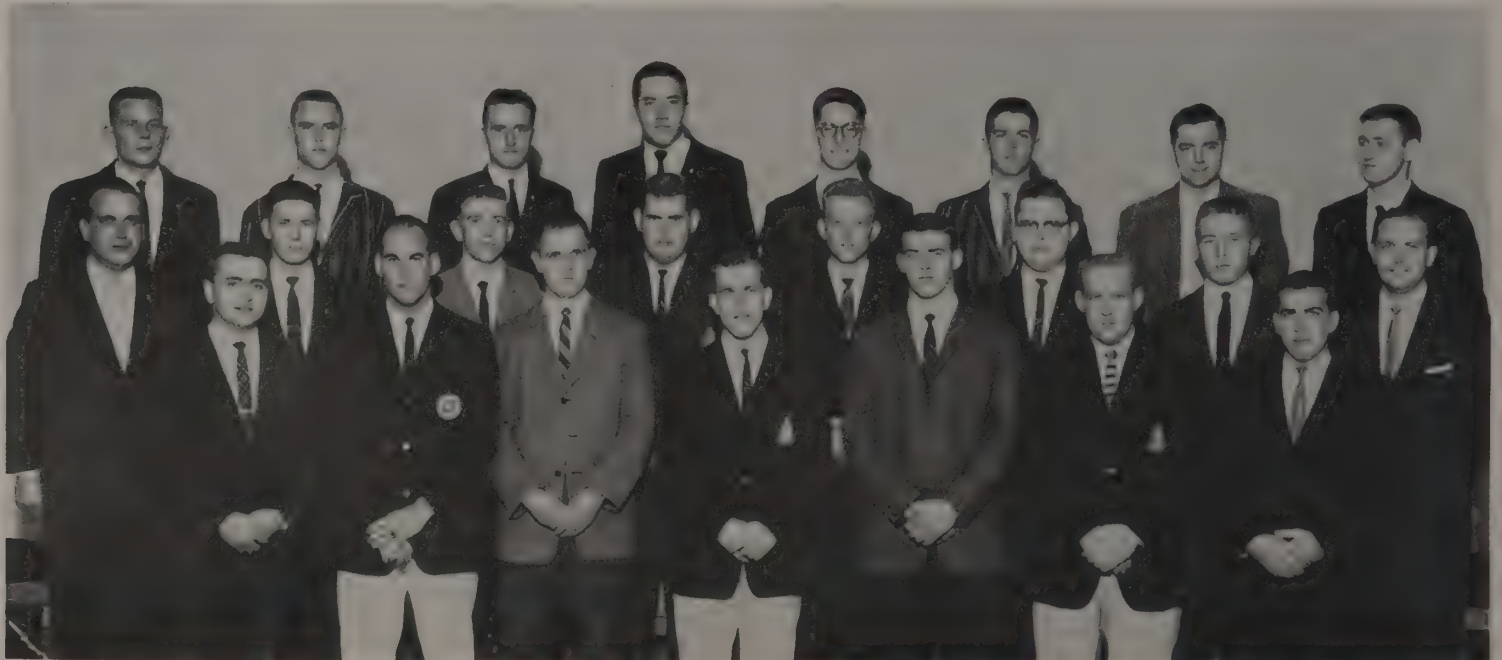

Active in all intramural sports, the men of Pi Kappa Phi were semi-finalists in the football league.

Three representatives from the local chapter attended "Pi Kappa Phi College" in South Carolina, a conference meant to familiarize the men with customs and functions of the fraternity.

Sigma Alpha Epsilon's Adviser Dies in France

Advisor to the I. U. chapter of Sigma Alpha Epsilon for the past 33 years, Professor Clare W. (Doc) Barker, passed away in Cannes, France, in July. In an attempt to fill the vacancy, a group of faculty and Bloomington alumni agreed to serve as an advisory committee for the chapter.

The SAE's candidate for Bachelor of the Year, Mac Crosbie, won the contest and received his title at the Fall Carnival. Other fall social events planned by the fraternity included the pledge dance, "Tumbleweed Twist", which had a western theme. The chapter finished second in the Little 500 last spring and sponsored its annual Distinguished Guests Reception at the fraternity house following the race.

Roses for freshman girls and gum for all voters helped secure votes for 1960 Bachelor of the Year, Mac Crosbie.

Sigma Alpha Mus Use Unique Advertising Scheme

The strum of a guitar and the hum of a familiar tune—the Sammies are planning another serenade.

Donning children's clothes and carrying teddy bears in their arms, the Sigma Alpha Mus and the Kappa Kappa Gammas skipped through the Commons and Ballantine Hall during the week before Fall Carnival. Their unusual advertising scheme made their booth, "Peg a Panda," one of the most popular ones at the Carnival. The booth won second place in the originality division.

Sigma Chis Win Chapter Improvement Award

In competition with five other Indiana state chapters, Lambda of Sigma Chi fraternity was awarded the J. Dwight Peterson Award at State Day. This award was based on a report, presented by the chapter, showing the year's improvement in scholarship, chapter organization, intramural sports, and the number of fraternity activities.

Among the Sigma Chis' activities this year was the annual Melon Mess in September. Approximately 750 watermelons were devoured by I. U. students and the residents of Bloomington at this big event. In the spring, the Sigma Chis presented their traditional Sweetheart Dance.

"I'll bet my pitching arm is stronger than yours" is the challenge as rinds go sailing at the Melon Mess.

"Wynahlei," the booth created by the Sigma Nus and the Chi Omegas, won first place for originality at Fall Carnival. Also in cooperation with the Chi Omegas, the Sigma Nus sponsored their annual Christmas party for foreign students.

The Sigma Nus sponsored their three annual dances—the Barroom Brawl, the Voo Doo Dance, and the Blackfoot-Whitefoot Formal. The fraternity also initiated two new flings, the Daisy Mae Dance and the "Can't Wait 'Til New Year's" Dance.

Backed by Alpha Phi in the Little 500 last spring, the Sigma Nus placed fourth in the race. They finished first in the Teke Chariot Race.

Sigma Phi Epsilons Retreat to Bradford Woods

The great outdoors became the "board room" for Sigma Phi Epsilon last fall when the fraternity planned its program for the year's activities. Nearly all members attended the four-day retreat in Bradford Woods before returning to the fraternity house.

The program outlined at the retreat included the Sig Eps' first Founders' Day Banquet on November 1. All alumni of the local chapter were invited to attend the banquet and the meeting which followed.

The Sig Eps chose their Sweetheart at their annual Queen of Hearts Dance last spring. The fraternity participated in other social activities, including the Spring Formal and the Pledge Dance.

A cry for "a fourth for bridge" tempted the Sig Eps to play "just a few hands" before resuming their academic pursuits.

Sigma Pis Plan Design and Location of New Home

Last-minute wrapping of boress gifts for their dates kept the Sigma Pis busy before their Christmas party.

By establishing the design and the location of a new house, the alumni and active members of Sigma Pi laid the groundwork for the future expansion of the fraternity.

The Sigma Pis stressed intragroup activities as well as studies and had euchre, chess, and bridge tourneys. They also won several honors in intramural athletics.

After the last basketball and football homecoming of the year, the Sigma Pis had a reception for their alumni who attended the game. The fraternity's first social event of the year, however, was its pledge dance, "Condemned". A Christmas party and the traditional Orchid Formal were given later in the year.

Tau Kappa Epsilon Race Gives Two Scholarships

Two $150 scholarships, instead of a single scholarship which had been awarded in past years, were provided from the proceeds of last year's fourth annual Tau Kappa Epsilon Chariot Race. All men's residence halls and fraternities were eligible to enter the race.

The Tekes were the first social fraternity to entertain a group of foreign exchange students at a dinner under a newly established campus-wide program.

The four dances on the fraternity's social program were the Spring Formal, the annual Red Carnation Ball, and two pledge dances.

Theta Chis Have Regional Oxbow Convention

Even "Ox", the fraternity's mascot, attends song practice in preparation for a Theta Chi serenade.

Representatives from chapters in four states met at I. U. for the regional Oxbow convention of Theta Chi last spring. At the conference the men exchanged ideas about programs and activities of each chapter.

The local Theta Chi's actively supported three important dances during the year. They sponsored the winner in the Miss Fascination contest, Miss Karen Kline, who received the title at the Fascination Ball September 30. The fraternity also presented its traditional all-campus dance, the "Bicycle Bounce", during the Little 500 weekend. At the major dance of the year within the fraternity, the Dream Girl Ball, the men honored one of the pin women as Alpha Iota Chapter's dream girl.

Zeta Beta Tau Has Tutoring Service for Pledges

A tutoring service for pledges was introduced this fall by the men of Zeta Beta Tau. The fraternity, ranked second scholastically among fraternities last year, began the program to maintain a high scholastic average and to aid pledges with first semester college work. The ZBT's won first place in intramural swimming and tied for first in softball.

The fraternity's social activities included its annual Chanukah party for local children. The men moved out en masse and their dates moved in for the weekend for their traditional "Big Switch" dance. "Swingin' 60's", designed and built by the Sigma Delta Taus and the Zeta Beta Taus, placed second in the most-original-booth category at Fall Carnival.

Men and Women's Groups Merge to Form IRHA

In March of 1960 the WRHA and the MRHA were combined to form the IRHA. The new association is composed of three levels of government: hall or unit, center, and the inter-residence halls. The branches of the IRHA are the Assembly, the Judicial Board, and the Cabinet. Dr. Elizabeth Greenleaf, Director of Counseling and Activities for the residence halls is the adviser.

The IRHA president, two vice-presidents, secretary, and treasurer, together with the president and two representatives from each center, form the Residents' Assembly. This is primarily a policy-making group and a means of communications between the IRHA and the centers and units.

The Judicial Board is composed of nine upper-class members from the dormitory centers. It aids the individual in accepting self-discipline.

The IRHA Cabinet coordinates residence activities. Members of the cabinet are the five officers, the academic coordinator, the cultural coordinator, the social coordinator, and a clerical secretary.

IRHA officers discuss past accomplishments.

In September the IRHA sponsored a leadership workshop for all halls of residence officers. After a general convocation, the officers divided into groups to discuss their individual areas of interest.

Eighteen delegates from the IRHA, including the officers elected in the spring, attended the conference for Big Ten residence halls. The conference, which took place in April, involved approximately 200 halls of residence officials from the Big Ten universities. "Values" was the theme of the meeting.

Though policy making is an important but tedious job, IRHA executives include laughter on their agenda.

Smithwood Wings Now Use Center Government

Center officers check to see if the test file is complete.

Operating for the first time under a central government, Smithwood Wings worked to promote scholarship and activities. The Center Council revised quiet hours, worked for stricter enforcement of dining room dress regulations, and planned the Center spring elections and the spring officer orientation program.

The Center Cabinet endeavored to coordinate academic and social programs. A third branch of the government, the Judicial Board, heard and decided cases. The Center Social Committee originated programs for Dads' Day football weekend in the fall and the traditional Mother's Weekend in the spring.

A folk-sing between JAWQ men and the women of all four wings of Smithwood was sponsored by the Council. Other center-wide social activities included an open house and an exchange with Purdue for the I. U.-Purdue weekend. Girls from the center attended the game and spent the weekend as guests of a men's residence hall at Purdue.

PJ Party Begins Smithwood I Mothers' Weekend

Strips of silver tinsel upon a green tree help "deck the halls" of Smithwood I in preparation for the holidays.

"Come to a pajama party tonight" was the invitation that welcomed mothers of Smithwood Wing I women when they arrived for the annual Mothers' Weekend last spring. The party preceded other weekend activities which included a breakfast in the rec room, a style show, and a second party complete with skits, singing, baton twirling, and dancing. The girls gave souvenirs of the campus to their mothers.

Each week the Hall Council, the Wing's major governing body, met to coordinate activities of the separate floors. The council is composed of the dorm's officers and representatives from each floor.

"Girls, you just gotta help keep your rooms clean! I'm an old woman, and picking up after you gives me a backache."

A speaker from one of the Bloomington churches or from the Committee on Comparative Religion addressed women of Smithwood Wing II once each month at their vespers services. During the other weekly services, girls representing Catholic, Protestant, and Jewish religions were in charge of the program. The religious committee, who coordinated the programs, also planned debates on topics of religious interest to the girls.

Smithwood III Entertains 64 Dads on Dads' Day

Santa Claus, beatnik style, paid a surprise visit to Wing III's Christmas party at the end of "Pixie Week."

"Men in the hall" became the rallying cry for a good time for the fathers of Smithwood III women on Dads' Day, October 30. To allow the 64 fathers who visited the dormitory to stay overnight in the hall, the women on one floor evacuated their rooms.

Each floor presented a skit designed to inform the dads of their "darling daughters'" college life. The 75-voice dorm chorus then sang to their guests in typical serenade fashion. The tired fathers left the dorm Sunday after being a "coed" for one day.

At Christmas the women invited the Sigma Nus and the Sigma Alpha Epsilons to help them decorate a Christmas tree in the Wing III lounge. After the decorations were complete, children from the Exchange Home were entertained at a party in the

Smithwood Wing IV's Skit Wins Top Act Award

"Pixie Week" in Wing IV ended when "pixies'" names were revealed and gifts for needy children were collected.

The trophy for the best act at the Fall Carnival of 1960 is now in the possession of Smithwood Wing IV. Working with Delta Chi social fraternity, Wing IV created a skit titled "The Famished 'i'".

Thirty-six underprivileged children were guests of Wing IV at a Christmas party arranged by the dorm social committee. Each floor provided gifts and refreshments for nine children. The wing also sponsored a Christmas reception for members of the faculty.

After finals, members of the wing had a test file party to collect examinations. A skit and refreshments added to the fun. The wing's scholarship committee maintains a file of tests and encourages Representatives from Tower Quad units meet to discuss late-hours penalties, dining room dress, and plans for I. U. Sing.

Singing "Wacdoat," last spring Tower Center became the first independent housing unit to receive the trophy for first prize in the Over-all-Best-Group category of the I. U. Sing. The Center's Towersingers won the coveted trophy with their musical narrative of a freshman's first weeks on campus. "Wacdoat" originated from "We all couldn't decide on a title."

The Center Council made rules and provided a varied program of activities. They established a Judicial Board on both the Center and the individual hall levels.

Assisting the Council are the Center Coordinators who published the newspaper, Tower Logos, and sponsored the winter dance, "Wonderland by Night".

The Tower Center homecoming display won first place in the Independent housing competition.

A sum of money was appropriated by the Council to be invested in one of the programs to "adopt" a foreign child through financial support. The "adoption" will be done in the name of the Center. A new constitution was adopted by the Center last fall.

Tower Quad E Has Receptions for Performers

"But, the heart is upside down," moaned an anatomy major attempting to tutor her roommate for an exam the next day.

Two all-campus receptions honoring performers in Auditorium productions were given this year by women in Tower E. In the fall the women entertained Miss Miriam Makeba, singer of folk music, after her appearance in the Pop Concert Series. Joan Bennett, Donald Cook, and the entire cast of "The Pleasure of His Company" were guests this spring at a second reception.

The building was the background for Tower Center's homecoming display which won first placing in the over-all classification for independent housing.

Trees Center Council Adopts New Constitution

The administration of a new Trees Center Constitution was the most important work of the Trees Council this year. The Council also formed a Hospitality Corps. The executive group played its usual role in helping the Independence Party in the fall elections.

A Center judicial board was activated this year for the first time. The board decides all minor disciplinary actions within the Center and enforces all rules made by the Center Council.

Trees Center participated in several campus activities including Fall Carnival. Their booth, "Save the Dame," received a first place award in the best game-of-chance category competition.

Several all-Center activities were planned by the Council. The week preceding Christmas vacation, the Council presented a Center Variety Show. Housing units created acts and competed for trophies. On St. Patrick's day, a Center-wide dance took place in the Frangipani Room.

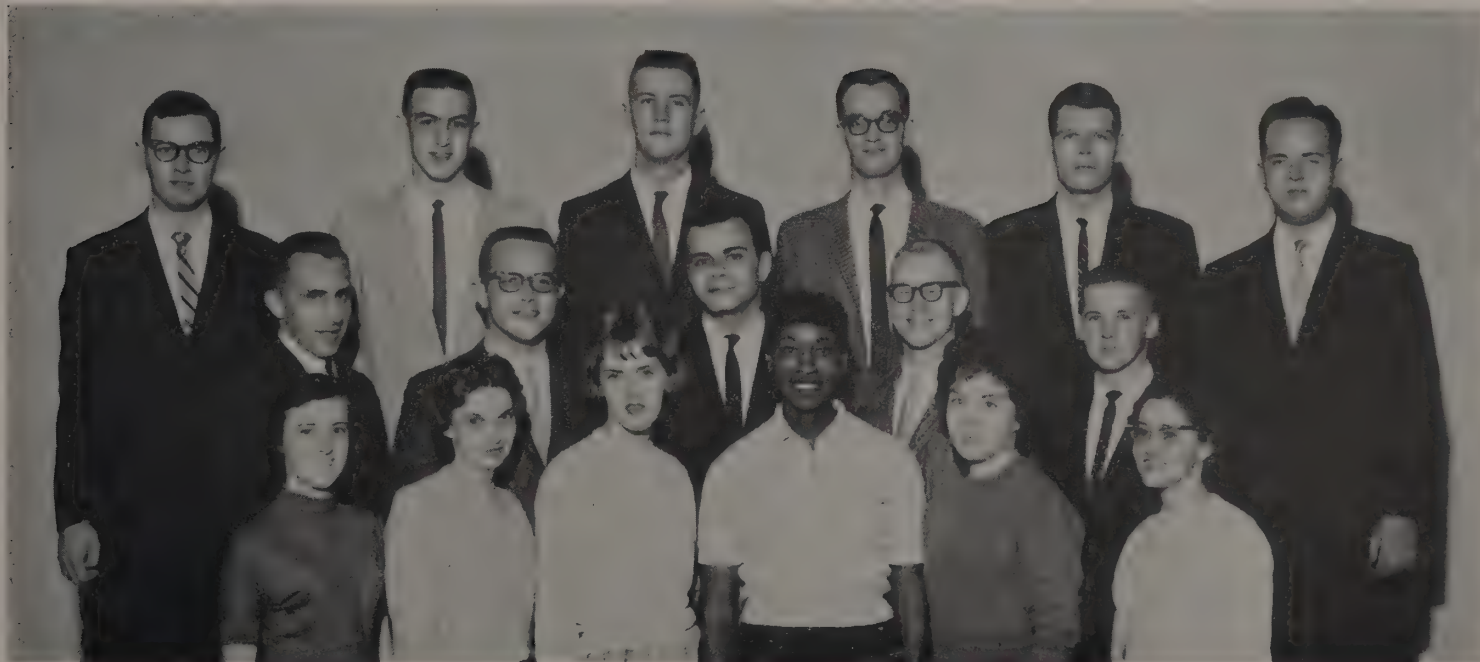

The Trees Center Glee Club participated in the Christmas Eve on Campus festivities.

"If we do it my way, we will have a better booth, and besides, we can save ten dollars that we don't have."

Cedar Hall Uses Cooperative System and Spirit

Activities in the lighted rooms of Cedar Hall range from bridge to study sessions, from meetings to house cleaning.

The traditionally "co-operative" hall, Cedar Hall, is co-operative both in the spirit of its residents and in the division of duties by which the hall is kept spotless.

This year, for the first time, the dorm was divided into an "upper" and a "lower" Cedar, the lower hall not being included in the "co-operative" plan.

Girls living on the upper floor of Cedar do their own cleaning and have a choice of whether or not they purchase their meals from the University. For their endeavors the coeds receive reduced room rent.

Cedar has one of the few "co-operative" living plans on campus and now has the distinction of being the only hall with two different living plans.

Upper Linden Hall Active in Intramural Athletics

"Well, now that's where you might be wrong. My psychology book says that results of recent interviews indicate . . ."

Intramural athletics participation was not without its rewards for the men for Upper Linden Hall when they became semi-finalists in the pre-holiday basketball tournament. In addition, the dormitory's bowling team was the champion of all the men's residence halls.

Linden, the men's scholarship dorm, is traditionally a leader when scholastic rankings are released. Although the men appreciate the financial assistance given by the University, they equally appreciate the good study atmosphere found within the dorm. This year the men have been working with their scholarship adviser to revise their program so they might improve conditions and increase study facilities.

Oak Hall "Trees Spartans" to Win Award

A heart full of memories and a scrapbook full of clippings help keep past events alive for a coed.

"I. U. Trees the Spartans," the Homecoming display designed by the women of Oak Hall, won second place in the Independent Housing competition. A trophy hangs in their lounge proclaiming Oak victorious in the annual Oak versus North Maple football game.

For their fall open house, the women served as hostesses to 175 guests. At Christmas, they drew names for a toy exchange and, after the names were revealed, then donated the toys to underprivileged children in the Bloomington area. Oak Hall also participated in the Trees Center Christmas Variety Show. Spring activities for the residence hall included an open house and Mothers' Weekend.

Pine Hall Blends Jobs, Studies, and Top Grades

In addition to working at least ten hours a week on campus, the 140 women of Pine Hall of Trees Center also work two hours a week in the dormitory. All women are recipients of residence scholarships. This year, as in the past, Pine Hall has continued to be the leading dormitory on campus scholastically.

This year, Pine Hall's activities have been particularly unique. The faculty associate program, recently initiated in Pine, has paved the way to better communications between the faculty and students.

The women of Pine Hall have also spent many hours this year working on various committees for the new IRHA sponsored radio station.

Walnut Hall Converted to Men's Residence Hall

"No kidding, you should have seen this objet d'art!" exclaims a member of Walnut Hall during a study break.

No longer a music building annex, Walnut Hall this year resounded with the sounds made by approximately 130 men who moved into the residence hall. The building is now a part of Trees Center.

The men pride themselves in their many activities and in the unity of the dorm. They have organized their own newspaper, the Walnut Reject, which prints news about the dorm and encourages scholarship.

At Christmas the hall, along with Smithwood II, gave a party for underprivileged children at the Christian Center. Other activities included a pumpkin dance, a hayride, and the Trees Center talent show in which they won first prize with Pine Hall.

Memorial Hall Emphasizes Intramural Sports

A greater emphasis was placed upon intramural sports by the women of Memorial Hall this year both as a means of relaxation and as a means of meeting people. Because table tennis was one of the more popular sports, a tournament was organized within the dormitory. The women also participated in intramural basketball and bowling.

Before Christmas the women of Memorial Hall had an open house for all other housing units on campus. The unit's residents participated in a hall decorating contest; prizes were given for the best corridor decorations. The women also helped in the preparations for the Wells Quad "Christmas Cotillion," a formal dance given in the Frangipani Room in December.

Dodds House Wins Outstanding Unit Award

Dodds House has done it again! For the seventh consecutive year, it has been named outstanding unit of Wright Quadrangle. Dodds men received this award as a result of their continued ability to maintain a good scholastic record coupled with an active social program.

Dodds participated in intramural basketball and softball, and won the divisional championship in football. They also won the annual Quad tug-of-war across the Jordan River. For the tenth year, Dodds men rode in the Little 500.

Social functions included faculty dinners, the annual Harold's Club Casino, and several other dances.

Parks House Named "Most Improved" in JAWQ

Parks House sportsmen are interviewed for an article in The Scribe, the unit's bi-monthly publication.

At the 1960 Wright Quadrangle Recognition Dinner, Parks House received the award as the Most Improved Unit among the 18 houses in the center. The unit was ranked fifth academically in the center for the fall semester of 1960.

Parks House sponsored an all-Quad dance, the "Bucket Hop", preceding the I. U.-Purdue football game. The House hopes to make the dance an annual affair. Following their successful "White Magic" Christmas dance, the men of Parks House donated a flocked tree used as decoration for the dance and a basket of food to an underprivileged family in the area. The unit also sponsored two faculty dinners.

Rollins House Receives Kiwanis' Academic Trophy

High academic standing as a unit merited the men of Rollins House the Wright Quadrangle academic trophy for the spring semester of 1960. Sponsored by the downtown Bloomington Kiwanis Club, the award has been presented to the top unit scholastically in the Quad for the past five years. In addition, the Rollins freshmen led other Quad freshmen academically for two consecutive semesters.

The unit entered teams in intramural basketball, football, and bowling. They are also planning to publish a house newspaper and to adopt the faculty associate system. Rollins House sponsored a coffee house for the all-Quad Activities Jamboree.

Lowe House Decorates With 12-Foot Wreath

The twelve-foot wreath which hung on the side of Wright Quadrangle during the holiday season was constructed by the men of Lowe House as their contribution to the Christmas spirit. They also joined seventeen other housing units on campus in giving the annual Christmas party for the children in the Exchange Home.

Throughout the year, the men of Lowe House took time out from studies for many and varied activities. They participated in serenades, coeducational football games, and intramural athletics. They also entertained some of the students' favorite faculty members at a faculty dinner.

Exhibiting a seasonal zest for creative activity, the men of Lowe House hoist their Christmas signal to Santa Claus.

Harding House's Reporter Keeps Men Informed

The "Harding House Rebels" were alerted about all their unit activities in a bi-monthly newspaper, The Rebel Reporter. Someone on each floor of the unit was appointed to write articles for the paper.

Given full coverage in the Reporter was the annual Christmas party at which members of the unit exchanged boress gifts. This was one of the major activities of the fall semester.

Unit activities kept Harding men busy during the year. Among their outstanding events were hayrides, exchange dinners, faculty dinners, and dances. The "Harding House Rebels" also participated in intra-mural athletic events.

Tom Atkins, President of the Student Body

Thomas C. Schreck, director of student activities, confers with Tom Atkins about a new activities board.

Proposed Board to Consider Student Standards

Proposed by the President of the Student Body, Tom Atkins, the new Board of Student Standards will consider rules regarding conduct, honesty, and responsibility. Also created this year were two new Cabinet positions, the Secretaries of Traffic and of External Affairs.

The Board of Academic Review, created by the Student Senate in 1959-1960, considered such things as uniform faculty rating sheets, a University honors program, rules regarding cheating and plagiarism, and the creation of a tutors' list. Other projects included changing smoking rules in the main library, sending the Student Body President as a representative to a foreign country, reorganizing the judicial system, and establishing a travel information bureau.

This year the campus had shuttle-bus service to and from football and basketball games for the first time. Other proposed projects are student charge accounts in the Union Building, a babysitting service, and University telephone and mail service for fraternities and sororities.

Supreme Court Jurisdiction Covers Three Areas

Hudner Southworth, Chief Justice of the Student Supreme Court

The jurisdiction of the Student Supreme Court falls into three areas, and its duties are twofold. The nine members of the court sit as a trial court with six of its members forming half of the 12-member University Conduct Committee.

The trial court has jurisdiction in interpreting the Student Government Constitution, laws and acts of the Student Senate, and conduct of Student Government officials. It may also hear appeals (with penal authority) from lower campus courts and hear (with original jurisdiction) any case brought by any student, member of the faculty, student organization, or academic department.

Appointments to the Supreme Court are made by the Student Body President in collaboration with the outgoing President. These nine Student Government appointments must then be approved by a two-thirds majority of the Student Senate.

Senate Forms Group to Review Campus Activities

Foremost among the Student Senate's considerations this year was the role of the Senate in the student activities program. The Senate created a committee which will grant and withdraw recognition and also co-ordinate existing activities. The 25-member Student Senate meets every Thursday in the Distinguished Alumni Room.

Acting under Speaker Jim Taylor, this year's Senate has considered more than 50 items of legislation. More than 100 students were present to hear the Senate recommend that the University adopt a policy of nondiscrimination in renting off-campus housing. Among other items passed were bills to create a Union-Student Government Activities Night and to sponsor a mock presidential election and an all-campus convocation on Cuba. They made recommendations for lowering the minimum age for off-campus housing to 21, for a 2-day book-reserve, and for a book-return chute in the library. The Senate also approved a referendum on next year's one-day Thanksgiving vacation, the creation of a central book exchange, and the appointment of the Speaker as representative to the Faculty Council.

Seniors Have Priority to Buy Basketball Tickets

"I think we'd all rather get basketball tickets early and be able to sit around and relax."

In co-operation with the Student Athletic Board, the Class of '61 this year arranged for their class and following senior classes to have priority in purchasing the first basketball tickets for athletic events in the new Fieldhouse. In addition, they had a Senior Class picnic in the spring and chose their own Baccalaureate speaker with the permission of the Alumni Association. The class decided not to have a Commencement speaker.

The seniors of 1961 not only carried out new ideas and projects, but they also furthered traditions as well.

The soon-to-be alumni maintained the tradition of Senior Class Day, a spring day when the seniors are honored at a tea given by President Wells in the afternoon and at a dance in the evening. Through manual and financial co-ordination, they helped support the Coronation Ball. As a farewell gift to the University, the class presented the traditional shrubbery as well as an ornamental gift for one of the new lounges in the Indiana Memorial Union.

Junior Class Establishes Scholarship Loan Fund

The second of the class committees, the Policy Advisory Committee, dealt with problems regarding junior class members and class policy. Suggestions were sent to the class executive council, the Student Senate, or the administration for consideration. Surveys of junior class government and the role of student government on the I. U. campus were conducted by the Student Government Survey Committee. A 4-page newsletter was published monthly by the executive council and distributed to all junior class members to inform them of class executive policies.

Functioning through the actions of the executive committee of the class, sophomores published their class newsletter for the second year. The class also helped to finance the Committee on Philanthropic Endeavors and contributed to the seventh annual Little United Nations Assembly. The Class of '63 participated in the planning and preparations for the second Coronation Ball, which was sponsored jointly by the four class governments.

The executive committee, composed of the four officers and the male and female directors for the organized and independent students, was a sounding board for the ideas of President John Raeburn who was the class representative to the Student Senate. Through the discussions of this committee, sophomores channeled their opinions to the officers and to the Senate. Among the ideas brought before the executive committee were the activities plan of Dean Thomas C. Schreck, the proposed student board of standards, and the plan for abolishing class governments that was proposed by Tom Atkins.

Freshmen Sponsor Honors Banquet and Tyronian

Richard Ristine, lieutenant governor of Indiana, was guest speaker at the Freshman Honors Banquet on March 19. Also included among the events completed by the Class of '64 during this past year was the annual Freshman Tyronian. The dance was given in Alumni Hall on April 21 with Al Cobine's band providing the music. The Freshman Class also aided, both financially and manually, in the preparations for the second annual Coronation Ball in February.

During the year the freshmen published a newsletter which was circulated to all members of the class. The newsletter printed articles about outstanding freshmen. With this publication, the class attempted to maintain as much unity as possible. The Class of '64 was represented in the Student Senate by its president, John Branham.

Members of the class were given many opportunities to participate in class activities. These included working on the newsletter staff and the Tyronian steering committee and collecting class dues.

Members of Aeons often find that they can obtain the best results by tabled motion.

Board of Aeons in 40th Year as Advisory Group

This year marks the 40th year of strategic service to the University for the Board of Aeons. Established in 1921 by President William Lowe Bryan, the group is the highest men's honorary service organization at Indiana University. It is the male counterpart of Mortar Board.

Operating both as a link and a buffer between the student body and the University administration, the group is ideally situated to study any and all problems of campus life. The members work quietly during the year studying the problems and needs of both students and faculty and are often solicited for opinions and suggestions by the administration. Many of the Board of Aeons' decisions influence the University's policies.

Mortar Board Taps 25 Juniors at AWS Meeting

The 25 outstanding junior women selected for Mortar Board were tapped at the AWS Mass Meeting on March 21. Pledging for the new members of the senior women's advisory board took place during Little 500 Weekend.

McCormick's Creek was the scene of Mortar Board's fall retreat when members planned the year's activities and programs for their weekly meetings.

To learn about Mortar Board on the national level and to discuss membership selection for the organization, the women met for a study day in Dean Eunice C. Roberts' home.

The president and vice-president of the YWCA were recipients of Mortar Board scholarships to Leadership School at Union Theological Seminary in New York City. These awards were made possible by the sale of Mothers' Day corsages. In the fall, Mortar Board women distributed complimentary copies of the Daily Herald-Telephone and sold candy in the dormitories, sororities, and fraternities.

Blue Key

One of the highest honors an I. U. man can earn is that of membership in the local chapter of Blue Key. Membership is granted to men who are outstanding scholastically, have demonstrated superior leadership ability, and have accumulated a minimum of 100 Blue Key points. These points are awarded by the organization for active participation in campus activities including offices in class, academic, social, housing unit, and honorary organizations. Special recognition is given freshmen who have accumulated 40 points.

The group meets monthly to hear speakers from various fields in the University and to discuss current problems, thus taking advantage of available knowledge to supplement their own learning.

I. U. student leaders must work conscientiously and energetically during their undergraduate years in order to become members of Dragon's Head. The select organization chooses its members on the basis of superior leadership and outstanding service as officers of campus organizations or residence units. The major attraction of the discriminating group is that, once he has become a member, a man has an unlimited opportunity to perfect the art of his boress skill.

Dragon's Head makes no further demands upon his time, intelligence, ingenuity, or physical strength. The honorary recognizes his past labor and strives to pamper him with no work and much glory. Members attend dinner meetings three times a year.

Falcon Club Works to Promote Athletic Interest

Promoting better relationships among the fraternities, reviving forgotten I. U. traditions, and augmenting the student body's interest in athletics are among the purposes of the Falcon Club, an activities honorary for organized junior men. Each year the club awards trophies to the outstanding "Lineman of the Year" and the "Back of the Year."

Founded in 1941 for organized sophomore men, the Falcon Club has now become a well-established honorary for selected organized junior men. The club, during its metamorphosis, was chartered as an honorary for organized sophomore and junior men in 1945.

The organization annually elects its members from a field of three sophomore candidates nominated from each fraternity by the fraternity members. Each member of the Falcon Club must have at least a 1.5 cumulative grade average and be active in campus affairs. The new members are formally admitted into the organization at the club's annual initiation banquet in the spring.

Flame Club

The upkeep of I. U.'s traditional Wellhouse and the presentation of trophies, in co-operation with the Sphinx Club and the Student Athletic Board, for the best Homecoming housing unit decorations are among the activities of the Flame Club, an honorary for independent junior and senior men.

The Flame Club recognizes outstanding independent upperclassmen through membership and encourages further scholastic and leadership achievement among its members. The minimum grade requirement for this organization is a 1.6 cumulative average. Members must also participate in two major campus activities. The Flame Club also attempts to improve student-faculty relations and to create a spirit of good will between the students and the various organizations on campus.

As part of its goal of service to the University, Tomahawk, in co-operation with Cresset Club, undertook the task of publicizing the Red Cross blood drive on November 14-16. Tomahawk members also sold programs for the Little 500 bicycle race in Memorial Stadium.

This scholastic honorary for independent students was host chapter to the National Tomahawk Convention in the Union December 2-3. Delegates from six Tomahawk chapters from Midwestern colleges and universities attended the convention. In December, Tomahawk members honored new pledges at a banquet in the Union.

Members of Tomahawk must be sophomores with a 1.6 cumulative average. For the second year Tomahawk has a coeducational membership program.

Skull and Crescent Introduces Fascination Ball

Shattering tradition and rebuilding it at the same time, the members of Skull and Crescent did away with the annual Sweater Hop and Sweater Queen this year. The event was replaced by the Fascination Ball. The first Miss Fascination was Theta Chi-sponsored candidate Karen Kline.

Skull and Crescent is an activities honorary for organized sophomore men. A maximum of three men from each social fraternity on campus is eligible for membership into the organization.

The purposes of Skull and Crescent are to foster high scholastic achievement, to aid freshman students, to promote school spirit, and to facilitate faculty-student relations on campus. The honorary offers a scholarship to one deserving sophomore each year. It also handles pledge affairs and encourages interest in athletic events. At their weekly meetings, members discuss fraternity and campus matters.

At the end of the year, Skull and Crescent gives a banquet for all its members. They have an outstanding speaker as a guest at the event.

Senior Man Honored Each Month by Sphinx Club

Steve Beeler, one of the Sphinx Club's Men of the Month, accepts the award from Bill Seng, president.

Senior men who had distinguished themselves through achievements in scholarship, activities, and athletics were honored with a monthly award by the Sphinx Club. Among the seniors chosen were the chief justice of the Student Supreme Court and the President of the Union Board. Monthly selection was made from five recommendations by the Sphinx Club and a final selection panel of four faculty and staff judges. This was the first year such an award was given.

The Sphinx Club is an honorary fraternity for outstanding senior fraternity men. Among their annual services is the supervision of floats and housing decorations for the Homecoming game and the presentation of first and second place trophies for the best entries.

One of the oldest campus honoraries, Sphinx Club was founded in 1910. Membership is composed of the three outstanding senior men from each social fraternity. They are judged on the basis of scholarship, leadership, and service.

Pleiades

A change in qualifications for membership was considered this year by the members of Pleiades, scholarship and activities honorary for sorority upperclasswomen. It was proposed that active membership be limited only to second semester sophomores and first semester juniors. Senior Pleiads would become honorary members. The proposal would become effective next year.

Instead of rotating between the different sorority houses each month, the Pleiads had their meetings each month in the Union Cafeteria.

Each spring, Pleiades awards two scholarships to deserving women students on campus. Both the scholarship recipients and the new members were announced at the AWS Mass Meeting March 21.

Children in the Exchange Home are among those who benefit from projects of Pamarada, an honorary for independent upperclasswomen. Every year the organization goes Christmas caroling at the Exchange Home and treats the handicapped children to an Easter party. Pamarada also sponsored a tea in February to recognize scholarship among independent women.

At each of the monthly dinner meetings of Pamarada, a prominent faculty member spoke to the members. At one meeting, Dr. John T. Liell of the Department of Sociology discussed "The Problems of Alcohol."

The 40 members of Pamarada have cumulative averages of 1.8 and participate in many major activities.

Torch, Book, and Pyramid Depict Phi Eta Sigma

"I felt as though I had written an encyclopedia when I filled this blue book for the final examination."

The crest of Phi Eta Sigma, the scholastic honorary for freshman men, includes a torch and book to represent scholarship, a pyramid to symbolize health, and a gold star to signify character. These are linked together by a chain which symbolizes the unity of these three virtues and of the men who have attained them.

The honorary was founded with the purpose of promoting higher standards of learning and encouraging high scholastic attainment among freshman men. The Indiana University chapter and its female counterpart, Alpha Lambda Delta, the scholastic honorary for freshman women, distribute How to Study pamphlets to incoming freshmen early in the fall semester of each year.

Phi Eta Sigma recognizes freshman men who have a grade average of 2.5 or above. They are members of the honorary for life; however, the present group automatically becomes inactive when each new group of men is initiated at the Phi Eta Sigma-Alfa Lambda Delta spring banquet.

Alpha Lambda Delta Honors Freshman Scholars

A reception to recognize all freshman scholarship winners was given in the fall by Alpha Lambda Delta in co-operation with its male counterpart, Phi Eta Sigma.

Over two hundred freshmen attended the reception in the Georgian Room of the Union Building. Participants in the receiving line were faculty members of different departments with which freshmen particularly come into contact. Officers of Alpha Lambda Delta and Phi Eta Sigma and other University administrators from the Dean of Students office and from the Junior Division were also in the receiving line.

Alpha Lambda Delta is a national scholastic honorary for freshman women. To qualify for membership, a freshman woman must have a 2.5 average at the end of her first or second semester as a freshman.

Freshman women have the benefit of advice from Alpha Lambda Delta officers concerning study habits.

Enomene

The coed wearing the white pod with the green "E" on it is a member of Enomene, the activities honorary for sophomore women. Enomene, which means "united," is composed of sophomore women who are outstanding in leadership, service, and academic excellence. This year, as a new project, Enomene awarded two $100 scholarships to outstanding members of the organization.

Of the two Enomene meetings each month, the first is a business meeting, followed by a program covering such topics as "Religion in the 1960 Presidential Election." The second is a social meeting. Requirements for Enomene include a 1.8 cumulative average and participation in two major activities.

"Our Unique Indiana" was the theme of Pi Lambda Theta's programming this year. The theme was developed during monthly meetings through discussions which covered such diversified topics as the history of the state, its literary heritage, and recreational activities which are available in Indiana.

The organization is an honorary society for women connected with the field of education. Its prime membership requirement is outstanding scholarship. The I. U. chapter of Pi Lambda Theta, affiliated with the national society, has initiation dinners each January and May. The programs of these dinners illustrate the main objective of the organization—to further the role for women in education.

Alpha Delta Sigma

Field trips, special projects, and speakers from the advertising profession were a part of the efforts of Alpha Delta Sigma to bridge the gap between the field of advertising and advertising education in the universities. This year, members of the Vergil D. Head Chapter worked on publicity and promotion for "Penetration," a student television program. They also made plans to visit one of the major advertising agencies in Chicago.

During the year Alpha Delta Sigma met with the Marketing Club to hear speakers such as Henry Whiteside of the J. Walter Thompson Agency in Chicago. Through Alpha Delta Sigma, the members gain practical experience in their advertising education.

President Herman B Wells was one of the 11 men chosen for honorary membership in Alpha Kappa Psi last spring at the organization's special Silver Awards Banquet in celebration of its 25th anniversary. Altogether, these 11 men had contributed 355 years of service to the field of business.

Alpha Kappa Psi, consisting of business or economics majors with above-average scholastic standing, included on their project list this year philanthropic aid to the Stonebelt Council for Retarded Children and a blood drive for Riley Hospital.

The group's meetings included business sessions, educational films, and speakers from different phases of the business world.

Scabbard and Blade

Following a course planned by the members, pledges of Scabbard and Blade marched five miles into the country and made an offensive attack on defense posts set up by the actives. The mock war was conducted in the middle of night on snow-covered terrain. After the battle, aggressors and defenders had refreshments, providing a conventional ending to one of this military organization's unusual informal initiations.

An honorary society for Army ROTC cadets, Scabbard and Blade chooses its members on the basis of their performance on an oral examination before a four-member board. Members must also have a minimum 2.0 grade average in ROTC courses or a 1.5 cumulative grade average.

A display in Jordan Hall, a spring taffy sale as a pledge project, and a visit to the Indianapolis Medical Center were part of the activities of Alpha Delta Theta, a national honorary for women in the field of medical technology. Another project of the Alpha Delta Thetas was the editing of a biannual newsletter as a national service to their members. The organization also sponsored a money-making project and invited several members from the medical technology profession to speak at its meetings.

The new Division of Allied Health Sciences has been of special interest to this honorary since it includes medical technology in its courses of study. This new division will give prospective medical technologists a broader education with more electives.

Theta Sigma Phi

Dorothy Powers, the first woman to win the Ernie Pyle Award at Indiana University, spoke at the annual Matrix Table Dinner sponsored by Theta Sigma Phi on April 17. This professional journalism fraternity for women presented scholarships for a night school institute and an outstanding underclasswoman in journalism. They provided $50 worth of books for the Department of Journalism library. As part of their juvenile literature program, they distributed books to needy children in Bloomington.

October 17 was the date of a publicity clinic to acquaint publicity officers of campus organizations with the requirements and style of The Daily Student. Theta Sig also sponsored an honors mixer for women students who had outstanding academic records in the field of communications.

Eleven foreign students studying journalism at I. U. this year were initiated into Sigma Delta Chi, the professional journalistic society.

Also presented is the Big Wheel Award to a person other than a member of I. U.'s faculty or staff who has contributed most to the University. The Leather Medal Award is given to the person within the University who has made the greatest contribution.

On the night preceding Homecoming, Sigma Delta Chi sponsored the Blanket Hop in Alumni Hall to buy letter blankets for I. U.'s lettermen.

Army ROTC Program Stresses Leadership

Through a progressive training system which incorporates an academic approach, cadets at I. U. are aided in developing their leadership potential through a basic and advanced Army ROTC program. Military leadership is stressed to complement civilian leadership.

The aims of the ROTC program are to provide citizen leaders with a sound knowledge of military affairs, to instill basic military concepts which can be developed through further training, and to provide advanced instruction for selected cadets who may qualify for a commission in the U. S. Army.

During the basic course the cadets study a variety of subjects, ranging from the "Role of the Army" to "U. S. Military History." If selected for the advanced program, the cadet encounters challenging military decisions in leadership problems. Throughout the junior year, stress is placed upon principles and concepts. These theories are then put into practice at summer camp. In the senior year aspects of military law and command are studied.

Pershing Rifles 3rd Regimental Staff

The executive officers of the 3rd Regimental Staff attended a "Little Regimental Assembly" at Bloomington in October to discuss matters that would be brought before the National Assembly in New York City, October 13-16. They also made inspection trips to the 11 companies in Indiana, Illinois, Kentucky, and Michigan. The staff, which consists of officers of the Pershing Rifles A-Company 3, co-ordinates the activities of the 11 Pershing Rifles companies.

In April, the 3rd Regimental Assembly and Drill Meet was presented in the Fieldhouse, during which a coed reigned as honorary colonel. The best rifle team in the regiment was selected at the Regimental Postal Rifle Match in Bloomington during the winter.

Guarding the body of Jawn Purdue before his annual cremation is only one of the activities of the men of Pershing Rifles A-Company 3. During the year, these men also serve as guards for the various art displays on campus, such as the Thailand exhibit. At football games, they perform the flag-raising ceremony, and at basketball games they act as guides.

The activities of the organization have twin aims—to develop both military and social leadership qualities in the student and to complement the military requirements on campus.

The company maintains a crack drill team which competed with similar groups from 11 other Mid-western universities in April.

Arnold Air Society and Angel Flight Give Dance

Ralph Marterie and his orchestra played for the annual Military Ball, the most important joint project of Arnold Air Society and Angel Flight this year.

Arnold Air Society, the James L. Correll Squadron at I. U., is an honorary organization for Air Force ROTC cadets. Many of its projects, such as the Military Ball, are conducted in co-operation with its auxiliary, Angel Flight, whose membership is made up of women chosen for their scholastic records and willingness to participate.

Arnold Air Society members are high-ranking, advanced AFROTC cadets and basic cadets. A two-week pledge period was followed by formal initiation in February. Members met twice a month to further the projects and goals of the AFROTC on campus, the Civil Air Patrol, and the Air Boy Scouts.

The women of Angel Flight, organized with the purpose of helping to promote interest in the U. S. Air Force and AFROTC, sponsored several philanthropic projects similar to their Christmas clothing drive for needy families.

Tickets go fast as members of Angel Flight and Arnold Air Society persuade the campus to come to the Military Ball.

Tau Beta Sigma

The name of the recipient of the outstanding member award given by the I. U. chapter of Tau Beta Sigma, the national honorary sorority for bandwomen, was engraved on a gold plaque which hangs in the band department. Chosen on the basis of her scholarship and musical ability, she was honored at the combined concert of the symphonic, concert, and varsity bands during the spring.

In conjunction with Kappa Kappa Psi, the honorary band fraternity, Tau Beta Sigma sponsored receptions following the Michigan State University and Marquette University football games. Guests at these receptions were members of the visiting bands from M. S. U. and Marquette. The women of the sorority also served as hostesses and guides for visiting high school band members on Band Day in the fall.

Working towards a master's degree in music on the I. U. campus this year was a girl from Silliman University, located in the Philippine Islands. She was sponsored by Mu Phi Epsilon. The national music sorority also helps sponsor the Gads Hill Center in Chicago, where underprivileged children study music.

Activities of the local chapter during the year included a Christmas candy sale in the Music Building and the selling of concessions at the operas presented in East Hall. The members sponsor pledge recitals and distribute programs at other members' recitals.

Mu Phi Epsilon, a national organization for women in music, promotes musicianship and scholarship by requiring a 2.0 average of the pledges and a pledge recital for each new member.

Phi Mu Alpha Sinfonia

President Herman B Wells and Wilfred C. Bain, Dean of the School of Music, were initiated into Phi Mu Alpha Sinfonia this year as life-time honorary members at a banquet in the Frangipani Room. Members are music majors or music school faculty.

George Gaber, a former NBC drummer who is now with the School of Music, spoke at one of the biweekly meetings of the fraternity. Other speakers were Josef Gingold, a recognized violinist who joined the School of Music this year, and Ronald D. Gregory, director of the Marching Hundred.

Phi Mu Alpha Sinfonia sponsored the School of Music Jazz Band which played for Rhythm Room in the Commons Friday and Saturday nights.

Proceeds from the coat-check service operated at the I. U. Opera Theatre by Sigma Alpha Iota are used each year to award a grant to a deserving member of the organization. On a national basis, the Sigma Alpha Iota Foundation also provided funds to increase an interest in music throughout the world.

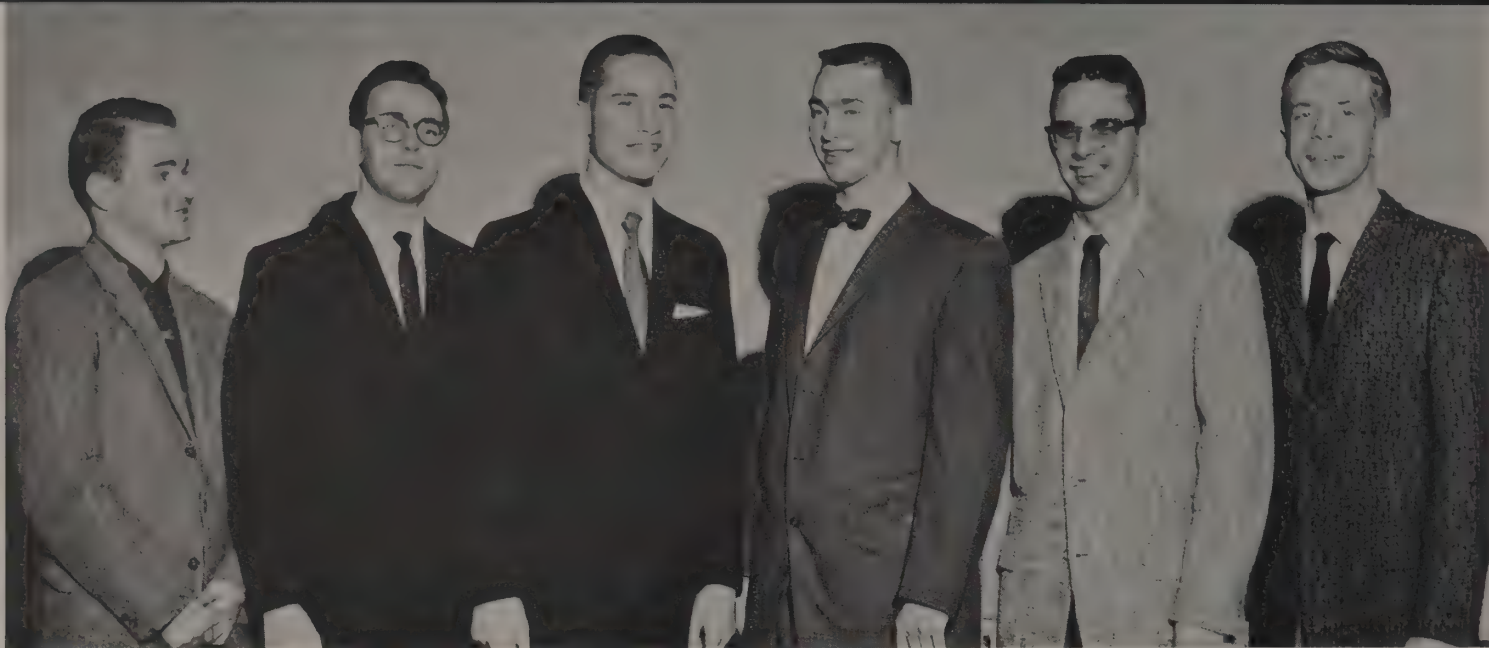

The women's national professional music fraternity endeavors to increase the professional outlook and to improve the musicianship of its members. SAI membership consists of music majors or minors nominated by the faculty on the basis of their excellence in music. Each member must have a cumulative grade average of 2.0.

Alpha Chi Sigma

Tutoring sessions for freshmen in chemistry were offered as a service during the year by Alpha Chi Sigma, a fraternity open to upperclassman chemistry majors with better than a 2.0 cumulative average in chemistry. The aim of Alpha Chi Sigma is to provide its members with personal contact with others who share an interest in chemistry and, in general, to promote the advancement of the chemical profession.

During the year the organization invited prominent guest speakers in various fields of chemistry to address their group. A new pledge class is initiated into Alpha Chi Sigma every spring. Meetings once each month are to conduct fraternity business and to discuss other subjects of interest to members.

Visiting bands at I. U.'s home football games attended informal receptions sponsored by Kappa Kappa Psi in conjunction with Tau Beta Sigma. The Marching Hundred Banquet in the Frangipani Room honored the outstanding bandmen of the concert and marching bands. A pep band from the music fraternity accompanied children from Hoosier Courts as they trick-or-treated at Halloween.

In September the Kappa Kappa Psis presented a party for incoming freshman band members. The purpose of the party was to introduce the new members to the fraternity, which is composed of students who are enrolled in at least their third semester of bandwork and who have above average ability.

Lambda Alpha Epsilon

An FBI official, the Chief of Police of Bloomington, Indiana State Police officers, and faculty members of the Department of Police Administration explained their work to the members of Lambda Alpha Epsilon, a national police administration fraternity. The members are either fulltime law enforcement officers or students in police administration.

An extensive physical fitness program with instruction in judo and a series of firearms information were also part of the yearly activities. In addition, the members acted both as officials and participants in the Indiana University Colt-Combat match. LAE members completing the firearms program were awarded certificates by the National Rifle Association.

Presenting special contemporary drama readings this year for the first time, Theta Alpha Phi, the national theatre honorary, attempted to broaden the experience of I. U. "theatre-goers." Members of the honorary also cosponsor the Homecoming Variety Show each fall and operate the cloak room for all Little Theatre productions. Faculty members were invited to view the group's private showing of Shakespeare's Richard II and to attend a coffee hour following the film.

The purposes of Theta Alpha Phi, which requires members to have had a leading role in at least three I. U. theatre productions, are to increase interest in the allied arts and crafts of the theatre.

Sigma Theta Taus Play Cards for Scholarships

A formal banquet is given for the new initiates of Sigma Theta Tau in May.

Proceeds from an annual card party are used for the scholarship fund of Sigma Theta Tau, the only national honorary society for nursing in the United States. Recipients of the scholarships are students in the nursing programs of Indiana University.

The four regular meetings during the academic year emphasize the goals of Sigma Theta Tau—promoting high professional standards, fostering creative work, and emphasizing the importance of scientific research in nursing.

Initiation for new members of Alpha Chapter of the honorary is in May at a formal banquet. Candidates for membership are selected from the basic professional nursing program leading to a baccalaureate degree, full-time graduate nursing students enrolled in programs leading to the baccalaureate degree with a major in nursing, and nurses enrolled in graduate study leading to the master's degree in nursing.

In 1922 students in nursing in Indianapolis conceived the idea of a national honorary society in nursing and established the sole nursing honorary.

Omega Delta

An annual book sale at the Indiana Optometrists Association's convention is one of the major fund raising projects of Nu Chapter of Omega Delta, national optometry honorary. The organization obtains the books, which deal with optometry, from the University.

Omega Delta this year is attempting to form an alumni association of all Indiana optometry graduates. When the alumni group is established, it will include a majority of the professional optometrists in the state.

The group participates in the functions of the School of Optometry such as the "Eyeball" dance and the school's softball league.

"Eyeball" was the theme of the formal banquet and dance, cosponsored by Omega Epsilon Phi, at the Bloomington Country Club this year. The organization also challenged the OEPhi chapters from the Ohio State University and Illinois College of Optometry to softball games. The annual pledge dance took place at the Van Orman-Graham Hotel.

New members are elected to this international optometry honorary by popular vote of all chapter members who are in good standing. Practicing optometrists from Bloomington and the School of Dentistry spoke at spring meetings of the organization to acquaint members with the practice and problems encountered by the professional optometrist.

Omicron Delta

During a field trip to the L. S. Ayres department store in Indianapolis, Omicron Delta, honorary business fraternity for women, was able to study large department store management. The honorary also presented the skit for Academy Awards, the School of Business' recognition day.

Omicron Delta members must be juniors or seniors in the School of Business with cumulative averages of over 1.5. Meetings center around faculty members, the business people of Bloomington, and Omicron Delta members, who speak on the opportunities for women in business to stimulate leadership aspiration among future business women.

In November delegates from Alpha Pi Chapter of Delta Sigma Pi attended the Regional Convention in Dayton, Ohio, and in April they visited U. S. Steel in Gary, Indiana.

The international fraternity is open to students in commerce and business administration who have over a 1.5 cumulative grade average and who pass standards set by the active chapter.

Such men as Dr. Karl Bethge, head of Germany's Productivity Center, and Joseph T. Bevan, Personnel Director of William S. Merrill, spoke to the group during the year. Their talks centered around commerce in the business world and job placement.

Accounting Club Largest in School of Business

Approximately 165 undergraduate and graduate students comprise the membership of the I. U. Accounting Club, making it the largest organization in the School of Business. The objective of the group, to further the interest of the student in accounting and related business functions, was achieved through guest speakers. In its seven monthly meetings, the club heard informative talks given by a number of outstanding business leaders. At the opening meetings of the year, Accounting Club members were introduced to the faculty of the department and heard a panel discussion with three club members who had spent a summer internship in accounting. They also took a field trip to one of the state industries. Plans were made for a three-day field trip to one of the larger companies in either Chicago or Detroit next year.

All members of this organization automatically become associate members in the American Accounting Association. They receive a free subscription to the Accounting Review.

The main project of the group this year was the annual spring management clinic for students, faculty, and business leaders. The program included speakers in industry and a panel discussion of a current strategic area in management.

"Industrial progress through enlightened management" is the slogan of SAM, the professional management organization representing all management activities up to the national scope.

Finance Club

Ten thousand hypothetical dollars were deposited by each of the members of Finance Club as they played the stock investment game. At the end of the year, the member who had made the biggest killing received a reward for his financial genius. Open discussions at their meetings twice a month centered around their investments and what they learned from them.

La Salle Street in Chicago with its famed financial institutions was visited by Finance Club members during spring vacation. Representatives of these banks and brokerage firms took them on specially guided tours to explain each of the various operations.

Academy Awards Day, a day for recognizing scholarships and bogus virtues of students and faculty, was sponsored this spring by the Senior Class Board of Directors of the School of Business.

The board, which consists of 12 seniors elected by the students in the School of Business and of two juniors and one sophomore member appointed by the senior members, acts as an intermediary between students and faculty in the school. Its purpose is to help both students and faculty and to increase the prestige of the School of Business in any way possible. To that end it publishes The Collegian, the newsletter of the School of Business.

Psi Omega Largest National Dental Fraternity

The largest national dental fraternity in the United States, Psi Omega now has 35 active chapters. The fraternity was founded in 1892 by William Sprigg Hamilton of Georgia at the Baltimore College of Dental Surgery.

Located directly across from the Indiana University Medical Center in Indianapolis, Psi Omega's fraternity house provides living facilities for 20 single dental students. The building also has a dental laboratory for its occupants to use for out-of-class experimentation.

The social program of Psi Omega is designed to offer its 60 members a chance to relax without interfering with the students' academic standing. Monthly events include business meetings, a chapter dance, and special events meetings with guest speakers from the dental field. At the Senior Banquet and Farewell, given twice each year, graduating senior members of the fraternity are honored. Faculty members and Psi Omega alumni are invited to participate in the annual Christmas dinner and dance.

Delta Sigma Delta House Has Dental Laboratory

A well-equipped dental laboratory for members to use for out-of-class work is an important part of the facilities of Delta Sigma Delta. The national professional dental fraternity's Xi Chapter at the Indiana University Medical Center in Indianapolis provides living quarters for unmarried dental students as well as a focal point for social functions for all of its 105 members. They are one of four such dental groups on the Med Center campus.

Delta Sigma Delta is the oldest national dental fraternity in the United States and also constitutes one of the largest organized fraternal groups of dentists in existence.

Each year the fraternity has a traditional Hawaiian Dance and a Sadie Hawkins Dance. Other major social events of the past year were the Election Ball, the "Pajama Game" dance, and a Delta Sig-sponsored golf tournament.

Educational speakers from the dental profession are invited to attend the fraternity's meetings. These programs are utilized to acquaint members with recent advancements in the field of dentistry.

Xi Psi Phi

A chapter house with a fully equipped dental laboratory and recreational facilities are provided for the members of Xi Psi Phi, a professional dental fraternity in Indianapolis. Members of the fraternity sponsor two social events each month. Before the State Dental Association meeting in June, Xi Psi Phi gave their annual dinner dance for alumni.

Theta Chapter of Xi Psi Phi was founded in Indianapolis in 1893 and now includes 843 alumni all over the United States. Its purpose—to promote high ideals among members of the dental profession—is reflected in the motto of the fraternity, “Hospitality is the Life of Friendship.”

“Management and the Coed” was the topic of a speech given by a Michigan State University home economics professor at the state meeting of home economics clubs. Ten members of I. U.’s club attended. A new International Scholarship Chairman was chosen from the delegation. Her job will entail soliciting money from all the chapters to be used to sponsor a foreign student at an American university.

Members of the Home Economics Club served at the Borden Award Desert honoring the girl with the highest scholastic average in home economics. The club, in conjunction with AWS, presented an etiquette show for I. U. coeds.

The fall blood drive of the Red Cross Bloodmobile was sponsored by Cresset Club in co-operation with Tomahawk, independent scholastic and activities honorary. Primarily a social organization for registered nurses who are working for a college degree, Cresset Club also includes as associate members students who are enrolled in the School of Nursing.

At the first and last meetings of the year, the Marketing Club had coffee hours with faculty members of the Department of Marketing. The Marketing Club is part of a national organization affiliated with the American Marketing Association.

The club met monthly to hear guest speakers from the marketing and sales aspects of business. Wendell Smith, vice-president of market planning for RCA; Henry Whiteside, vice-president of the Chicago division of the J. Walter Thompson Agency, and Al Seares, past vice-president of sales for the Remington-Rand Company, were among the national business leaders who addressed the meetings.

Nurses' Executive Council

A Student-Faculty Association with supervisory powers delegated to the Nurses' Executive Council was created this year when the student nurses reorganized their form of student government.

Stationery and sweatshirts were sold by the Association to prospective student nurses in Bloomington as well as nurses at the Medical Center.

Formerly called Nurses' Student Council, the Executive Council is now responsible for transacting Association business between regular meetings. Organized in 1945, the Student-Faculty government is now directed by the Council's four officers, two representatives from each class, and the faculty advisers.

Enthusiasm for "Hoosier Hysteria" reigned as the girls of the School of Nursing in Indianapolis cheered their team on to victory in the city-wide Student Nurses' Basketball Tournament in January. The team participated in pre-tournament contests with girls' basketball teams from Butler University, Indiana Central College, Marion College, and Indiana University.

Open to student nurses, in all classes the organization of basketball teams also sponsored a tournament within the three classes at the Medical Center.

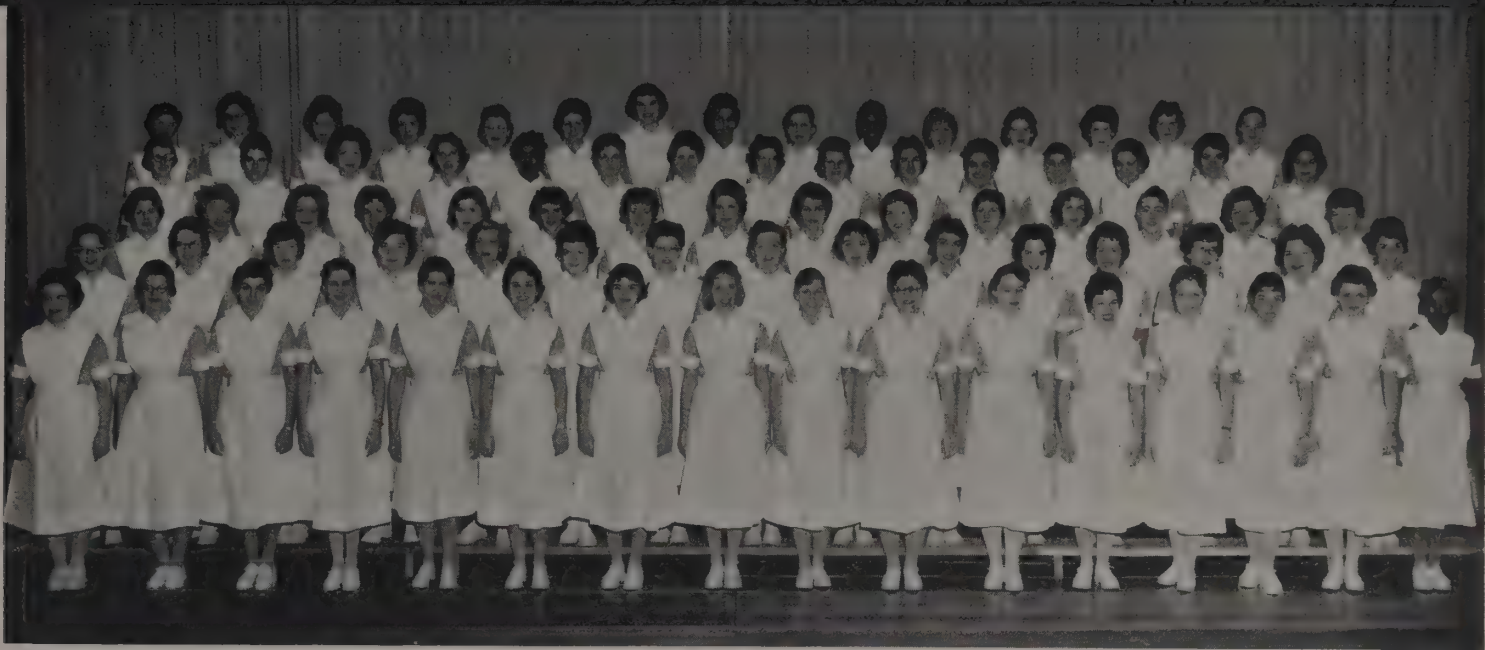

The basketball teams also meet socially with other groups of student nurses.

The coveted cap received at the impressive capping ceremony at the end of their first semester at the Medical Center is incentive for hard work and achievement among the Sophomore Class Nurses. The class' outside activities are concentrated during the Christmas season when the sophomores raise money for gifts for the Indiana Girls' School and sponsor a drive for clothes, toys, and food for a needy family in Indianapolis.

"G. I. Jive," a variety show sponsored in November by the Junior Class Nurses, featured amateur acts by representatives from the entire Medical Center campus. Proceeds from this money-making project financed the annual banquet given in May by the junior class in honor of the graduating seniors. In honor of their sophomore "little sisters," the juniors presented a capping celebration.

The juniors took psychiatric nursing at either Central State Hospital or Larue Carter Hospital, three months of both pediatric and maternity nursing, and one month each of operating room duty, communicable disease nursing, and outpatient duty.

Speech and Hearing Club

After receiving its new charter during the second semester of the year, a former campus organization, the Speech and Hearing Club, became a chapter of Sigma Alpha Eta, a national organization for those interested in speech pathology and hearing therapy. The major purpose of the group is to stimulate growth of the students' interest in the field. All members of the organization work either at the Speech Clinic or at the Exchange Home as a part of their plan of study, but the club does not plan this work.

Throughout the year professors from speech pathology, hearing therapy, and related fields come from other universities to discuss research projects or particular facets of their special areas.

Indianapolis was the setting of the 14th annual Social Service Field Day. After visiting agencies, members of the I. U. Social Service Club and representatives from other Indiana colleges heard panel discussions conducted by social service employees.

Early in the fall a mixer for students interested in social service work was given at the International House.

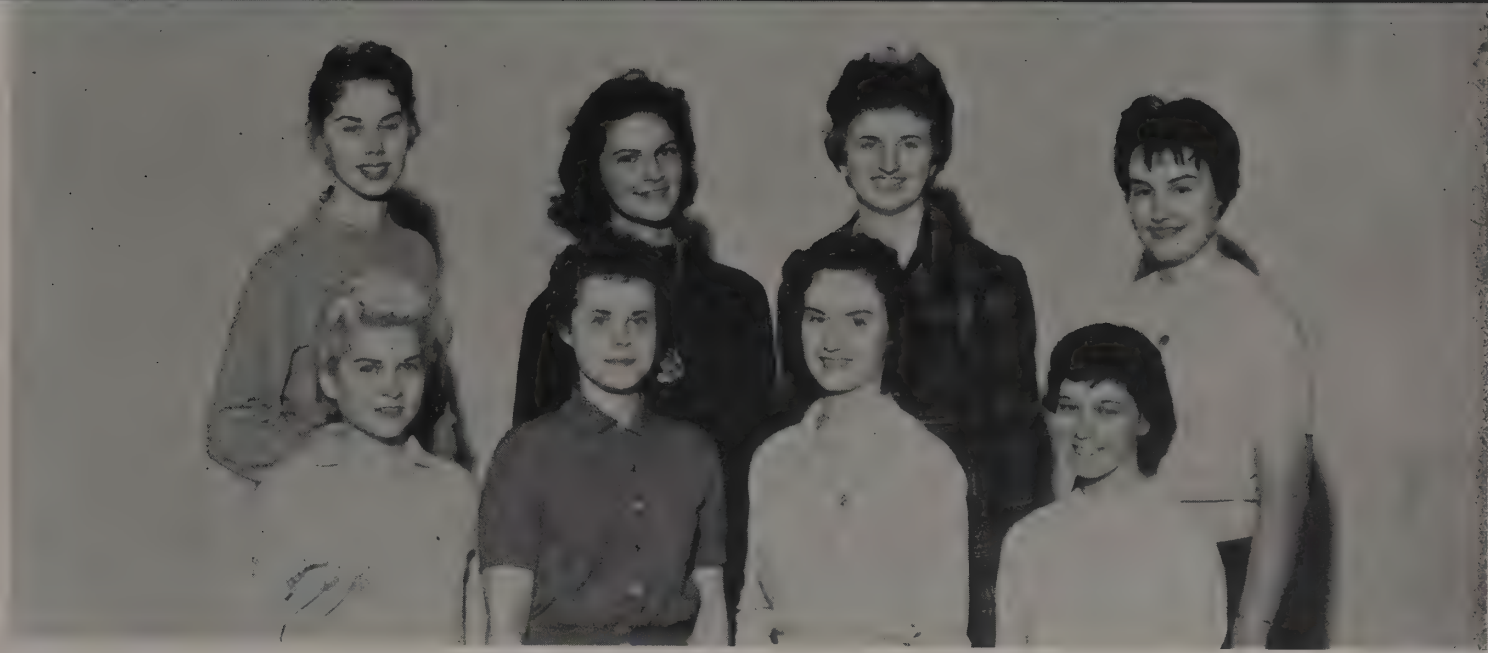

An officer of the U. S. Children's Bureau gave a speech on juvenile delinquency at one of the meetings. At another, Mary H. Houk, director of the Division of Social Service in Indianapolis, explained the graduate school's requirements for admission and scholarships available for graduate study.

Contest Alumni On Campus

Planning for the annual State High School Achievement Contest and helping to entertain the participants and arrange for their housing constitutes the main functions of Contest Alumni on Campus. These contests, which take place in the spring at I. U., are for the regional winners from the entire state in areas of English, Spanish, Latin and mathematics. The winners of the state contest are grouped on the basis of their scores into first, second, third place, and honorable mention, and they are awarded gold, silver, and bronze medals. Every student attending Indiana University who has participated in a regional or state contest is automatically a member of Contest Alumni on Campus.

Money received from the advertising in the notebook dividers distributed by Alpha Phi Omega at fall enrollment financed the fraternity's scholarships awarded to incoming freshmen. In addition to providing the folders, Mu Chapter of Alpha Phi Omega, national service fraternity, officiated at campus elections in cooperation with the Student Election Committee, worked with the local Boy Scout Council, and supervised the fraternity's national project, the Vick's Care Crusade, in the Bloomington area.

Service—to the campus, to the community, and to the country—is the main objective of the fraternity. The only requirement for membership is a past connection with the Boy Scouts of America.

Oceanides

"L'Esprit de Couleur," a veritable rainbow of swimmers, took over the swimming pool in the Fieldhouse addition for two days in April. The extravaganza of synchronized swimming was the culmination of a year's work by Oceanides, an honorary for Indiana's mermaids. The show, presented for the entire campus, featured several numbers interpreting the vari-

Although the weekly meetings of Oceanides were concentrated on the show in April, the group also participated in other activities including swimming meets with other universities and a symposium at the University of Illinois.

The bowler's dream of a perfect game and competition for the league championship keep Strikettes' members trying to "hit the pocket" one afternoon each week in the Union Bowling Alley. At the end of each semester, the most improved bowler, the bowler with the highest average, and each member of the team with the highest average are honored at the Strikettes Awards Banquet.

The top ten bowlers are entered each year in the National Telegraphic Bowling Tournament. Strikettes is open to all undergraduate and graduate women who bowl an average of 90 for two games.

Association For Childhood Education

One of the underprivileged schools of Monroe County benefited by the work of the Association of Childhood Education this year. The organization, which is composed of elementary education majors, other students interested in the education of children, and teachers already actively engaged in the profession, instituted art and science workshops and a social studies curriculum in one of the classes of a local elementary school.

Throughout the year, programs including guest speakers on various aspects of the educational field were sponsored by the organization.

Delegates from each education class were elected to attend the Undergraduate Leadership Conference of the Student National Education Association. It was an all-day affair in the Union designed to bring the students and faculty of the School of Education closer together and to make known student suggestions for the improvement of their school. Among the speakers were Deans Samuel E. Braden and Robert H. Schaffer.

At Christmas, carols were sung in both English and Portuguese when the group invited the Brazilian exchange students to a party.

Alpha Epsilon Delta

Each year the outstanding student preparing for a medical career at Indiana University is presented an award by Alpha Epsilon Delta, national premedical honorary, at a mass meeting of all medical students. In addition to presenting this award, the organization strives to keep members informed of recent developments in the medical field. They also attempt to improve student-faculty communication by inviting faculty members to meetings throughout the year as guest speakers.

A cumulative average of 2.0 and faculty recommendation are the requirements for membership in the honorary. Each year after initiation, new members attend a banquet given in their honor.

"Eyeball" was the appropriate name for the annual dance cosponsored by the Eat and Speak Club, an organization open to all students in the Division of Optometry. At the weekly meetings of the organization, several members gave speeches, which were critically evaluated by other members. In this manner, they were able to help members gain proficiency in public speaking so as to aid them later in their private practices.

Each fall the Eat and Speak Club cosponsors a reception with Omega Psi Epsilon to orientate new optometry students. Club members also meet with students from the University of Illinois in the fall and the Ohio State University students in the spring.

Debate Team

"Resolved: That the United States should adopt a compulsory health insurance program for all its citizens." This was the national debate topic prepared this year by all college teams including Indiana University's team.

The I. U. Debate Team was host to 17 Midwestern schools and the University of Toronto at the 15th annual Hoosier Debate Tournament in February. A two-member team represented each side of the proposition, and the total number of victories accumulated by both members decided the winning team.

Any student interested in debate is eligible to audition for positions on the varsity and novice teams.

Traveling to regattas and serving as host to several meets, the I. U. Sailing Club was very active during the past year. The club traveled to the University of Notre Dame, Detroit, Annapolis, Depauw University, and Ohio Wesleyan University. They were host to the I. U.-Purdue duel. Sailing activity begins in the fall and is resumed early in the spring each year.

The club's boats number seven: five Tech Dinghys, one Finn (a boat which was sailed in the Olympic eliminations last fall), and one ice boat. The boats are kept in the Sailing Club boathouse at Beachwood Heights on Lake Lemon. Two major awards were presented during the Union Awards Banquet—Best Skipper Award and Most Improved Skipper Award.

Union Board Co-ordinates Myriad Activities

Co-ordinating and directing the myriad activities of the newly remodeled and expanded Union were responsibilities of the Union Board. Within the Union itself, the three student officers and nine board members individually took charge of such activities as the Festival of Arts. The Festival's theme this year was "City of Arts." Daily exhibitions and programs provided cultural opportunities to view the fine and applied arts.

Student Activities Night was co-sponsored with student government to present an opportunity for the students to become acquainted with Union activities.

Financially, the biggest project of the Union was

The Recreation Council was responsible for organizing intramural and intercollegiate tournaments and for publicizing the recreational facilities of the Union. The council also supervised the picnicking and swimming program at the Beechwood Heights facilities on Lake Lemon which are owned by the Union. Working with the School of Health, Physical Education, and Recreation, the council sponsored recreation nights in the Student Building on Fridays.

Foundation "Helps Those Who Help Themselves"

By awarding Little 500 scholarships, the Student Foundation Committee attempts "to help those who help themselves." Each year the committee gives scholarships to students who have high academic standings and who have part-time jobs to help finance their education. Profits from the 1960 Little 500 weekend, which was sponsored by the Student Foundation Committee, provided scholarships for 141 students.

The committee, the student counterpart of the I. U. Foundation, consists of juniors and seniors chosen by William Armstrong, executive director of the Foundation. They are selected on the basis of their past activities and interest in the Little 500.

The Little 500 weekend began in May 1951 with a bicycle race patterned after the famous 500 Mile Race in Indianapolis to earn funds for the Foundation's scholarship program. Activities during the weekend include the Golf Jamboree, Miniature 500, and Extravaganza on Friday and the Little 500 race and Variety Show on Saturday.

Marcia Hoelscher, Frank McKinney, and William S. Armstrong are the "big wheels" in Little 500 activities.

YWCA Helps Set I. U. Sing Dates in March

The YWCA office maintains a file about the committee participation of its 700 members.

"Where the Songs Are" was the theme of the 1961 I. U. Sing, March 3 and 4, sponsored by the YWCA and the YMCA. The "Y" has been a cosponsor of the Sing since it was originated during Commencement weekend in 1929. This year the sponsors set the dates in March rather than in May so that the Sing would not interfere with spring finals and more housing units would be able to participate.

With one of the most extensive and varied programs on campus, the YWCA offers a rich program of activities for the many women who are members. Each year the various committees into which the "Y" is organized, under the leadership of the officers and cabinet members, sponsor such all-campus activities as Freshman Camp and Student Orientation Week. A non-denominational campus-wide Thanksgiving Observance was a new and unique program instituted this year by members of the Christian Heritage Commission. Chimes of Christmas, a musical holiday program, was again presented by the YWCA in co-operation with the School of Music.

YWCA Active in Community Service Projects

Bloomington charities and philanthropic endeavors are aided by the efforts of the women who are members of the Community Service Commission. Many hours of volunteer time are given each week to the Exchange Home, the Cerebral Palsy Nursery, Girl Scouts, and the Christian Center.

Within the organization itself, the weekly cabinet meetings are not only organizational in nature, but they also provide learning opportunities for cabinet members. Programs include national issues such as prejudice and religious problems which affect college men and women.

The Freshman Commission, which gives to the dormitories a system of Live Y'ers, or membership co-ordinators, brings housing units into closer contact with the YWCA cabinet. Working with the Association of Women Students, the YWCA also sponsors Townettes, an organization for town women and women who commute. Through their membership co-ordinator and YWCA advisers, the members become more closely associated with campus activities.

The "Intercollegian," published by the YWCA, contains coverage of national "Y" projects.

YMCA Helps Back Freshman Orientation Week

The YMCA Cabinet, the executive body of the group, meets regularly to plan and discuss 'Y' activities.

Freshman Camp and the other activities connected with Freshman Orientation Week were again sponsored this year by the YMCA, along with the YWCA. Freshman Camp, at McCormick's Creek, set the fast pace for the week which included individual counseling as well as group programs introducing new students to all facets of University life. "Y" members and other upperclassmen served as student leaders to guide the freshmen through the week.

"Y" members also worked together to publish the Redbook, a student and campus directory, and to sponsor the I. U. Sing. The Sing on March 3 and 4 brought campus housing units together in tuneful competition. The "Y" also cosponsored the Chimes of Christmas.

YMCA community projects include Hi-Y clubs in the Bloomington junior high schools, high schools, and in the Exchange Home. Through these projects and services, the YMCA works toward developing a wholesome University community and furthering Christian leadership in campus and community life.

Organized Party Wins a Majority of Offices

Officers of the Organized Party, elected at the annual spring party caucus, have as their main duty the co-ordination of class elections and student body elections each spring. "Vote Organized—Vote Qualified" was the party slogan used in the 1960 spring elections. After their vigorous campaign, the Organized Party secured the sophomore, junior, and senior officers' slates, the freshman class vice-presidency, and a majority of senatorial seats. Organized Party members were also appointed to cabinet positions by the President of the Student Body. The platform which determined Organized Party policy had its main emphasis on educational development and student government studies in the academic situation. The platform consisted of five major planks: educational development, student welfare, human rights, athletics, and student government.

Among members of the party are the members of the 51 sororities and fraternities on campus. In determining policies, the party consults representatives from all organized housing units.

AWS Extends Women's Week Day Hours to 11 p.m.

Patty Brogneaux, Bonnie Becker, Bonnita Richards (president), and Ann McGarvey plan a revision of women's hours.

Women's hours were revised this year, and library closing hours were extended through the efforts of the Association of Women Students' Legislative Board. After conducting a poll among women students, the board voted to accept 11 p.m. hours on Sunday through Thursday, replacing 10:30 p.m. hours on Sunday, Monday, Tuesday, and Thursday and 11:30 p.m. hours on Wednesday. Friday and Saturday hours remained 12:30 a.m.

The Legislative Board, made up of representatives from Panhellenic Association, the Inter-Residence Halls Assembly, and Townettes, is one division of the Association of Women Students under its new constitution. The other divisions are the Program and Judicial Boards. The Program Board consists of educational, cultural, and social development. Under the direction of the AWS vice-president, the board sponsored the Marriage Series, the Speakers' Series, the Rush Etiquette Style Show, and various displays throughout the year. I. U. was host school for the Intercollegiate AWS State Meeting. At the AWS Mass Meeting, March 21, recognition was given to outstanding women students, and officers for women's groups were elected.

The third major area of emphasis is the Judicial Workshop, which planned programs to explain the "whys" behind regulations and acquainted members with the nature of judicial problems.

AWS members were invited to several meetings to hear Judicial Board members explain their work.

Independence Party

After capturing the post of President of the Student Body last spring, the Independence Party also succeeded in winning almost half the seats in the Student Senate. The office of freshman class president was also won by a member of the Independence Party.

Securing special bus service to football and basketball games was among the accomplishments of the party this year. Under the direction of Tom Atkins, the party added two new posts to the President's Cabinet, the Department of Traffic Affairs and the Secretary of External Affairs, which will co-ordinate student activities outside the University.

Other goals were a two-day book reserve in the library, rather than a one-day reserve, and better playgrounds for married students' children.

A three-way basketball tournament between Zeta Beta Tau, Sigma Alpha Mu, and Alpha Epsilon Pi fraternities and a dance in the Frangipani Room were added this year to the traditional Hillel Stunt Show to inaugurate the first annual Hillel Weekend. The Stunt Show, annually sponsored by the Hillel Foundation, is a competition between sororities and fraternities, who stage skits and song medleys. The winning production was presented with the traveling trophy.

Hillel, I. U.'s organization for Jewish youth, sponsors various programs each year for the cultural, spiritual, and social development of its members. Hillel members co-ordinated the High Holidays services in Whittenberger Auditorium and the weekly Friday night and Saturday morning religious services.

Wesley Foundation

At an open house during Orientation Week, new students were invited to join one of three different study groups offered by Wesley Foundation, the Methodist student organization on campus. The economic, social, and civil rights in Bloomington group studied Bloomington's political legislation. The Christian church in tropical Africa group studied the role of the church in modern Africa's social and political upheavals. The life and thought of St. Augustine group concerned itself with St. Augustine's writings. The group also had regular Sunday coffee hours, classes, and programs.

The Wesley Foundation sponsors the Wesley Players, a dramatic group which produces two plays for the campus each semester.

Revising the constitution and enlarging the scope of the organization were the major projects of Protestant Student Council this year. Because the council has been enlarged to include faculty members, staff from the various religious foundations, and graduate students, the group will change its name to the Protestant Campus Council. Formerly the council was composed of representatives from six religious foundations on campus, the YWCA, and the YMCA.

The council conducted work camps at Craigmont State Hospital at Madison, Muscatatuck State School at Butlerville, and Howell House in Chicago. The Monroe County Council of Churches annually receives assistance from the council in conducting service projects throughout the county.

Campus Christians Help Reconstruct Houses

Campus Christians find time for informal discussions.

One Saturday of each month, members of the Campus Christian Association devoted their time to the Bloomington Christian Center by helping in the reconstruction of houses. In the same way they took part in the Protestant Student Council Workcamp. The organization also sent 25 members to the Ecumenical Workcamp in Chicago, January 21-25.

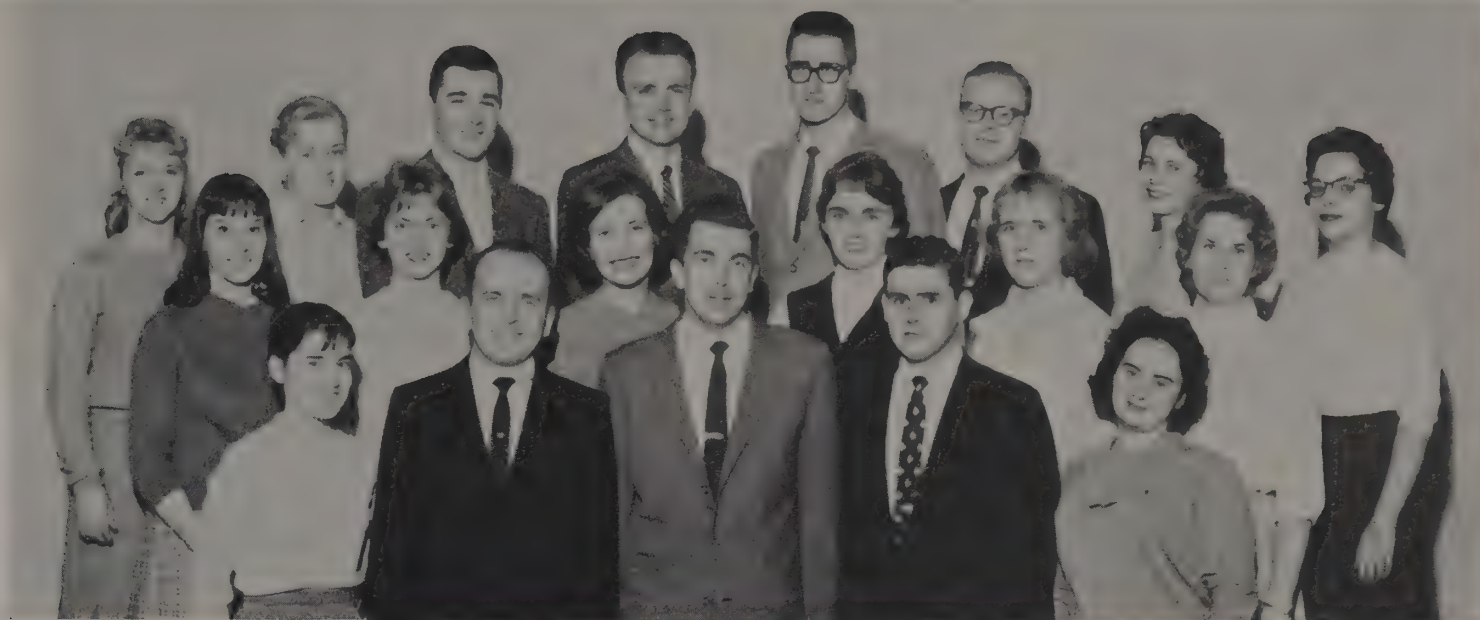

University personnel spoke at the Wednesday evening meetings to members of the association at the Campbell House. Study sessions and midweek workshop services were also conducted there. Members of the association were divided into three groups according to their class standing: married students, undergraduate students, and graduate students.

Promoting churchmanship and fellowship among I. U. students are two purposes of the Campus Christian Association. Director of the organization is Jack Smith, assistant minister of the First Christian Church of Bloomington. He is also director of the Campus Ministers of Christian Churches in Indiana.

Christian Science Organization

A sales campaign this year for the Christian Science Monitor was one of the major activities of the Christian Science Student Organization. Receptions were repeated to enable the new members to become acquainted with the ideals and aims of the organization. At the annual lecture sponsored by the group, J. Hamilton Lewis spoke on "Peace and Security." As a service to those interested in Christian Science, the organization placed marked copies of their textbooks, the Bible, and Health and Science in Beck Chapel.

The purpose of the organization is to offer the members of the campus community the opportunity to become acquainted with Christian Science.

Daily sacraments are given to those students who find it impossible to attend the Catholic church on East Third Street as a service of the Newman Club.

Placing importance upon religious activities, members conduct theology courses, as well as the sacraments, in the club's large recreation-chapel building near campus. Two of the speakers for the theology course this year were Father William Brennan C. S. C. from Notre Dame and Father Charles Koster from Indianapolis. These men endeavored to give the Newman Club members insight into their faith.

The Newman Club also circulated a newsletter, conducted a marriage preparation course, and sponsored social events for Catholic students on campus.

Cosmopolitan Club

Native dances and songs were a part of the program presented March 10 by members of the Cosmopolitan Club during the LUNA sessions on campus. Members of the club, including students from 72 countries, also sponsored an exhibit of personal articles such as clothing, jewelry, and metal work which they had brought with them. The students were present at the exhibit in the Indiana Memorial Union to explain the articles and to discuss their countries with visitors.

The Cosmopolitan Club is devoted to promoting understanding between students from many countries by comparing social, political, and cultural views. The club has weekly mixers at the International Center and sponsors the annual International Dinner.

The preparation of the Thai exhibit and briefing of the delegation to the Little United Nations Assembly were two of the major activities of the Thai Association on campus. The group also sponsored programs in response to requests from service organizations, fraternal organizations, and churches.

Two or three receptions each year at the Westminster Foundation provided farewells and welcomes for Thai students entering the University for the first time or leaving for their home country after participation in the Thai government project here. The Thai Association attempts to unite all the Thai students on campus through these receptions to which they also invite faculty members, friends, and their respective advisers.

Daily Student Coverage Results from Teamwork

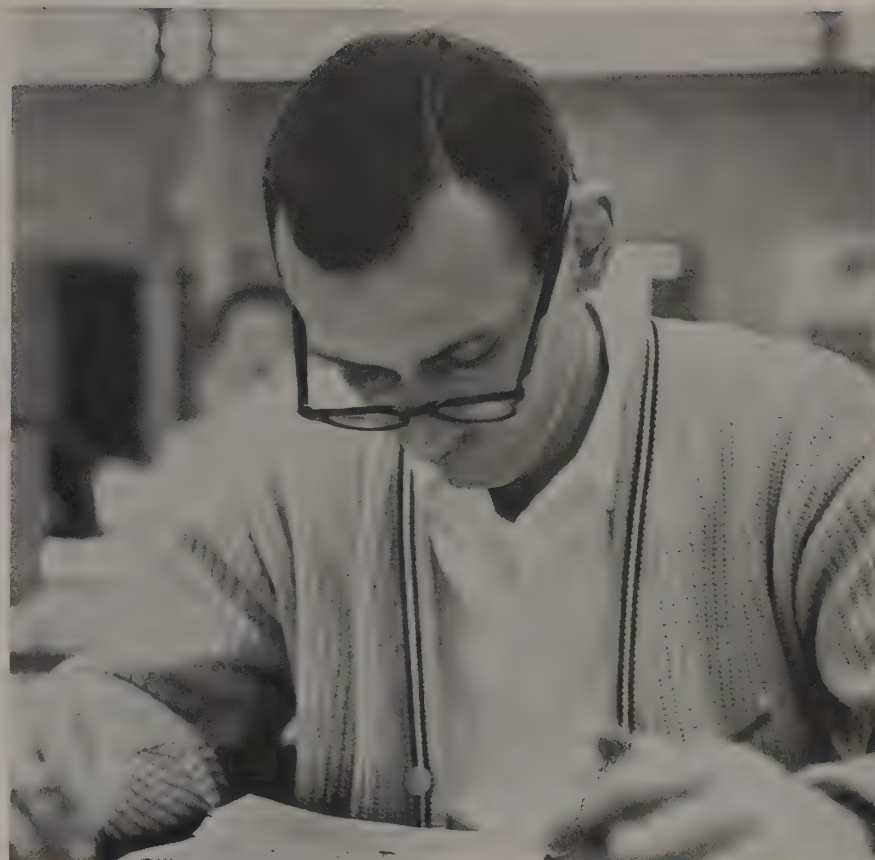

Many persistent reporters, a dozen harried editors, a handful of developer-drenched photographers, and a competent business staff work together to put out The Indiana Daily Student.

Once a day, five days a week, the reporters scan the campus for noteworthy information and return to Ernie Pyle Hall to type it—triple spaced, 60 characters a line—for publication in the next issue of the Student.

After being edited—and occasionally rewritten—the copy is set, proofread, and printed for distribution to the campus and city.

The Indiana Daily Student has been published on the I. U. campus since 1867. Serving as a laboratory for students taking journalism courses, it publishes news of campus and city activities, important events, and personalities. It also publishes an announcement column with official notices and schedules of job interviews and a column of “wire briefs.”

Through this campus newspaper, students, faculty members, and any other interested persons are given the chance to voice their opinions through letters to the editor. Women's interests and sports events are allotted separate pages in the paper.

1960 Arbutus Is Second Straight All-American

"Well, I think that picture flatters him too much."

Tension mounted as the editor opened the envelope with the return address, "National Scholastic Press Association." The contents were to reveal the evaluation of the efforts of the 1960 Arbutus staff. Then there was a celebration; the 1960 book had received an all-American rating for the second consecutive year.

The job at hand was to put out another Arbutus. This meant more foggy pop bottles full of cigarette butts. It meant more stacks of photographs and corrected page proof. It meant more late hours and work, work, work. The cry for a "fourth for bridge," a Broadway hit playing at the Auditorium, and the chance to sit and "shoot the breeze" with a friend were often passed by for "the cause."

Such was the situation from the time school began in September until spring vacation when the Arbutus was "put to bed." The English may have needed blood, sweat, and tears during World War II, but a successful Arbutus staff had to employ a slightly different formula. They needed physical endurance, enthusiasm, and much will power to produce a 516-page, 1-year record of life at I. U.

University Alumni Succeed in Many Fields

A presidential nominee, 112 college and university presidents, Indiana governors, successful writers and prominent businessmen—these and many others constitute one of the most distinguished groups in the world.

These are alumni of Indiana University—men and women who once attended classes in Wylie and Owen Halls and walked along the banks of the Jordan River.

The lessons they learned and the close friendships they formed stayed with them after they left the University and may, in part, be attributed to the successful lives they made for themselves.

Perhaps one of I. U.'s most famous alumni was Wendell L. Willkie, the only alumnus ever to receive the nomination for the presidency of the United States.

William C. Greenough, President of Teachers Insurance and Annuity Assoc.

Mr. Willkie received the A. B. degree from I. U. in 1913 and the LL. B. degree in 1916. He became a trial lawyer and president of the Commonwealth and Southern Corporation, a utilities firm.

In 1940, Mr. Willkie was the Republican candidate for President, opposing Franklin D. Roosevelt. After one of the most famous campaigns in history, Mr. Willkie was defeated. He received an honorary LL. D. degree from I. U. in 1938.

A classmate and close friend of Wendell Willkie's was Paul V. McNutt, who served as Indiana's governor from 1933 to 1936 and was the first U. S. high commissioner to the Philippines.

Mr. McNutt received the A. B. degree in 1913 and the LL. D. degree in 1916. He became an assistant professor of law at I. U. and in 1925 was appointed Dean of the School of Law.

After serving as Governor of Indiana and high commissioner to the Philippines, Mr. McNutt had many other government positions.

He was the administrator of the Federal Security Agency in 1939 and in 1941 became the director of Defense, Health, and Welfare Services. He served as chairman of the War Manpower Commission until the end of World War II and then returned to the Philippines until they were granted independence.

Another I. U. student who also attended school with Willkie and McNutt was Sherman Minton, the only I. U. Hoosier ever to serve on the Supreme Court.

Mr. Minton received his LL. B. degree in 1915. He was a lawyer, a U. S. Senator, and the Judge of the U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals before being appointed to the Supreme Court.

Ernest T. Pyle, Pulitzer Prize winner and war correspondent

A Hoosier and I. U. graduate who is still prominent in Washington, D. C., is Charles A. Halleck, who has served in Congress for 27 years as an Indiana representative.

Mr. Halleck received the A. B. degree in 1922 and the LL. B. degree in 1924. He became a representative in 1934 and was the House Majority Leader for the 80th and 83rd Congresses.

Another Congressman, now retired, is William E. Jenner, former U. S. Senator.

Senator Jenner was graduated from I. U. in 1930 with the A. B. degree and received the LL. B. degree in 1932. He served as a State Senator for four sessions of the General Assembly and was a U. S. Senator from 1944 to 1958.

Two classmates of Senator Jenner have been governors of Indiana. George N. Craig and Harold E. Handley were Indiana's 39th and 40th governors respectively.

Mr. Craig was graduated from I. U. in 1932 with a LL. B. degree. He received an honorary LL. D. degree from the University in 1953.

Mr. Handley received the A. B. degree in 1932 and an honorary LL. D. degree in 1957. He served as Indiana's governor from 1957 to 1961.

Indiana University was also one of the schools of Indiana's 41st governor, Matthew E. Welsh. Mr. Welsh studied law at the University from 1934 to 1936. Before becoming governor he served as the U. S. Attorney for the Southern District of Indiana.

The university career of another I. U. student was interrupted by World War I. Maj. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey has remained in the military service ever since.

Maj. Gen. Hershey has been director of the Selective Service System since July 1941 and has earned many awards for his work in that post. He received an honorary LL. D. degree in 1952.

Two I. U. alumni have been surgeon generals of two different government organizations.

George E. Armstrong is a former Surgeon General of the U. S. Army, serving from 1951 to 1955. He received the A. B. degree in 1922 and the M. D. degree in 1925. In 1952 I. U. presented him an honorary LL. D. degree.

Mr. Armstrong is now the vice-president for medical affairs at New York University and director of the NYU Bellevue Medical Center.

Leroy E. Burney is a retired Surgeon General of the U. S. Public Health Service.

Mr. Burney received the B. S. degree from I. U. in 1928 and the M. D. degree in 1930. He is now president of the World Health Organization.

Many I. U. alumni are prominent business leaders in various fields. Perhaps one of the most well known to college students is L. G. Balfour, manufacturer of school and fraternity jewelry.

Mr. Balfour was graduated from I. U. in 1907 with the LL. B. degree. His company is now one of the largest jewelry manufacturing companies in the U. S.

Wendell L. Willkie, Republican candidate for president in 1940

Mr. Balfour is the donor of the Balfour award presented annually since 1929 to the athlete who brings honor and distinction to I. U.

Several I. U. alumni are prominent in the field of advertising. Edward C. Von Tress has combined his knowledge of advertising with the publishing business and is now the senior vice-president and director of advertising for the Curtis Publishing Co.

Another alumnus has paired his advertising talents with investments. James S. Adams is one of six partners of Lazard Freres & Co., the second oldest investment banking firm in the nation.

Mr. Adams has served as the advertising manager of the Johns Manville Corporation; the general manager of Binton and Bowles, New York advertising agency, and an executive vice-president of the

Hoagy Carmichael, composer of "Stardust" and other popular hits

Colgate-Palmolive Peet Co. before becoming president of Standard Brands.

Mr. Adams is also noted for many philanthropic works. He is one of the five founders of the Seeing-Eye Dog movement and the founder of the Nutrition Foundation. He received an honorary LL. M. degree from the University in 1942.

The chairman and president of the Montgomery Ward Company is also an I. U. graduate. John A. Barr received the LL. B. degree in 1930 and started with Montgomery Ward and Co. in 1933 as an attorney.

Two I. U. alumni are presidents of large insurance companies. By-rum K. Elliott is the president of John Hancock Mutual Life Insurance, the largest financial institution in New England.

William C. Greenough is the president of Teachers' Insurance and Annuity Association. An I. U. graduate of 1935 with the A. B. degree, he is also a trustee of the College Retirement Equities Fund.

Writing talent brought fame to two I. U. alumni. Ernest T. Pyle, better known as Ernie, became one of the world's foremost war correspondents during World War II.

I. U. awarded its first honorary L. H. D. degree to Ernie Pyle in 1944. He was a Scripps-Howard and United Features Syndicate columnist before he became a war correspondent. He was killed on the island of Ie Shima in 1945 while serving as a correspondent.

Mr. Pyle was a Pulitzer Prize

Sherman Minton, U. S. Supreme Court Justice

winner and received a posthumous Medal for Merit.

Writing for a television situation comedy led Madelyn Pugh Martin to fame. The coauthor of the "I Love Lucy" program, Mrs. Martin received the A. B. degree in 1942 and was a journalism major.

Song writing proved to be worthwhile for I. U. alumnus Hoagy Carmichael, author of the perennial ballad, "Star Dust." Mr. Carmichael received the LL. B. degree in 1926. He is also the author of the song "Chimes of Indiana," and many other popular songs.

Cartoonist, columnist, advertising man, humorist, essayist, and critic all rolled into one is Don Herold. Mr. Herold was graduated from I. U. in 1913 with the A. B. degree. He began his cartoon work on The Indiana Daily Student and was the Editor of the 1912 Arbutus.

I. U. is noted for the number of college and university presidents it has produced. To date, there have been 112 heads of institutes of higher learning who have been graduated from the University.

There is a time in every man's education when he arrives at the conviction that envy is ignorance; that imitation is suicide; that he must take himself for better, for worse, as his portion; that though the wide universe is full of good, no kernel of nourishing corn comes to him but through his toil bestowed on that plot of ground which is given him to till.

exquisite beauty

IN A PORCELAIN
FOR PERFECTIONISTS

UNIVAC[®]

L I F E L U C E N T P O R C E L A I N A N T E R I O R S

Do see Univac without delay! For here, is an entirely new and radiant lifeluculent porcelain such as you've never seen before . . . and one which you're certain to welcome enthusiastically.

You'll see an incredible glowing "aliveness"—new "living" colors and color dispersions that you will at once recognize as a tremendous asset to your practice. These new qualities are possible now through the development of advanced techniques. They are processed electronically. The result is an exquisite blending of porcelains to create natural 3-dimensional effects so brilliantly alive in the mouth that it is virtually impossible to distinguish them from vital teeth.

YOU MEET

PRODUCTS

ALMOST EVERYDAY!

Nearly everyday YOU come in contact with a Brlin maintenance product—whether you know it or not.

The stop at the drugstore, the super market, the bank, the office building, the school—even the rest room—a Brlin product protects you and your health . . . and enhances the appearance of the many places you go each day.

There's a reason for the widespread use of Brlin products. That reason is quality, not only of the ingredients, but of product performance.

Brlin manufactures a complete line of cleaners and solvents, floor finishes, deodorants and disinfectants and other products for the cleaning and maintenance of commercial and industrial buildings.

There's a Brlin representative near you.
